MISCELLANY.

HELENA; OR, AFFECTATION.

'Take care, Helena,' said Madame d'Aubigny to her daughter; 'when you are going in one direction you are looking in another: in this way you will never arrive anywhere.'

And this was exactly true. Helena, in the street, while walking, or even while running in the fields, was thinking less of looking before her, or at her feet, than of examining on one side and another the people by whom she thought herself noticed, and of redoubling her airs and graces when she perceived any one looking at her. Often at the Tuileries, entirely occupied in turning her head gracefully casing down her eyes becomingly, or gazing at the leaves with an air of abstraction, according as these various methods seemed to attract most attention, she happened to run against a tree, or a person who was approaching her in an opposite direction. Often in trying to spring over a stem to show her agility, instead of crossing in a more careful manner, she would fall in the midst and be covered with mud. In fine, Helena did nothing simply and for the sake of doing it; she neither walked, ate, nor drank to walk, eat, and drink, but that people might see how gracefully she performed all these actions; and it is very certain that if she could have been seen during her sleeping hours, she would have found means to have disposed herself in an interesting attitude. She did not know how much this study destroyed the effect which she wished to produce. It would, nevertheless, have been very easy to understand that when in doing one thing she thought of another, it was impossible to do it well, and consequently to be noticed with approbation. If, on seeing some one to whom she wished to appear amiable enter the room, she began to converse in an animated manner with her nearest neighbor; if she gave more vivacity to her gestures, more brilliancy to her gaiety, as she was not really amused, but thought only of appearing to be so, her laugh was not that of one who laughs from the heart, her gestures had nothing natural, and her gaiety appeared so forced, that no one could imagine that she was really gay when she had no inducement to appear so. To see her bestow alms on a poor person, you would never have imagined her to be benevolent. Nevertheless, Helena gave also when no one was looking, and gave with all her heart; but if any one had been present to notice her, she would no longer have thought of the poor persons but of the pleasure of being seen to bestow alms. Her piety then assumed an air of exaggeration and eagerness which appeared as if display was the only end she had in view. She gave an expression of sensibility to her eyes; but instead of fixing them on the poor person, she turned them on others present, so that it seemed as if they, and not the poor person, excited her compassion.

Madame d'Aubigny had constantly reproved her daughter for this disposition which she had seen in her from infancy, and had succeeded in correcting the most ridiculous and glaring of her affectations. Helena, on growing older, became also a little more skillful in discovering those which might appear too shocking; but as her pretensions also increased, she only studied a little more to conceal them, without being able to persuade herself that if she possessed them, they would certainly appear. 'My child,' her mother would say, 'there is but one method of insuring praise, it is to deserve it; and as there is nothing commendable in an action which you do for the sake of commendation, it is impossible to praise you for it; so be very sure that to aim at praise and reputation is a sure method of never attaining them.' Helena felt in some degree the truth of what Madame d'Aubigny had said, promised herself to conceal her self-love more effectually, but it returned on every occasion, and besides, where is the young girl who believes all her mother tells her?

In the house with Madame d'Aubigny, lodged one of her relatives, Madame de Villemontier, whom she saw constantly, and whose daughter, Cecilia, was the friend of Helena. Cecilia was so full of kindness and simplicity that she did not even perceive the affectation of Helena, and constantly disputed on the subject with the old Abbe Riviere, formerly preceptor of M. de Villemontier, who, after having educated the brother of Cecilia and accompanied him to college, had returned to establish himself in the house, where he was respected as a father, and where he occupied himself with the education of Cecilia. They never differed excepting with regard to Helena, whose affectation appeared so ridiculous to the Abbe that he never ceased to laugh at it. Accustomed to say whatever he thought, he did not restrain himself in her presence, and had many opportunities to express his mind, because Helena, who had always heard Madame de Villemontier speak of him with great respect, and had seen the pleasure which his return caused, and the deference with which he was treated, felt a strong desire to gain his esteem. This desire was increased by the continual praises which he bestowed upon Cecilia. It was not because she was jealous of her; in spite of her self-love, she was not capable of a mean sentiment; she only thought that she deserved the same praises as Cecilia, and in fact she would have deserved them if she had not been constantly seeking them. But her attempts to make herself noticed by the Abbe Riviere, spoiled every method by which she might have won his esteem; so he tormented her by pleasantries, somewhat malicious, which only increased her desire to obtain his praises, and made her redouble her injudicious and awkward efforts. The Abbe was a learned man: Helena was not foolish enough to display before him the little knowledge which a child may possess; but she did not let a day pass without finding an opportunity to allude to her taste for study. Some one talked of a walk; she said that she did not like to walk without a book; one of her great trials was that her mother would not allow her to read after retiring; and then she would relate that time had flown so rapidly while she was studying, that three hours had passed away without her perceiving it. The Abbe appeared not to notice her; this was one of his tricks; then she would repeat it; 'Yes,' she would continue, as if talking to herself, 'I began at a quarter before one; it was four when I looked at the clock for the first time, that made three hours, which had passed away without my having been aware of it.'

'There was nothing lost,' the Abbe would reply, 'for you were very well aware of it afterwards.'

Helena would then be silenced, but would recommence the next day.

What the Abbe particularly commended in Cecilia was her attention to her mother, whose health was very delicate. It happened that one evening Madame d'Aubigny complained of being ill. Helena, who carried her work every evening to Madame de Villemontier's room, descended this evening only a moment to give an account of her mother's illness, and to have the pleasure of mentioning the anxiety which it had given her. She commenced by expatiating so largely on the fright which she had experienced at seeing her mother pale and almost senseless, that the Abbe could not help saying, 'I perceive clearly all that Mademoiselle Helena has suffered from her mother's accident; but I wish to know what Madame d'Aubigny has suffered.'

The next day Madame d'Aubigny, though still a little sick, insisted that her daughter should as usual go and spend the evening with Madame de Villemontier. She went with an air of languor and fatigue, saying that she was very sleepy, in order that they might divine that she had passed an uncomfortable night. As they did not ask any questions to which she wished to reply, she spoke of the beautiful weather at five o'clock in the morning, saying that her mother had been very restless until two, and after that slept very quietly; from which it was evident that Helena had risen at these different hours to inquire how her mother was. Several times she asked what o'clock it was, saying that although her mother had given permission for her to remain two hours, she must positively return at nine. She asked the time at half past eight and again at a quarter before nine. During this time Cecilia had two or three times raised her eyes to the clock without any body's perceiving it. At nine o'clock she rang the bell; her mother asked why—'You know, mamma,' said Cecilia, 'that you must take your broth at this hour.' Then Helena rose hastily, and folded up her work with precipitation, for fear of being late.

'These are two very careful and punctual young persons,' remarked some one.

'Yes,' muttered the Abbe, looking at Helena with a malicious smile, 'Mademoiselle Cecilia watches over her mother, and Mademoiselle Helena over her own reputation.'

Helena blushed and hastened away, for fear of some new sarcasm; but Madame de Villemontier having requested the Abbe to accompany Helena to inquire about Madame d'Aubigny, he took the candle and followed; she walked so rapidly that he could not overtake her. 'Wait for me,' said he, almost out of breath, 'you will break your neck.'

'I am impatient to know how mamma is'

'How fortunate you are,' said the Abbe, taking her arm, 'to be able, in the midst of your anxiety, to think of so many other things! As for me, it is some one whom I loved much was sick, I should be so much occupied with her sickness, that it would be impossible for me to notice what I was doing for her, still less to point it out to others; but women have such strong heads?'

'Monsieur Abbe,' replied Helena, 'you cannot allow a moment to pass without tormenting me.'

'That is to say, without admiring you. We admire others for the whole of their lives and actions; we love them, we esteem them, because they have conducted well for a long time and on various occasions; but as for Mademoiselle Helena, we must admire her on every occasion; each one of her actions, of her thoughts, of her movements, demands praise.'

And the malicious Abbe, his eyes fixed on Helena, with the candle placed as if he wished to display the sarcastic expression of his countenance, stopped at every step and every word, and only ceased speaking when they arrived. Helena let go of his arm, very well pleased at being rid of him. The jests of the Abbe troubled her; nevertheless she saw beneath them a good will, which prevented her from being offended. On his side, touched with the gentleness with which she received them, and with the desire which she manifested of obtaining his esteem, he was still more desirous of correcting her, because he saw that in spite of her affectation, she was really amiable and intelligent.

Madame d'Aubigny had an old servant who was coarse enough, though he was every day reading books of philosophy and morality. She had permitted him to take home a little nephew to whom he intended to give a good education. All the talents of this man for teaching were limited to beating little Francis when he did not know his history lesson, or catechism, and Francis, whom this method did not inspire with much taste for study, never knew a word of them, and was punished every day. One morning Helena saw him descend the stairs weeping loudly; he had just received his usual correction, and was to receive a second if he had not learned his lesson at the return of his uncle, who had gone out on an errand. Helena advised him to make haste and learn it; the little boy pretended that he could not. 'Come,' said Helena, 'we will learn it together;' and she led him into the parlor, where she began to make him study and repeat with so much earnestness, that the Abbe Riviere, who had just come to see Madame d'Aubigny, entered without being perceived. 'Make haste,' she was saying to Francis, 'that nobody may know I taught it to you.'

'Ah! I have caught you, then, at last,' said the Abbe, 'doing good entirely by yourself.'

Helena blushed with pleasure; it was the first time that he had praised her. But at the same time self-love assumed the place of the good motive that had actuated her; her manners ceased to be natural; and though she continued precisely the same action, it was easy to see that she was not influenced by the same principle.

'Come, come, I will go away,' said the Abbe; 'you will become amiable again when nobody is looking at you.'

In the evening, in Madame de Villemontier's room, Helena had just found means to speak of Francis; the Abbe shook his head; he saw very well what was to follow; and Helena, who never lost sight of him, understood him and stopped; but her disposition returned, and half an hour afterwards she again approached the subject. 'Stop,' said he, touching her elbow, 'I see very well that you wish me to relate it; in fact, that would be better; and he commenced, 'This morning, Francis—' and that in a tone so emphatic and sarcastic, that Helena made every effort to induce him to be silent. 'Let me speak,' said he in a low voice, 'and when there is anything which you wish to have known or noticed, let me know it by a sign.' Helena, abashed, pretended not to hear him, yet she could not help laughing. It may be imagined that Francis was not mentioned again this evening; and from that moment the Abbe took, as he had proposed, the part of a godfather; as soon as she had opened her mouth to insinuate something to her own advantage, he immediately entered upon a pompous eulogium. If in her movements he perceived the inattention of attracting notice, he would say: 'See how gracefully Mademoiselle Helena does everything.'

When she laughed noisily and with effort, 'I beg of you to notice,' he would say to everybody, 'how gay Mademoiselle Helena is today; afterwards he would approach her and say in a low voice, 'Do not I perform my duties well? I will do better another time; he would add; 'but you do not inform me, I can only speak of what I perceive;' and nothing escaped him; but at the same time, he mingled with all this something so comical and yet so kind, that Helena, at once vexed, embarrassed, and amused, insensibly corrected herself, partly from the fear which she felt of the Abbe's remarks, and partly because he presented her affected manners in a light so ridiculous, that she could not help perceiving them.

She has at last succeeded in conquering her affectation entirely, and in seeking pleasures more solid and reasonable than those of being occupied with herself every moment, and attracting attention to her most insignificant actions. She acknowledges that she owes it to the Abbe Riviere, and says that if all young persons disposed to affectation had by their side an Abbe Riviere to teach them the effect produced on the minds of others, they would not long take pains to render themselves ridiculous.

THE CLOUDED NEW YEAR.

'I wish you a happy New Year,' said Mary Anable, with a very sweet smile, adding by way of emphasis, a warm kiss to the pale cheek of her widowed mother. A tear, as she returned the caress of her daughter, was the only reply made by that mother.

Mary soon made arrangements for their morning meal, and when it was over, and the blessing of God had been sought, sat down to her sewing, while her mother, too feeble to labor, laid reclined in her easy chair.

'I wish,' said she, 'that my daughter would lay aside her work, and go out and take the fresh air. The sun shines brightly; and it cannot be very cold.'

'I am very well, mother,' replied Mary. 'It is necessary that this piece of work should be done to-day. Perhaps I shall finish it in time to take a short walk before nightfall.'

'Will any one call here to-day?'

'I think not. The ladies of the village are adopting the practice of remaining at home, and receiving calls; and gentlemen will not be likely to find their way here.'

'It is not always so.'

'It is no matter.'

This last remark of Mary was made with a smile so sweet that even the wan lips of her mother could not refuse to respond to it.

Mary plied her needle, while her mother closed her eyes and thought of the past. A few years before, and her husband was living, and they were possessed of all that was necessary to their comfort. A tasteful dwelling, and a fertile farm, affection, health, contentment, the means and disposition to relieve the suffering, were theirs. Death came and took the husband and father to his rest.

Then came the legal spoiler. A stranger laid claim to the homestead; the ministers of the law decided in his favor. The widow and daughter were constrained to take up their abode in a humble dwelling and to supply their wants by the labor of their hands. Previous to her father's death, Mary had enjoyed the best advantages for the prosecution of study, which was her delight; but when the calamity came, she laid aside her books without a murmur, and engaged in daily and almost incessant toil.

Mrs. A. soon became unconscious of the sorrow which a review of the sad past awakened. She fell into a gentle slumber. Mary paused from her work, for a moment, and gazed upon the pale face of the sleeper, once so fresh with health, so radiant with affection. A tear dimmed her eye, as she marked the change which had passed upon her, and thought of the greater change which so soon awaited her. To what would her heart cling, when that wasted form should be laid at rest in the narrow house? Her labors and anxieties might be less, but what are they to the loneliness of heart?

Mrs. A. awoke. Her eyes met those of her daughter, who was slightly embarrassed as she resumed her work.

'My poor Mary, what will you do when I am gone? I know I am but a burden to you, but—'

'Mother, I entreat you not to speak again of being a burden. I had rather you would charge me with being ungrateful.'

'I know that your heart never regards anything as a hardship which it does for those you love. My dear, I shall, I trust, soon be with your father; you will be left to pursue your pilgrimage alone.'

Again she closed her eyes, and was silent, while a few tears coursed down her hollow cheeks.

'I need a stronger faith,' said she. I have tried to commit you to the Lord, and to feel sure that you will be provided for. It must be that our present trials shall work together for good, but I need faith.'

Mary laid aside her work, and kneeling beside her mother's chair, offered a prayer for faith—a prayer which breathed confidence into the mother's heart.

The morning wore away. Numbers were seen passing who had been accustomed to visit them in other days. No knock was heard at that humble door—no voice wished the widow and her daughter a happy new year.

Darkness at length came, and with it a furious storm. The mother early retired to her couch. 'Mary, dear, do not sit up late to-night.'

'I am not sleepy, mother: I will retire as soon as I am sleepy.'

Will the thoughts and fears that are thronging her mind, permit her soon to be sleepy? The needle is ever moving save when for a moment, her long delicate fingers were pressed upon the eye as if to restrain the tear which claimed leave to flow. The village clock struck twelve. She laid aside her work, and seated herself before the decaying embers. Now she gazes steadily upon them, and now she presses her eyes with her hand. Poor lone one! The only heart which beats for thee, will soon be stilled for ever. Thou hast no brother to lean upon: no sister to share thy sorrows. Now her eyes are closed, and she is smiling. Weariness has overtaken her, and she sleeps. She is a child again. She is running to meet her father, who is returning from the field at the close of day. They sit with the happy mother at the table, where the voices of affection make sweetest music.

The scene changes. She is busy at her studies. She receives the adieu of one who had been her assistant and guide, who is taking his departure for a foreign land. He lingers at the door, and utters a few words which produce a strange fluttering at her heart. She stands and watches his receding form, as he walks down the avenue of elms. The vision was ended by the faint call of her mother, 'Mary, I am faint; raise me.' Mary did so, and applied water to her parched lips. 'I have a strange feeling here,' said Mrs. A. laying her hand upon her heart. Mary could not speak. She perceived that death was near. 'I will lie down again,' whispered the sufferer, but the attempt increased the oppressive feeling. 'My dear, I am dying,' said she. Her head fell back, and she ceased to breathe. Mary felt her pulse. It had ceased its play. She laid her hand upon the heart—it was stilled.

Amid the howling of the storm, the lone orphan watched with the dead, shedding no tear, stunned, overwhelmed, but conscious.

The morning at length came. A pauper was seen from the window. She was called in, and she and Mary laid out the dead.

Again Mary was left alone, and tears came to her relief.

When the news of Mrs. Anable's decease, and the sad circumstances connected with it, were spread through the village, various emotions of pity, self-reproach, and indignation were awakened. Some hastened to tender cordial sympathy and assistance to the orphan mourner. Some wondered they had not heard of the sickness of the deceased, and attempted to excuse themselves by blaming Mary for not calling for their aid. Some few, who in other days, had shared largely in the bounty of the departed one, who were too poor to render any return, and who deemed it presumption to offer their personal services, were bitter in their denunciations of those who had looked up to the Anables when in wealth, and neglected them in their hour of need.

'We see,' said one of another class, 'about how much religion is worth: there was Annable, who was really an honest man, lived up to his profession. He kept giving away his property, leading it to the Lord, as he said, and we see what has come of it. His daughter has had to slave for a living, and his wife died with none to watch her.'

'If it had been known they were in want,' said his neighbor, 'we shouldn't have let them suffer.'

'I guess it was pretty well known,' said the scorner, or would have been, if the brethren had not been afraid of being called upon to render assistance.'

The preparations for the funeral were made. There were no relatives to be sent for. All were many miles distant. The prayer was offered, the word of exhortation spoken, and the procession formed. Mary was the sole mourner. Could she follow that coffin alone? Oh! for one to walk with her—for one arm to lean upon! Never did she so thoroughly feel that she was alone in the world, as when the coffin was borne from the house and she began to follow it alone to the grave. She had not proceeded far with tottering steps, when a carriage was seen coming rapidly after the procession. There was something in this, which jarred on the feelings of the more refined, and they dreaded its effect on Mary, should that carriage thus pass them. There was no need, however, of effort on their part to prevent it. It drew up as it approached the procession, and a gentleman alighted. He went to the side of Mary, and simply pronounced her name. She took his arm, and they walked together to the grave.

Who was the stranger? It was he with whom her thoughts were busy, when the faint voice of her dying mother disturbed her vision. Francis Newton had long been absent, but he had not forgotten one to whom he had given his young affections, though it was a secret unsuspected even by her. He had just landed, and having greeted his mother, and his own dear sisters, was hastening to the dwelling place of one who was dearer to him still. As he approached the village, he heard of the trials which had befallen her, and of the sad event which was that day to take place. He hastened onward, and was just in time to go with her to the grave. Thence they returned to the desolate dwelling. For a season there was weeping there, and communion of heart without words. 'Mary,' said he at length, 'you must return with me to my home. My sisters will receive you as a sister—I will not leave you here alone.'

Perhaps conventional propriety was violated but the orphan was soon experiencing the affection and sympathy of Mrs. Newton and her daughters, and in due time, became the wife of Francis.

'Well,' said the scorner, 'it has turned out better than I expected, after all.' One who was now a scorner said, 'I have been young, but now am old, yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread.'

'STOP MY PAPER!' Some men are like cats. You may stroke the fur the right way for years—talk and write to please them, and hear nothing but purring—but accidentally tread on a tail—say something that accidentally comes in contact with their faith, prejudice or interests, and what scratching and clawing there will be—Exchange paper.

TREATMENT OF THE CHOLERA.

Dr. Whiting's report to the New York Board of Health, states that Calomel in moderate doses, with morphine, at short intervals, has proved the best and most reliable cure. Every case in which the slightest bilious evacuation has been procured, has commenced to recover from that moment. It is also a remarkable fact that worms have been discharged either by vomiting or the bowels, in a large majority of cases. One third of the whole number of patients at Quarantine have been children under fourteen years of age. We quote the Doctor's mode of treatment:

The treatment I have now adopted and adhere to, from its decided agency in controlling the symptoms, and inducing early reaction, is the exhibition of moderate doses of calomel, with morphine, at short intervals. Five grains of calomel, with a quarter of a grain of sulphomorphia, is at first given to an adult; in a half of an hour, or one hour, a scruple dose of calomel is exhibited, and is usually retained; afterwards a pill of Cal. grs. V, Sulph. Morphine grs. 1-4, is given each hour, two hours or three hours, as the effect may indicate. This is observed in the subsidence of the pain and spasms, the diminished quantity and frequency of the evacuations, the return of warmth, and the restoration of the pulse.

This treatment is continued until some indications of bilious action appear; the first is usually a change of color and consistence from the light thin rice water, to a greenish, and then brownish yellow color. The evacuations from the stomach and bowels will frequently continue green, or of the color of sulphate of copper, for hours, but I have not known a single case to relapse where this effect had once been produced.

I was led to substitute the morphine for opium from its being less liable to disturb the stomach or to produce narcosis, an effect to be deprecated in this stage of congestion, except it results naturally from the obtundation of pain and excitement.

In children, however, under six or seven years, I have used Dover's powder in preference to morphine as being more manageable in regard to the dose. A very simple remedy, but one that I have used in children with happy effects, has been the tea of the spearmint given hot in the first stages, and afterwards cold, in a small quantity, a large spoonful occasionally.

The most valuable external means is the steam of hot vapor of alcohol, poured over the patient by a very simple apparatus at the foot of the bed. This is a large alcohol lamp placed under a sheet iron cylinder, with a pipe running from it. The lamp is placed on the floor, and the tubes with an elbow, and terminating in a large funnel to elevate the clothes, is inserted under the bed clothes. This and hot mustard applications are the only external means that I rely on. They are potent, and can be continued without the fatigue and exposure of the patient, a paramount desideratum, as there is plenty of both to contend with as inevitable effects of the disease.

THE PRESIDENT ELECT. The following description of the personal appearance of Maj. Gen. Taylor is from the graphic pen of J. H. Warland, who saw him at one of the hotels in New Orleans, about a month since.

The President elect is a little above the middle stature, with a compact frame, and rather stout build. He has just completed his fifty-eighth year, and though his hair is beginning to be little silvery in hue, he has none of the marks of age upon him. His ruddy countenance and almost wonderful activity bespeak him in the enjoyment of the most perfect health. As he sits in the rotunda of the hotel, chatting with all his appearance is that of a downright honest man of sound sense and great frankness, good humor and urbanity in his character. You would hardly take him to be one of the few "whose names were borne not to die." He has not the commanding figure of Scott, nor the ferocious dignity of Tigris nor yet the aristocratic bearing of that Orson of warriors, Harney. Neither is that stamp of intellectuality upon his brow which mark Webster, Clay or Calhoun, among a thousand. But he has a high and lofty brow—that amplitude of forehead which proclaims the intellect within. The characteristic expression of his countenance—that which lights it up in conversation and makes you loth to take your eyes from it—is benevolence. The sunlight of his heart beam right through it and warms you at once towards him. But such an eye as Gen. Taylor has, I have rarely, if ever, seen in a human being. Each particular wink of it seems to fall upon you like a small flash of lightning; and did not the smile upon his face forbid the idea, you would expect a small clap of thunder to follow it immediately. Knowing him to be, as we do, a master in what the poet calls—

"The art Napoleon, the mystery of commanding," I can easily imagine how the fires of that eye must kindle and flash amid the of artillery on the battle-field.

VIRGINIA GRIDDLE CAKES. A quart of Indian meal.

Two large table-spoonful of wheat flour. A heaped salt spoon of salt. Two ounces of fresh butter. Four eggs.

A pint, or more, of milk. Sift the Indian meal into a large pan; mix with it the wheat flour, and add the salt. Warm the milk in a saucepan, but do not let it boil. When it begins to simmer, take it off, and put the butter into it, stirring it until well mixed. Then stir in the meal, a little at a time, and let it cool while you are beating the eggs. As soon as they are beaten very light, add them gradually to the mixture, stirring the whole very hard. It must be a light batter, and may require more milk.

A GREAT STATE. Old Massachusetts has ever taken the lead in what is great, good, useful and profitable. She established the first school in the United States, the first academy, and the first college. She set up the first press, printed the first book, and the first newspaper. She planted the first apple tree, and caught the first whale. She coined the first money, and hoisted the first national flag. She made the first canal and the first railroad. She invented the first mousetrap and washing machine, and sent the first ship to discover islands and continents in the South sea. She produced the first philosopher, and made the first pin. She fired the first gun in the Revolution, and gave 'John Bull' his first beating, and put her hand first to the Declaration of Independence. She invented 'Yankee Doodle,' and gave a name forever to the 'Universal Yankee Nation.' Truly a great State.—Memphis Herald.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, JAN. 6, 1849.

John A. Green, Editor.

We cordially offer to all our friends the warmest congratulations of the season. For the support extended to us in past years we feel grateful, and hope for a continuance of the like kindness during the year before us. With an ardent desire to serve our patrons, we shall labor with more zeal than heretofore to render the Patriot worthy of their continued support as well as an increase of patronage from a confiding public. With renewed hopes and better resolutions let us all commence and continue the journey of life the present year.

FOREIGN NEWS.

The steamship Europa from England arrived at New York on the 31st ult. By this arrival we get the following information.

The markets in Britain and France are still improving. Breadstuffs have largely improved. Ireland. The newspapers are filled with heart-rending accounts of death by starvation, extensive evictions of tenantry, and violent outrages in all their disgusting variety.

France. The election for the first President has terminated without the slightest disturbance. Prince Napoleon Louis Bonaparte is the successful candidate, polling, it is estimated, four million out of six million votes. He was born in Paris, April 20th, 1808, and is now therefore in the forty first year of his age. He is the third son of Louis Bonaparte, (a younger brother of the Emperor Napoleon) and of Hortense de Beauharnois.

Italy. Pope Pius IX left the Quirinal Palace on the evening of the 24th of November, disguised as a servant of Count Spohr, the Bavarian Envoy, who planned his flight, and mounted upon his carriage. He reached Genoa on the 25th, where he was received by the King of Naples in person. After suitable preparations the Pope went to Naples, where he remains as a guest of the King. A deputation has been sent by the Chambers and the Municipality to invite the Pope to return to Rome.

Austria. The abdication of the Emperor of Austria will be heard with satisfaction. He transfers all his rights and honors to his nephew. The military executions for political offences still continue.

In India the revolt against British power has become alarming. Vast Indian armies are forming to assault, and if possible exterminate English power.

The Russian authorities have provoked English ire by the arrest and imprisonment of an English subject.

GREAT ROBBERY. A daring and successful robbery was committed in Augusta, (Me.) sometime between Saturday night and Monday morning of last week, by which the Augusta Bank was robbed of about twenty-five thousand dollars. The money taken was $21,562 in specie, and a package of foreign bills about $4000, besides a package of foreign bills, amount not known, belonging to another bank.

The plundered property was confined in a safe of most approved construction, secured by Hull's celebrated patent gunpowder lock. It was opened by a key which must have been prepared before the safe was put into the vault. When the plunder had been removed, the safe was coolly locked again. In the hurry of leaving the building, a box containing some five hundred dollars in specie was dropped outside, besides some fifty dollars in scattered pieces.

A reward of one thousand dollars is offered for the apprehension of the thief or thieves, and recovery of the money.

SEVENTY-TWO PERSONS SUFFOCATED. English papers give an account of a terrible loss of life, which occurred on board of a steamer which left Sligo, (Ireland) for Liverpool on the first of last December, having on board one hundred and fifty emigrant passengers, most of whom intended taking passage for America. A violent gale arose during the trip, and in order to ensure the safety of the boat, the decks were cleared and all the one hundred and fifty poor emigrants crowded into the fore-cabin, and the companion way fastened down tight. The consequence was, that though the vessel outrode the gale, the next morning, when the hatches were opened, seventy-two, were found in the embrace of death, having been suffocated.

PASSENGER EXPRESS. Gay & Co's enterprise is deserving of support, and a great accommodation to all residing at Braintree Neck and Quincy Point. Read their advertisement.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

BOSTON AFFAIRS. Hon. John P. Bigelow has entered upon the discharge of his duty as Mayor of Boston. In his inaugural address, he interestingly alludes to many topics, and at variance somewhat with his predecessor's views. He estimates that Boston and its environs, within a radius of five miles, contain at least 210,000 inhabitants; the city proper having about 130,000. He objects to the extraordinary cost of erecting some of the new school houses. He recommends that the construction of the new jail should be suspended, till it is found that the estimate of cost ($150,000) is correct. He suggests a reduction of the Fire Department; made feasible by the introduction of the Cochituate water. He recommends that the public lands should be judiciously disposed of to defray the public debt. He promises to look into matters connected with the police of the city. In the matter of licenses for the sale of spirits, he thinks the restrictive experiment has had a fair trial, but has not been successful in suppressing the objectionable traffic.

Benjamin Seaver was re-elected President of the Council; and Samuel F. McCleary was chosen City Clerk for the twenty-seventh time, having held the office since the adoption of the City Charter in 1822.

SOUTH SHORE RAILROAD. This railroad communication is eleven miles in length, from its junction with the Old Colony, at North Braintree, and cost about two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. It was opened, it is believed, to the Stockholders and invited guests on Monday last, and to the travelling public the following day. It is reported, that as the first train passed through Weymouth, Hingham, and on its arrival at Cohasset, the end of the road, guns were fired, bells were rung, and a general welcome arose from the assembled crowd. It is said, a bountiful collation was provided at Cohasset—that toasts were drunk, and that speeches were made by great men. The Hingham citizens also well entertained this selected party on their return. This road is supposed to have been nearly a year under construction; and a ride over it is reported to be a good remedy for all afflicted with gout, rheumatism, and general debility of the system.

GENERAL COURT. The "assembled wisdom" of this ancient Commonwealth met in council last Wednesday, at the State House, Boston.

The Senate was organized by the choice of Hon. Joseph Bell of Suffolk, as President. Charles Calhoun was re-elected Clerk. Seventeen Senators were in attendance.

The House chose as its Speaker, Francis B. Crowninshield of Boston, on the first ballot. Charles W. Story was then re-elected Clerk.

The urbane and indefatigable Benjamin Stevens, for many years Sergeant at Arms, has been unanimously re-elected to that office by both branches.

Rev. Rollins H. Neale, Baptist, has been elected Chaplain of the House.

The annual election sermon by Rev. Dr. Peirce of Brookline, who is more than four score years of age, is said to have been an effort in every respect appropriate for the occasion. It is to be printed.

INSTALLATION. The Rev. Caleb Stetson, formerly of Medford, has been installed Pastor over the Unitarian Society at South Scituate. Introductory prayer, by Rev. Mr. Nute of Scituate. Sermon, by Rev. Mr. Briggs of Plymouth. Prayer of Installation, by Rev. Mr. Lunt, of Quincy. Right Hand of Fellowship, by Rev. Samuel J. May, of Syracuse, (N. Y.) Address to the Society, by Rev. Oliver Stearns, of Hingham. Concluding Prayer, by Rev. Wm. O. Moseley of Boston. Benediction, by the Pastor.

NEW YORK TRIBUNE. A weekly copy of this daily paper has been sent us. One of its editors, the Hon. Horace Greeley, is a member of the present Congress. This name alone ensures that it is conducted with spirit, interest and ability. Persons in want of a New York political newspaper, and moreover it contains all the other intelligence, should subscribe for the Tribune, and at the present time.

NEW YEAR'S ADDRESS. The carriers' annual address of the New York Sun has been received. Both in matter and artistic ornament, it is without a rival. The enterprising publishers of the Sun do not intend to be beat in anything of honorable competition.

THE HINGHAM PAPER. The Patriot, formerly the Gazette, which has been published for many years, has been discontinued on account of the ill health of the editor and lack of patronage. Its projector, Jedediah Farmer, still continues the job business. The Gazette was a welcome visitor to our sanctuary in other parts of the country, and the Patriot has also been cordially greeted in our present location. We hope that all concerned in the paper may yet reap a harvest for their hard labors to keep it alive.

INTERNATIONAL POSTAL ARRANGEMENT. The following is said to be an outline of the provisions of the new postal treaty between the United States and the British government.

The ship letter postage is fixed at sixteen cents for half an ounce. The postage on newspapers to destination at two cents each way. An island postage of five cents to be paid on each letter. Letters may be prepaid or not, just as the sender pleases. Letters from America for France, and other parts of the continent of Europe are to pass through England free, under the American seal, and in care of a mail agent. Letters and papers from England to Canada, to pass free, in like manner, through the United States.

MEMBERS OF CONGRESS. The election to fill vacancies in the Congressional delegation from this State has resulted in the choice of Daniel P. King of Danvers, and Orin Fowler of Fall River, (whigs) and Charles Allen of Worcester (free soil) Hon. John G. Palfrey of Cambridge, (free soil) lacks less than a hundred votes of an election.

BOSTON TRANSCRIPT. This spirited daily has been much enlarged and with new type makes a beautiful appearance. Mr. Sergeant, its editor, is uniting in his labors to fill its columns with reading matter of value and interest, and with his good taste and acknowledged ability, happily succeeds.

THE BOSTON PILOT. This paper has been enlarged, is printed on new type, the heading beautiful and appropriate, and otherwise greatly improved. A prize tale, illustrative of Irish character, written by Mrs. Anna H. Dorsey of Baltimore, favorably known as an authoress of distinguished merit, is commenced in the New Year's number. P. Donahoe, Esq. the editor is well deserving of the success he receives, as he leaves nothing undone to enhance the value, interest and appearance of his paper. His energy is worthy of imitation, and certain to crown with rich success any enterprise. The Pilot is indeed the model American-Irish paper of this country.

THE FLAG OF OUR UNION. We were about to write a notice of this paper when we found the annexed paragraph in the Boston Transcript, which is better than anything we could say.

F. Glendon has struck a popular vein with his beautiful weekly. It comes from the press like a copper-plate print, and looks superbly, presenting also an array of talent and a literary taste that has never been equaled by the newspaper press. Though the FLAG is worked by steam and on two of the largest and fastest presses that Adams has ever manufactured, both sides of the paper printing at the same time, and the paper working night and day, yet the rush for the paper has been so great and unprecedented, that it has been found impossible to satisfy the demand. We like to see enterprise rewarded, and liberally successful, and the FLAG is the star of all the weeklies.

EVERY MAN HIS OWN PATENT AGENT. Munn & Co., publishers of the "Scientific American," have favored us with a Pamphlet containing the Patent Laws of the United States, together with all the forms necessary for applying for a Patent, information in regard to filing caveats, with remarks on its uses, etc., amount of fee required at the Patent Office, and every other information that is necessary to instruct a person in making his own applications.

Price 12-1-2 cents single, or twelve copies for one dollar—sent by mail to any part of the United States.

Address Munn & Co., New York.

CONGRESSIONAL KINGS. The next Congress will contain no less than six republican Kings, viz:—James G. King of N. w Jersey, Preston King, and John A. King of New York, T. Butler King of Georgia, William R. King of Alabama, and Daniel P. King of this State.

SCITUATE. Applications will be made to the next Legislature to divide the town of Scituate. The town have appointed Solomon Lincoln of Hingham, Moses F. Rogers of Marshfield, and Martin Lincoln of Cohasset, to define the line. The North part to be called Scituate, and the South part South Scituate.

OLD COLONY RAILROAD. New arrangements have been made as to the running of the cars. See the advertisement in another column.

A great oversight not to run a train from Cohasset or Braintree to Boston between twelve, noon, and nearly five o'clock in the afternoon.

CONGRESS. Neither branch of Congress has been in session for several days, having adjourned to enjoy the new year's holidays. This will account for no Congressional intelligence in to-day's paper.

A plank road is being constructed from Camillus to Marcellus, (N. Y.) at a cost of $1,500 per mile. Plank three inches thick are used, and the road is graded eight feet each side of the planking.

The total vote for President at the late election was 2,261,928, of which Taylor received 1,356,097, Cass, 369,225, Van Buren 291,467, and there were 5,139 scattering votes. In 1844 the total vote was 2,678,277, of which Polk received 1,327,381, Clay 1,228,633, and Birney 62,263. Increase of the vote in 1848, 183,651.

It is stated that Mrs. Mayo, (late Miss Sarah C. Edgerton), is deceased, and that Mrs. C. M. Sawyer has been appointed editor of the Rose of Sharon in her place.

Peter C. Brooks, Esq., long reputed to be the wealthiest man in New England, died on Monday last at his residence in Medford. He was about eighty-four years of age, and had been for some time in a failing condition.

The Hingham Congregational Meeting-house was dedicated on Thursday last. Rev. E. Porter Dyer has accepted a call from the church and society for whose use the house has been erected, and was installed the same afternoon.

The Council of the Massachusetts Temperance Society, and other friends of Temperance, waited on ex-Mayor Quincy, Jr., last Monday evening, and presented him with a beautiful silver pitcher and salver, as a testimonial of their respect for his course in regard to the temperance question during his Mayoralty. The plate was massive and valuable, having cost upwards of five hundred dollars.

The Bristol (Mass.) Court of Common Pleas, has sentenced an incendiary, for setting fire to a barn in the night time, to State Prison for life.

According to the Roxbury city directory for 1849, there are five hundred and eighteen persons residing in Roxbury, whose place of business are in Boston.

Some California adventurers have taken out with them a complete smelting and coin-stamping apparatus. They will fabricate pieces of gold equal in size and value to five dollars and mark them with their own names.

The Keeper of a grog establishment in Georgia has made known by advertisement, that he will in future not sell any spirituous liquors to temperance men, unless they should bring a written permission from their wives!

J. B. French, Esq., democrat, has been elected Mayor of Lowell by a majority of ten votes.

Joseph Jewell of Boston, who has been in jail nearly a year for an alleged offence against a young girl, has been liberated and the charge withdrawn by the County Attorney.

The Committee on Ways and Means in the United States House of Representatives, are instructed to consider the propriety of reporting a bill for reducing the size of the one cent coin, and to authorize the coinage of a three cent piece, both to be composed of copper and some other precious metals.

At the late annual meeting of the proprietors of the Boston Athenaeum, a statement of the condition of the library of that institution was made by the Trustees. Among other donations made the past year were a valuable collection of pamphlets, six thousand in number, belonging to the late John Quincy Adams, which were presented by the Hon. Charles Francis Adams.

A medicine well worthy the attention of the physicians and public—Compound Sarsaparilla and Tonic Bitters. This is a very strong preparation of the extract of Sarsaparilla and Tonic. These articles are too well known to need any thing said in praise of them; suffice it to say, this compound is said, by those who have given it a trial, to be far superior and more effectual than the Sarsaparilla alone. In fact, we know of a number of cases where it has effected most astonishing cures in purifying the blood, where Sarsaparilla and other medicines have been taken without the least effect. Reader, look to it; we know from experience it is well worthy your attention; it operates as a gentle laxative, and is a very pleasant article; therefore it is early taken.

Procrastination is the thief of time.

Delay is dangerous—neglect that cold and cough a few weeks, and the hope of recovery will be lost to you forever. Let not any pecuniary consideration deter you from trying to save your life and health while there is a chance. Consumption is annually sweeping off thousands to the tomb; no physician has baffled the skill of physicians like it; no disease, perhaps, has ever done more for this large class of suffering humanity, than Dr. Wistar. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure; therefore, before your lungs become ulcerated, and so diseased that no human means can save you from an early grave, try in season, try at once, a medicine which has been of such infinite value to thousands—obtain a bottle of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, take it, get another if necessary, persevere in using it until you have removed the disease entirely, which if neglected will terminate your life. Be not deceived by quacks, with their imitations and counterfeits; buy none but the genuine and original, which is signed I. BUTTS on the wrapper.

HARRISON'S PERISTALTICS have had 12 years' trial by the Medical Faculty and the public generally. This medicine is in Lozenges, pleasant to the taste, and may be given to children. The Peristaltics are gently laxative, and by their tonic qualities improve the digestive organs and invigorate the whole system. They cure Costiveness, Headache, Dizziness, Sleeplessness, Indigestion, Oppression, flatulency, Liver Complaint, Diarrhoea, Piles, Dropsy, Debility, Faintness, Weak Stomach, Heartburn, Palpitation, Rheumatism, Pains in the Bones, Scrofula, the Double-plex, Worms, etc.

These Lozenges are excellent in all Nervous complaints and Dyspeptic symptoms. Female Suppressions and Irregularities, especially in the young. This medicine contains no preparation of Mercury whatever, and no ingredient which may not safely be given to the most delicate female and under any circumstances.

This preparation is also put up in bottles for seafaring persons, who should always have a supply. An occasional use of the Peristaltics prevents Fevers, Bilious complaints, and chronic or East India Diarrhoea. They are admirably adapted to the complaints incident to the coast of Africa, Sumatra, West Indies and South America.

These Lozenges are recommended by some of the best Physicians in Boston, who use them in their families and general practice. All afflicted with oppression after eating, or rising of food will find great relief. They are the best medicine for children known.

For sale in Quincy by Mrs. E. HAYDEN. Sole W. Fowle, 128 Washington street, Boston. General Agent.

THERE'S ROOM ENOUGH FOR ALL.

What need of all this fuss and strife,
Each waiting with his brother?
Why should we, in the crowd of life,
Keep tramping down each other?
Is there no goal that can be won,
Without a squeeze to gain it?
No other way of getting on,
But scrambling to obtain it?
Oh, fellow-men, hear Wisdom, then,
In friendly warning call—
"Your claims divide, the world is wide—There's room enough for all."

What if the swarthy peasant find
No field for honest labor;
He need not idly stop behind,
To thrust aside his neighbor,
There is a land with sunny skies,
Which gold for toil is given,
Where every brawny hand that tries
Its strength, can grasp a living.
Oh, fellow-men, remember then,
What ever chance befall,
The world is wide—where those abide,
There's room enough for all.

From poisoned air ye breathe in courts,
And typhus tainted alleys,
Go forth and dwell where health resorts,
In fertile hills and valleys;
Where every arm that cleaves a bough
Finds plenty in attendance,
Up, leave your toilsome cities, now,
And toil for independence.
Oh, listen, then, from fevered den,
And lodging cramped and small;
The world is wide—in land beside,
There's room enough for all.

In this fair region far away,
Will labor find employment—
A fair day's work, a fair day's pay,
And toil will earn enjoyment.
What need, then, of this daily strife,
Where each wars with his brother?
Why need we, through the crowd of life,
Keep tramping down each other?
From rage and crime, that distant come
Will free the pauper's thrall;
Take fortune's tide—the world so wide
Has room enough for all.

THE COQUETTE.

Look! what a lovely being there!
Observe her form, her gait, her air;
Say, is she not most wondrous fair?
Ah! woe is mine!
A classic scholar might suppose
Another Venus just arose
From Tenedos sea.

Her hands and feet—how small the size!
How very killing dark her eyes,
Where Cupid, sly in ambush lies,
With bow and arrow,
And, aiming at surrounding beaux,
Inflicts excruciating woes,
From skin to marrow!

She sings—her tones surpass the lute,
She stops—how eloquently mute!
Her lips—what luscious, tempting fruit,
Whence odors rise!
With what inimitable face
She smiles and frowns with equal grace,
Or, languid, sighs!

To aid her native loveliness,
How fashionably fine a dress,
Exposing just enough to guess
Of beauties hid!
And think you I could link my fate
With such an extra charming mate?
Good Lord! forbid.

And why? what more could you desire,
The warmest passion to inspire?
Will he not do (her wealthy sire),
A generous part?
Yes, but through yourself and me,
She lacks one master-witchery,
SHE HAS NO HEART.

ANECDOTES.

A handsome young Yankee pedlar made love to a boxom widow in Pennsylvania. He accompanied his declaration with two impudent to their union
"Name them," said the widow
"The want of means to set up a retail store."

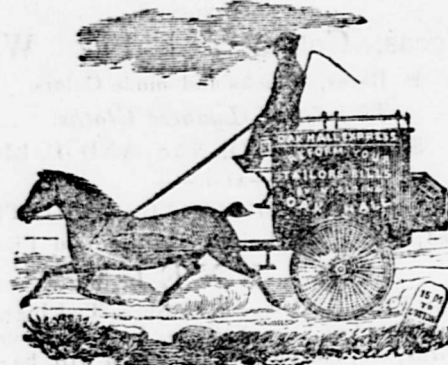

They parted, and she sent the pedlar a check for ample means. When they met again the pedlar had bined and stocked his store, and the smiling fair one begged to know the other impostor.
"I have another wife," said the notion dealer.

"Father," said an urchin, the other day, of seven summers and eight winters, "let's go down to Joe Thompson's and roll ten pins!"
"Roll, boy? what do you know about rolling?"
"Me know about it? Why I can roll your thundering old eyes out in five minutes!"

"Georgiana, do you know that young fellow in the opposite house?"
"No, ma, I never spoke to him in my life, he is merely a finger acquaintance, that's all."
"A what—a finger acquaintance? Why, what sort of an acquaintance is that?"
"Oh, we only talk to each other across the street with our fingers—nothing more."

"Have you not mistaken the pew, sir?" blantly said a Sunday Churchward to a stranger, as he entered it.
"I beg pardon," replied the intruder, rising to go out, "I fear I have—I took it for a Christian's."

A sleepy deacon, who sometimes engaged in popular amusements, hearing the minister use the words,
"shuffe off this mortal coil," started up, and rubbed his eyes, exclaiming: "Hold on squire, it's my deal!"

There's no mistake about it.

What a'er our state in life may be,
Of very high or low degree,
That to progress we must possess
A good appearance in our dress,
There's no mistake about it.
A good appearance clears the way
Where higher talents meet delay,
And struggling on without it;
A good appearance will obtain
What years of toil would scarcely gain,
There's no mistake about it.
Then 'tis important to those Who would obtain good Genieel Clothes,
To think at once about it;
And if they would the nearest choose,
Go straight to RUSSELL's—no time loose,
There's no mistake about it.
RUSSELL's Garments are superbly made,
The best and cheapest in the trade,
A fact, and none will doubt it;
Clothes at RUSSELL's are secured
At half the price elsewhere procured,
And no mistake about it.

MISCELLANY.

FANNY DAY'S DECISION.

Like her! exclaimed a young man, with no inconsiderable degree of ardor.

But can you support her in style to which she has been accustomed? It costs something to get married now a days. We have to begin where our father's ended, said his companion.

True, Ned, if she would only begin with me
—why, she's poor herself.

Yes, and proud too. The fact is, women require so much waiting upon, or fashion requires it—so many servants, just such a style of living —that, for my part, I have given up all thoughts of marrying. Ned said this with some bitterness, as if he had good reason for feeling it.

My business is good, pursued the other, interest upon his own affairs, and uncle thinks my prospects pretty fair, it live prudently. It costs a round sum at the hotel—I might support a snug little establishment at the same expense.

Yes, if snug little establishments were in fashion, Charley.

She is amiable and intelligent; she must be economical, because she has always been obligated to be, declared Charley, abruptly stopping as if a new thought had struck him.

Perhaps so—but shall you both be independent enough to begin in a small way—in short, to live within your means—for if you expect to get along in the world, you must live within your means.

Well, it's a pity, said Charley, somewhat dampened by the inquiries of his friend, think what charming quarters I might have. I am heartily sick of the old hand bachelor life we now lead. What! must I wait till I make a fortune before I marry?

Or be over head and ears in debt, suggested Ned.

That will never do, exclaimed Scott, right earnestly; and it is to be regretted that every young man does not make similar determination, with independence and judgment enough to keep it.

Here the two came to a turn in the street, where they took different directions. Charley bent his steps toward the store, in no merry mood, Ned—I know not where.

Charles Scott entered his counting room and sat the door. The business of the day was over, and the clerks were beginning to leave as the early shades of an autumn twilight were gathering round. He stirred up some dying embers, and throwing himself listlessly into a chair, and placing his feet upon the iron fender, he soon became wonderfully absorbed in his own reflections. He was a young man of excellent tastes and excellent habits—remembered with joy his father's fireside, and all the sweet sympathies of that dear home circle, of which he was a loved and loving member. They had passed away, and he had lived upon the cold bounties of a boarding house. His heart yearned with an unspeakable desire for a place to call his own, with the delightful peculiarities of his wife, my fire-side, my table. It does not appear to what conclusion Charley came or where-to any at all. Evening found him at his toilet, preparing for a party.

Long before the hour, he was ready, and waiting the tardy movement of his watch.—
Though no one knew better how to fill up minutes in time with something useful and pleasant, there was now a restlessness of spirit which refused to be quiet. He sallied forth into the street, and after various turns at length bent his steps towards Clark's—music and mirth met his ear, and bright lights streamed from the windows. Making his greetings to the ladies of the house, and uttering a few agreeable truisms to those about him, he sought among the bevy of fair women one pretty maiden named Fanny Day. She bade him a welcome which seemed to say 'come hither.' He stood aloof, in no seeming hurry to take a place by her side, already half occupied by another, while his eye discussed, with keenest scrutiny, the tout ensemble of Fanny's dress. Conscious of his earnest admiring (?) gaze, Fanny seemed to hear the quick beatings of her own heart, and hope, and fear, and love came and went, and went,

and came, like smiles and shadows across her spirit. A new and splendid silk, thus ran Charley's thoughts, that looks very extraordinary; and that bracelet too, I never saw that before; I wonder if she is fond of such gewgaws?

What is that dangling from her hair? A gold pin, or gold tassel? I should like to know how much it cost? Not very lover-like comments, it must be confessed but he was looking beyond the betrothed and the bride, to what signified a great deal more; he was looking for a helpmate—one for dark days as well as bright.

I am afraid she won't do for me; and this is her uncle's house; she will want to live just so.
Something like a sigh escaped him as he walked away to the other part of the room. Fanny watched his departure, wondering when he would return. She was sure he would rejoin her by and by; he always had of late. But no return. Had he only known that Fanny's silk dress was not a new one, newly turned and newly fitted, as it had indeed been, by her needle and her skill, so as to make it quite as good as new—how prudent and thrifty that was!

Had he only known that the bracelet was a gift two years before and the gold pin, why it was a decoration borrowed to please his eye; so Fanny was not so culpable after all. I say had Charles known all this, he had not stayed away so strangely and coolly all that evening, while Fanny's heart was sinking. Mournfully did a tear gather in her eye, as she beheld him depart, without a parting glance or a farewell word.

Charles Scott was not quite satisfied. He really loved Fanny, but he was afraid to marry her. It was not a sickly, sentimental love. It counted the cost and calculated the chances; albeit love, it is said, understands no arithmetic and knows no reason. He had fixed principles of action, and settled rules to govern his choice of a wife; he did not mean that love should laugh him out of them, or blind him to their value.
No; he determined to abide by them.

Some time passed away, and never was a man more devoted to his business. Perhaps he dreamed of Fanny, but he did not visit her.

Behold a gathering of friends, a pleasant little company; Charles is there, and Fanny, too.
He thought she never looked so charmingly, with her simple braid of hair and her modest fawn colored dress. There was something sad and reproachful in her eye; it smote him to the heart. Dear Fanny how can she interpret my coolness. I mean to see her, and explain to her all my views—if she is a girl of sense she cannot but approve; if she is not—such a contingency remained unprovided for. An excellent resolution, Charles; abide by it. It so happened, or so contrived (love changes are not always scrutable) that the two found themselves threading their way along through the streets at an early hour. Now for Charley's resolution—yes, he kept it.

But, Fanny, he continued, with remarkable self-possession, with a few preliminaries not to be repeated, I want you to understand exactly my situation; how I intend for the present to live, and what plans we must pursue. I must live within my means—and just starting in life my means are necessarily small. I am liable to the fluctuations of the business world, and we must begin with what we can independently afford—no dashing out with borrowed capital for me.

You must take all these considerations into account before you answer. Perhaps you may feel that you cannot conform to such humble circumstances, I will not disappoint or deceive you.

At the moment, Fanny thought she could decide instantly, for she saw only a rose-tinted future. Now Fanny listened.

Do not decide now, Fanny, think this all over, was his parting injunction at the end of this long walk, during which, though he had said a great deal he had a great deal more to say —and then decide carefully and conscientiously.

Fanny did think it all over; much that he had said quite new to her. To be married!
to be married, it must be confessed, had implied to her mind what it does to the minds of two many young ladies—gay visions of wealth and independence—doing everything one wished—a lover in the husband—amusement in the parlor. Fanny belonged to that class of females, who without fortune or expectation, had been brought up amid the appliances of wealth. She was an orphan, and lived in the family of an uncle. With a few parlor duties and none in the kitchen, she had lived an easy, independent life floating on society with untiring energies and undeveloped powers. Rich men did not seek her, because rich men generally seek to increase their wealth with matrimonial cares; a poor man might fear, and justly fear, as Charles Scott did, because females thus educated often shrink from the exertions and cares of household employments; they are slow in finding out that hands are made to work with, and are apt to regard labor as menial service. If all young men would do as Charles Scott did, frankly unfold to women their real situation and their true interests, explain to them the use and dignity of labor, and encourage and stimulate their exertion there would be fewer ill-regulated households and thriftless wives. Fanny digested the matter, weighed it all, and decided.

Behold, not many weeks afterward, Fanny in her new home. It was indeed a snug home full of comforts and blessings. There was a pleasant little sitting room, with sunbeams and smiles, with Kidderminster and flag bottoms unadorned by ottomans, or divans, astral lamps or marble tables. Her kitchen, too, was near by, where Fanny was not ashamed to spend her morning hours.

Do not come in the morning, said Fanny to a gay acquaintance, you may perhaps find me making bread or ironing collars.

Doing your girl's work? Ugh! exclaimed the lady distastefully.

Oh, I am my own girl, replied Fanny, with the exception of Nancy Drew, who comes in when I want her. I can make a soup and roast a turkey, and I dare say I can teach you a thousand interesting things that you don't know anything about. Flora did not wish to be taught.

I really pity Fanny, said this same Flora passing by her door one day, weary and dispirited with the frivolities of a series of fashionable calls.

Pity Fanny! She had no need of such pity Was she not spreading the snowy cloth upon the dinner table? cutting sweet white loaves of her own making? fetching sauce of her own steeping? bringing pies of her own baking? all products of her skill; and did not the hearty I am glad to see you Charley, and her nicely broiled steak quite compensate for the perplexities of his morning business? True Fanny had her trials. The cakes did sometimes burn, and the potatoes were not always done—but then she did not have the blues—they quickly sped away before the early rising and employment. She had no time for yawning or ennui, and never cried out, Oh, I am dying for want of exercise!

Her chamber must be cared for, her pantry looked after, and the flour sifted. Yes, Fanny understood how to use her hands. She was a producer as well as a consumer. What delicious evenings did they pass together, sewing and reading, or at a lecture, or enjoying the society of dear friends. Charley cheerful and happy in the consciousness that his receipts exceeded his expenses, was pleased with nothing so much as his wife; and Fanny rejoicing in the consciousness of bearing her burden, of contributing her share to the family comfort, enjoyed an elasticity of spirit and vigor of health, of which the indolent and unoccupied can scarcely conceive.

More than this, there were blessings this family could impart.

I really cannot afford to do any thing, replied the mistress of a splendid mansion, to a solicitation in behalf of the suffering poor. I have so many uses for money—and I have paid away the last farthing this morning.

It was very true; her rose and ice creams and cut glass must be promptly paid for while the poor streetress to whom she did not pay her last farthing that morning, had been soliciting her just dues for weeks, and suffering in consequence of their long delays.

Will you do something? concluded the same collector, after explaining the object, to Mrs.
Scott.

I shall be very happy in the privilege of doing it, answered Fanny, placing a bill in the hand of the thankful woman. Yes, and Fanny felt that the pleasure of having fine clothes and costly furniture and many servants could be no fair equivalent to the satisfaction of being able to lend timely aid to the poor and carry the balm of relief to suffering hearts.

Ned how is it with you? asked an old friend, whom he unexpectedly met some years afterwards in the city, and where's Charles Scott?
—a fine fellow. Why, you are looking well—
I am for the west.

West? why so?

Oh, I can't get along here—hard times—family expenses are enormous!

You won't do any better at the west—be independent enough to endure one half the privations here that you must endure there and you will get along cleverly, said Ned in his advice giving way.

Yes, yes, I dare say—but it's the fashion there, and it's not here. I have had a hard time of it since we were boys together, continued the gentleman bitterly; sleepless nights devising plans to make both ends meet; and when I couldn't, why what could I do? Get involved and bear it like a gentleman—hard work. Poor fellow! how many there are in the same deplorable condition. But tell us of Charles Scott, he exclaimed, dashing away the memories of the past. Good fellow—I hope he is doing well.

Doing well, capitally! He has such a wife cried Ned with a relish—a wife worth having.
She is not a tax upon her husband, she's an intelligent, refined woman—with independence enough to begin housekeeping with him in a small economical way—did her own work—manage her own concerns, let him always have ready money enough to meet all his emergencies, (and pretty trying ones will occur in the business world) without spending it upon fashion and show—and now, said Ned, enthusiastically, he's the most flourishing man in the town—really flourishing, well grounded, and they have got the best family of children I ever saw.

After all everything depends upon a good wife.
Why, I should get married myself, if I could get another like Fanny Scott—a great remark for Edward Green to make, confirmed bachelor as he was. The old friend sighed, as he repeated, yes, everything depends upon a wife.

Try to love labor; if you do not want it for food you may for physic.

NEWSPAPER PATRONAGE.

In the language of a cotemporary, we have to say, that this thing called newspaper patronage is a curious thing. It is composed of as many colors as the rainbow, and is as changeable as the chameleon.

One man subscribes for a newspaper, and pays for it in advance, goes home and reads it the year round with the proud satisfaction that it is his own. He hands in an advertisement —asks the price and pays for it. This is newspaper patronage.

Another man says, 'please put my name on your list of subscribers,' and goes off without as much as having said pay, once. He asks you to advertise, but he says nothing about paying for it. Time passes—your patience is exhausted—and you dun him. He flies in a passion and perhaps pays—perhaps not. This too, is newspaper patronage.

Another man has been a subscriber for a long time. He becomes tired of you, and wants a change. Thinks he would like a dollar weekly. Tells the postmaster to discontinue, and one of his papers is returned to you marked 'refused.' Paying for it is among the last of his thoughts. Besides he wants his dollar to send to the city publisher. After a time you look over his account and send him the balance due. But does he pay it cheerfully and freely? We leave you to answer. Yet this, too, is newspaper patronage.

Another man lives next you—never took your paper—it is too small, (compared with some of the overgrown and sickly sentimental dollar weeklies) it is too small, I don't like its politics—too whiggish—too locofocoish, or too something else. Yet he goes regularly to his neighbors, and reads his by a good stove fire-finds fault with its contents—disputes its leaders, and quarrels with its type, ink or color.
Occasionally sees an article that he likes—takes half a dime and buys a number. This,
too, is newspaper patronage.

Another sports a fine horse, or perhaps a pair of them—is always seen whip in hand and spur on foot, single man, no use for him to take a newspaper, knows enough now. Finally concludes to get married—does so, sends in notice of the fact, with 'please, publish and send me half a dozen copies.' 'Tis done, does he ever pay for either papers or notice? No.
But surely you don't charge for such things?
This, too, is newspaper patronage.

Another (and the class is very numerous) thinks that the prompt payment of two dollars per annum entitles him to the privilege of calling the editor to a personal account, at least once a quarter, for anything that appears in the paper which he cannot relish. This class believes that newspapers are published for individual, and not general benefit; and this, too, is called newspaper patronage.

This class believes firmly in the ancient meaning of patron.
Another man—(bless you! it does us good to see such a man, and we do see them sometimes, and we have seen some such lately) another man comes and says—'The year for which I have paid is about to expire; I want to pay for another.' He does so and retires.

Reader! is not newspaper patronage a curious thing? And in that great day, when honest men are to get the reward due to honesty, which say you, of those enumerated above will obtain that reward?

SHE WORKS FOR A LIVING.

Commend us to the girl of whom it is sneeringly said, 'she works for a living,' in her we are always sure to find the elements of a true woman—a real lady. True we are not prepared to see a mincing step, a haughty lip, a fashionable dress, or hear a string of splendid nonsense about the balls and the young men,
the new novels and the next parties; no, no!
but we are prepared to hear sound words of good sense, language becoming to women, and to see a neat dress, a mild brow, and to witness movements that would not disgrace an angel.

You who are looking for wives and companions, turn from the fashionable, lazy, haughty girls, and select one from any of those who work for a living; our word for it, you will not repent your choice. You want a substantial friend, and not a doll; a helpmate and not help eat; a counsellor, and not a simple-ton. You may not be able to carry a spinning wheel or a set of knitting needles. If you cannot buy a ticket to the ball, you can visit your afflicted neighbor. Be careful, then, when you look for companions, and whom you choose. We know many a foolish man, who, instead of choosing the industrious and prudent woman for a wife, took one from the fashionable walks, and is now lamenting his folly in dust and ashes. He ran into the fire with his eyes wide open, and who but himself is to blame?

The time was, when ladies who went a visiting took their work with them. This is the reason why we have such excellent mothers.
How singular would a gay woman look in a fashionable circle darning her father's stockings or carding wool to spin? Would not her companions laugh at her? And yet, such a woman would be a prize for somebody. Blessed is the man who chooses his wife from the despised girls 'who work for a living.'

To TAKE INK OUT OF LINEN. Take a piece of tallow, melt it, and dip the spotted part of the linen into the melted tallow. It may then be washed, and the spots will disappear, without injuring the linen.

BE GENTLE.

A man with an irritable temper is more to be pitied than one bowed to the earth by poverty. The latter evil can be ameliorated, while the former is a devil that makes havoc with all the finer qualities of heart and mind, taking the helm from reason and running the possessor perpetually against rocks and rough corners. A petulant man in a family of children, even of his own, is worse than a small case of the small pox, from his influence on their young minds. The old adage—'As the old cock crows the young one learns,' is a grand truth; and we see it here illustrated.

Those old fellows that sputter and growl round their homes are sure to be imitated faithfully by the little watchers for parental squalls, and a nest of hornets is made where peace and harmony alone should dwell. The fractious man should be consigned to valerian and penitence, and kept by force from spreading his contagion.

What right has a man to poison the happiness any more than the food of his family? The text might apply to all the relations of life where misery is cultivated and growing made the order of all days. There are communities and parties where the old saw about 'dogs with sore heads' would give but a faint indication of their condition of mind. We need a society for the promotion of good nature more than for any other philanthropic purpose.

How to SUCCEED. "I cannot get along, there is no use in trying," said a man despair-ingly the other day. He was one on whom the winds of fortune had indeed blown roughly, but he was not without his share in producing his ill-luck. A more agreeable companion, or a more affectionate husband, never lived, but he had no energy, and wanting this, he failed in everything he undertook. With how many men is it not so! Some have plenty of ability, but no tact—some industry, but no talent,—and some unfortunately want all these.

Others have mind enough, diligence enough, shrewdness enough, but are destitute of thrift,
and so blunder through life, without the possibility of arresting penury in old age.

Dr. Franklin once gave good advice to a young man of this latter class, who was complaining of his want of success in life.

"Make a full estimate," he said, 'of all you owe and all that is owing to you. Reduce the same to note. As fast as you can collect, pay over to those you owe. If you cannot, renew your note every year, and get the best security you can. Go to business diligently and be industrious; waste no idle moments; be very economical in all things; discard all pride; be faithful in your duty to God, be regular and hearty in prayer morning and night; attend church and meeting regular every Sunday; and do unto all men as you would they should do unto you. If you are too needy in circumstances to give to the poor do whatever else in your power for them cheerfully, but if you can, help the poor and unfortunate. Pursue this course diligently and sincerely for seven years, and if you are not happy, comfortable and independent in your circumstances, come to me and I will pay your debts."

CONFIRMED HABIT. A gentleman of excellent habits and a very amiable disposition was so unfortunate as to have a wife of very different character—in short, one that would get beastly drunk. Being in company of a few intimates, one evening, one of them remarked to him, that if she was his wife—since all other things had failed—he would frighten her in some way so that she would quit; and proposed the following method: that some time when dead drunk, she should be laid into a box shaped like a coffin, and left in that situation until her drunken fit should be over, and consciousness restored.

A few evenings after, the lady being in a proper state, the plan was put in execution and after the box lid was properly secured, the party before alluded to watched, each in turn to witness the result.

About daylight next morning, the watcher, hearing a movement, laid himself down beside the box, when her ladyship, after bumping her head a few times was heard to say:

'Bless me! why! here am I?'

Encourage your Own.

To the People of Quincy—

THE following is a well known motto, and strictly true:

"That County or Town that gives the most liberal encouragement to its own manufactures of every kind is well known to thrive, and increase in wealth and population."

There are a few interesting facts, of which we wish to remind you, and which we are inclined to think have slipped from the memory of some, and which it will be for your advantage as well as ours to remember.

1st. That at the QUINCY BOOKSTORE you will find all the

SCHOOL BOOKS

in use in this and the neighboring towns

2d. That at the same place you will find every kind of

Blank Account Book,

RECORD or MEMORANDUM BOOK.

3d. That there you will find a great assortment of

Miscellaneous, Juvenile and Toy Books.

4th. That there you will find all kinds of

STATIONERY.

5th. That there you will find an innumerable variety of

FANCY GOODS.

6th. That all the above will be sold at the very

Lowest Market Prices.

7th. That we are entirely disinterested when we say that you will be much better satisfied with your seives and your bargains if you trade at home, in preference to "out of town."

8th. That there you will find a GOOD LIBRARY

where you can procure reading on reasonable terms.

9th. That the Proprietors are agents for all the popular MAGAZINES, receiving the subscription themselves and furnishing the numbers on their own responsibility, free of any expense. Many have forgotten this of late, preferring to subscribe of some travelling agent, or in their own town.

10th. That they RE-BIND old Books, Pamphlets,

Periodicals, Music, etc., as cheap as they can afford to and as quick as any body.

These things we wish to call to your memory, because while we have been moving on in a quiet kind of a way, you seem partly to have forgotten the old place, thinking perhaps that we did not keep up with the times in the variety of our goods and also in prices.

Our rule, like that of many others, is, "quick sales and small profits," therefore call in and we will supply you most satisfactorily.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

TO MANUFACTURERS.
You all have heard of Samson,
Of his grinding in the mill,
And how he labor'd lustily
And did his master's will,
Then pull'd the house about his ears,
From cap stone to the sill.

Now, why did Samson bury them
All in one bloody grave?
It was because they used him as
An ill-requited slave,
If safe to trample onwards down
There's danger from the brave.

You money proud aristocrats,
Let not the hint be vain,
The hands that toil'd to build you up
Can pull you down again;
The goat can make the king of beasts
To writhe in madning pain.

Be generous to the toiling hands
Who labor for your good;
They ask but for a competence,
For decent dress and food,
And means above a pauper class
To rear their little brood.

Think not by pauper labor
To supply the needful toil;
The spirit of America
That villain scheme will foil,
Nor shall you with your myrmidons
Pollute the freeman's soil.

The ballot box will tell you
That the Tariff is a fraud;
The poor are taxed for every thing
They use at bed and board,
According to their families,
That wealthy men may hoard.

Dismiss them home to read their books
And let them once but know
The arts of manufacturers
To make their spirits bow;
Like Samson they'll the pillars seize
And lay your Daygon low.

The Tariff is the talisman
Our purses to command;
It robs the poor unsparingly
And yet conceals the hand,
And common sense should cripple it
In our enlightened land.

Submitted to but for your sakes
Like ingrates in return,
The hands that have supported you
Contemptuously you spurn;
Be cautious, or the consequence
Perhaps too late you'll learn.

F. M. ADLINGTON, Weymouth.

THE HERO.

My father was a farmer good,
With corn and beef in plenty;
I mowed and hoed and held the plough,
And longed for one and twenty;
For I had quite a martial turn,
And scorned the lowing cattle;
I hunted to wear a uniform,
Hear drums and see a battle.

My birth day came, my father urged,
But stoutly I resisted;
My sister wept, my mother prayed,
But off I went and listed.
They marched me on through wet and dry,
To tunes more loud than charming;
But logging knapsack, box and gun,
Was harder work than farming.

We met the foe—the cannon roared,
The crimson tide was flowing,
The frightful death-groans filled my ears,
I wished that I was mowing.
I lost my leg—the foe came on,
They had me in their clutches,
I stayed in prison till the peace,
Then hobbled home on crutches.

ANECDOTES.

A lecturer was dilating on the powers of the magnet, delving any one to show or name any surpassing its powers, when a man mounted the stand and told him that woman was the magnet of magnets, for, said he, if the loadstone could attract a piece of iron a foot or two, there was a young woman, who when he was a young man, used to attract him thirteen miles every Sunday to have a chat with her!

A gentleman being in company with a sprightly dandy of about fourteen, who some what annoyed by her playful trickery. At length he exclaimed: "Now my dear girl, do be still." This touched a chord of feminine vanity which is sure to vibrate. Assuming an air of importance, and retiring a pace or two, she drew herself up into a posture of self-defence, and responded:—"Gilt, indeed! I am as much of a woman as you are."

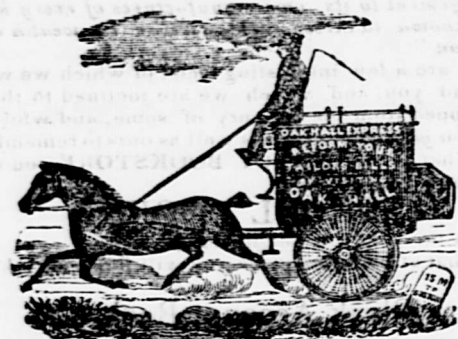

A young buck belonging to the independent drink-or-let-it-alone-just-as-I-please-without-signing-the-pledge society, popped the question to a pretty girl a short time since, who brought a still deeper blush to his always blushing countenance, by replying that as she had signed the pledge to neither drink nor traffic in ardent spirits, she did not feel at liberty to traffic herself off for a hoghead of brandy!

A worthy, but poor minister requested the loan of fifty dollars from the cashier of a bank; and in the note requesting the favor, he said that if the cashier would oblige him, he would pay him in ten days, on the faith of Abraham. The cashier returned word that by the rules of the bank, the endorser of a note must reside in the State!

"Hallo, Mister," cried a passenger in a stage coach to a rough-looking foot passenger, "can you tell me what has become of those gossins which were hatched on the top of that rock last year?" "Four of them are dead," returned Jonathan, "and the other, I perceive, is passenger in a stage-coach."

The Graefenberg Company, HEREBY give notice that their New England Branch is established at No. 154 Washington Street, Boston, the Secretary of which is Mr. Edwin C. Barnes, who is prepared to appoint Sub-Agents for the sale of their celebrated MEDICINES. Application should be made either personally, or by mails post paid. The Graefenberg Series of Medicines consists of the following preparations—to which public attention is invited, viz:

THE GRAEFENBERG VEGETABLE PILLS, which are inconceivably superior to any ever before discovered. All Chronic Diseases, Biliousness, Headache, Jaundice, Liver Complaints, Rheumatism, all Stomach Complaints, Green Sickness, etc., yield at once to these Pills. They purge away offensive humors, arrest the progress of disease, and at the same time restore tone and vigor to the system. In cases of general derangement of the health, they are SOVEREIGNS. Price 25 cents per box.

THE GRAEFENBERG CHILDREN'S PANACEA. This is a Medicine which should be in every family. In all diseases to which children and youth are subject, and for Summer Complaints, Dysentery and all other affections of the stomach and bowels it is infallible. Price 50 cents a bottle.

THE GREEN MOUNTAIN VEGETABLE OINTMENT. This is an Indian remedy, the receipt for which was obtained by one of the early settlers of Vermont from the Indians. It is an invaluable dressing for Burns and Scalds, and by its use all bruises and fresh cut wounds are cured with great rapidity. Price 25 and 50 cents a box.

THE GRAEFENBERG SARSAPARILLA COMPOUND. This unequalled extract is immeasurably superior to any Sarsaparilla preparation now offered to the public. One bottle of it is warranted to make two quarts of the strength ordinarily sold. Price one dollar a bottle.

The Graefenberg EYE LOTION, which for disorders of the Eyes has no equal; for violent inflammation, weakness, or foreign substances in the eye, it is a positive and speedy cure. Price 25 cents a bottle.

The Graefenberg HEALTH BITTERS. These Bitters stimulate the stomach, promote tardy digestion, impart tone and elasticity to the feeble body, and exert their salutary energies with surprising rapidity. Price 25 cents a package.

THE NEWSPAPER.

The old farm-house wore a quiet, pleasant look, as the setting sun gilded its small windows, over which the luxuriant grape vines were carefully trained. In the open door sat the farmer, with a little morocco-covered book in his hand, on which his attention has been fixed for the last half hour. He was a man of method and order—old Richard Heath—and aside from his regular account books, which were kept with scrupulous care, he always set down in this little book, in the simplest manner possible, all his expenses, (no very complicated account by the way,) and all he received during the year, "in the real metal," as he said, "not by way of trade."

This last account he had just reckoned up, and the result was highly satisfactory, if one might judge from the pleasant expression of his face as he turned to his wife, and addressed her by her pretty old-fashioned name.

"Millicent," said he, "this has been a lucky year. How little we thought when we moved on to this place, twenty-five years ago, that we should ever get five hundred a year out of the rocky barren farm."

"It does pay for a good deal of hard work," said she, "to see how different things look from what they did then."

"Now I'm going to figure up how much we've spent," said Mr. Heath; "don't make a noise with your knitting needles, 'cause it puts me out."

His wife laid down her knitting in perfect good humor, and gazed out over the broad, rich fields of waving grain which grew so tall around the laden apple trees that they looked like massive piles of foliage. Hearing her own name thus kindly spoken, led her thoughts far back to the past; for after the lapse of twenty-five years the simple sound of the name she bore in youth, means more to a wife than all the puling epithets of dearest love, and darling, so lavishly uttered in a long past courtship.

Very pleasant was this retrospect to Millicent Heath. The picture of the past had on it some rough places, and some hard trials, but no domestic strife or discontent marred its sunny aspect. There were smiling faces on it—happy children's faces, without which no life picture is beautiful. Soft blue eyes shone with unclouded gladness, and wavy hair floated carelessly over unwritten foreheads. She forgot for a moment how they were changed, and almost fancied herself again the young mother, and tiny hands stole lovingly over her bosom, and young heads nestled there as of old. The illusion vanished quickly, and she sighed as she thought of her youngest born, the reckless boy who had left her for a home on the sea. Once only had tidings reached her of the wanderer. The letter spoke of hardship and homesickness in that light and careless way that reaches the mother's heart more surely than reproof and complaint. To know that he suffered with a strong heart, with noble, unyielding resolution, gave her a feeling of pleasure, not unmixed with pride.

"He will surely come back," murmured the affectionate mother to herself; "and I read the paper so carefully every week, that if it says anything about the ship Alfred sailed in, I shall be sure to see it."

"Mrs. Heath," said her husband, interrupting her meditations somewhat rudely, "we've spent thirty dollars more than usual this year; where can it have gone to?"

"The new harness," suggested Mrs. Heath. "That don't come every year, you know."

"Well, there's twenty dollars accounted for."

"We had the carriage fixed up when you bought the harness," continued his wife.

"Well, that was eight dollars; that's twenty-eight dollars that we don't spend every year—but the other two—where can they have gone to?"

Glancing his eye hastily over the pages of the memorandum book he continued: "I'll tell you what it is, the newspaper costs just two dollars, and we can do without it. It isn't anything to eat, or drink, or wear. I don't do anything with it, and you only lay it away up chamber. It might as well be left out as not, and I'll stop my subscription right away."

"Oh," said his wife, "you don't know how much I set by the newspaper. I always have a sort of glad feeling when I see you take it out of your hat and lay it on the mantelpiece, just as I do when one of the children comes home. And when I'm tired, I sit down with my knitting-work and read, (I can knit just as fast when I'm reading,) and feel so contented. I don't believe Queen Victoria herself takes more solid comfort than I do sitting by that east window of a summer afternoon, reading my newspaper."

"But you'd be just as well off without it," answered her husband, for want of anything wiser to say.

"I never neglect anything else for my reading, do I?" asked Mrs. Heath, mildly.

"No, I don't know as you do," answered her husband; "but it seems to me an extra like; I shall stop it," he added, in a tone that showed plainly enough that he wished to stop the conversation too.

"I shall take the paper," remarked his wife, "if I have to go out a washing to pay for it."

This was not spoken angrily, but so firmly that Mr. Heath noticed it, though by no means remarkable for discernment in most matters. It sounded so different from her usual quiet "as you think best," that he actually stopped a moment to consider whether it was at all likely she would do as she said. Mr. Heath was a kind husband, as that indefinite description is generally understood; that is, he did not beat his wife, and always gave her enough to eat.

More than this, he had a certain regard for her happiness which made him already feel half ashamed of his decision, but like many other men who have more obstinacy than wisdom, he could not bear to retract anything, and above all, to be convinced he was wrong by a woman. However, with a commendable wish to remove the unhappiness he had caused, he suggested that "as the papers were carefully saved, and as she had found them interesting, she could read 'em all over again, beginning at January; and taking one a week clear through the year—they would come out even," he concluded, as if it were singular fact that they should do so.

Notwithstanding this admirable proposition, he still felt some uneasiness. It followed him as he walked up the pleasant lane to the pasture, and it made him speak more sharply than was his wont, if the cows stopped while he was driving them home, to crop the grass where it looked greenest and sweetest: on the sunny slope. It troubled him till he heard his wife call him to supper in such a cheerful tone that he concluded she didn't care much about the newspaper, after all.

About a week after this, as Mr. Heath was mowing one morning, he was surprised to see his wife come out, dressed as if for a visit. "I'm going," said she, "to spend the day with Mrs. Brown—I've left plenty for you to eat." And so saying she walked rapidly on.

Mr. Heath thought about it just long enough to say to himself "she don't go visitin'" to stay all day once a year hardly, and it's strange she should go in daytime."

Very long the day seemed to him; to go in for luncheon, dinner and supper and have nobody to speak to; to find everything so still. The old clock ticked stiller than usual, he thought; the brood of pretty white chickens that were always peeping round the door, had wandered off somewhere, and left it stiller yet; he even missed the busy click of the knitting needles that was apt to put him out so, when he was doing any figuring.

"I'm glad," he said to himself, as he began to look down the road at sunset, "that Millicent don't go a visitin' all the time as some women do—there, she is just coming."

"How tired you look," said he as she came up; "why didn't you speak about it and I'd have harnessed you and come after you."

"I'm not very tired," she answered; "but her looks belied her; indeed, her husband declared she looked tired like for a day or two after."

What was his amazement to see her go away the next Tuesday, in the same manner as before, without saying much about it before she started.

To his great dissatisfaction, everything seemed that day to partake of his wife's new propensity for going away from home. "A man don't want cold feed in daytime," grumbled he, as he sat down alone to dinner. In the same grumbling mood he recounted the mishaps of the morning, which seemed to have been much after the manner set forth in a certain legend of old time, for he embellished his recital by allusion to

"The sheep's in the meadow,
The cow's in the corn," adding that they wouldn't have been there if Mrs. Heath had been at home, because she'd have seen 'em before they got in, and hollered. She would have seen the oxen too, before they got across the river, and saved him the trouble of getting them back. But after tracing all these untoward events to her absence, he said to himself consolingly, "I guess she went to do more for, she's always a home body."

Mrs. Heath did go again though, and again, and the day she went for the fourth time, her husband took counsel with himself as to what he should do to stop this gadding. Seated on the door step, in the shade of the old trees, he spent an hour or two in devising ways and measures, talking aloud all the time, and having the satisfaction of hearing nobody dispute him. "It's hard to think of her gettin' to be a visitin' woman," said he "and it's clear it ain't right. 'Keep her at home,' I've read in the Bible, (old Richard's Bible knowledge was somewhat confused, and his quotation varied slightly from the scriptural phrase 'keepers at home,') 'but it says too,' he added, with the true conscience of a sincere man, 'that husbands must set great store by their wives and treat 'em well. I won't scold Millicent; I'll harness up and go after her to night, and comin' home I'll talk it over with her and tell how bad it makes me feel; and if that don't do, I'll—try something else.'"

In accordance with this praiseworthy resolution, he might have been seen about sunset hitching his horse at Mrs. Brown's door; for, strangely enough Mrs. Heath's visits had all been made at the same place. Going up to the door he stopped in amazement at seeing his wife in the kitchen just taking off a great woolen wash apron and putting down her sleeves which had been rolled up as if for washing. He listened and heard her say as she took some money from Mrs. Brown, "It won't be so that I can do your washing again."

"It has been a great favor to have you do it while I've been poorly," answered Mrs. Brown, "and I'm glad to pay you for it. This makes four times, and here's two dollars. 'Tis just as well that you can't come again, for I think I shall be well enough now to do it myself."

"Two dollars—just the price of the newspaper!" exclaimed Mr. Heath, as the truth flashed across him. Rather a silent ride home they had, till at last he said, "I never was so ashamed."

"Of what?" asked his wife.

"Why to have you go out a washin'. I aint so poor as that comes to."

"Well, I don't know," replied his wife; "when a man is too poor to take a newspaper, his wife ought not to feel above going out washin'."

Nothing more was said on the subject at that time though some ill-feeling lingered in the heart of each. The "making up" was no mawkish scene of kissing, embracing, and crying, such as romance writers build their useless fabrics with, but as Mrs. Heath was finishing her household duties for the night, she said quietly, "I don't think I did 'quite right, Richard."

"I don't think I did, either," responded the husband; and so the spark was quenched which might have become a scathing flame, blighting all domestic peace under their humble roof.

At last the long voyage is almost ended, and the sailors talk only of home now. They talk of those they are to meet, of the wives and children to whom their thoughts have so often wandered during these three years' absence. They wonder if the young sailor, Alfred Heath, who lies so sick, will ever see his home again, and with their rough tones subdued almost to gentleness, they speak of his anxiety to see his mother.

He is so hopelessly ill that his heart is now where the worn spirit ever turns in its hour of bitterest sorrow or its approach to the unseen land—to God and his mother. Faintly as his heart beats, it still throbs with earnest desire for life. Dim as his keen eye has become, he fancies it would brighten once more at the sight of his mother, and his failing mind be clearer could he lean on her breast.

With folded hands the young sailor prays; his words are confused and indistinct to those who listen, but all clear, all earnest and plain are they to the great Listener above. And when the stately ship had reached her destined port, and mingling voices are all around the sick sailor, his comrades bear him carefully to a home; a miserable home, but better to him than the rocking vessel in the midst of the sounding sea. "Now if I could see mother," he murmured to the strangers around him.

She is sitting by the vine-covered window patiently reading the shipping Journal, and thinking meanwhile of her absent boy; thinking it is time for him to return, and hoping he will never go to sea again. How quick the words catch her eye—Arrived, ship Banner, Lovell.

"And it was a week ago," he should have been at home by this time; he will come to-night," she said joyfully, as she went to communicate the good news to her husband.

They watched for him in vain that night and then Mrs. Heath suggested what no mother ever failed to suggest when the prolonged absence of a child was unaccounted for—"he must be sick;" and when night after night passed, and they neither saw nor heard anything of Alfred, her anxiety would let her rest no longer.

"We will go to him, or at least go where we may hear of him," she said, and Mr. Heath now as anxious as herself, readily assented. Their simple preparations for the journey were soon made, and with heavy hearts they proceeded in search of their son with little hope of gaining anything more satisfactory than definite intelligence of his death.

It was a dark and rainy evening when they entered the city, and after an hour spent in fruitless inquiries, they found the place to which Alfred had been carried. Little care had he received in the crowded boarding house. There was none of the neatness and order that shows better in a sick room than anywhere else. Rough hands had roughly tended him, and pale and death like as he looked, it seemed as it mattered little what care he had now. In the agony with which the parents bent over the unconscious sleeper, and marked the sunken cheeks and wasted form, there was but one ray of comfort; they could watch over him—they should not hear of his death with the sad thought that none but stranger hands had smoothed his dying pillow.

The sufferer woke from a troubled dream, to find his aching head supported by his father, and see his mother's eyes resting on him with a look of unutterable tenderness. So faint was the smile of recognition with which he greeted them that only a parent's eye could have caught the fitting expression.

"Cant live, cant live," said the doctor, with professional carelessness, as he entered the house the next morning.

"But his mother's case," said the landlady. "That alters the case; he may get up again."

answered the doctor, than whom none knew better how much a mother could do. But how frail seemed the thread that held that young and promising life. For days it quivered and trembled with the lightest breath, and the mother tearfully prayed that it might not be broken. As gentle care and kindly watching as ever blessed a sick bed, had young Alfred Heath; and not in vain; gradually he grew better, and was able to talk with his parents, and ask them how they chanced to come to him in that hour of need.

"It was in the newspaper," said Mr. Heath; "just three words in the paper told us that your ship had come. You didn't come home, and so we came to see if you were sick. You'll soon be well enough to go home, my boy. God be thanked," he added, reverently, "for sending us to take care of you."

At length Alfred was pronounced well enough to ride, and in a few days the pleasant old homestead gladdened his sight. How beautiful it looked as the sun shone on the vines in which it embowered with their wealth of grapes, just purpling in the autumn sunshine.

No one seemed so joyful as Mr. Heath who after being gladdened by hearing Alfred say he would never go to sea again, expressed his opinion of newspapers in general, and his newspaper in particular, on this wise:

"I'm so glad, Millicent, that you took that paper, for I count a newspaper just the most necessary thing in a family. We should never have had our boy here strong and well if it had not been for it. It is an excellent thing, and I shall subscribe for it as long as I live."

SETTLING ACCOUNTS.

The closing of the old and the opening of the new year, is not only a period suitable to moral reflection and to the interchange of tokens of friendship and remembrance, but it is also a favorable time to ascertain, in a business point of view, how we stand with the world.

"Long credits make short friendships," says the adage; and there is much truth in it. Accounts of long standing become so involved in forgetfulness, that often they cannot be adjusted to the satisfaction of either party, and hence hard feelings arise, and perhaps lawsuits. The transactions of a year can generally be remembered pretty well, but memory should not be trusted a longer period.

Frequent settlements promote economy. Many a man has become bankrupt, and his business prospects marred, if not ruined for life, not from known habits of extravagance, but from an ignorance of his receipts and expenditures. It is an easy thing to buy on credit; and unless we keep an accurate memorandum of every purchase, larger accounts than we are aware of will insensibly be made. While thus deceived as to the amount of our liabilities, we very naturally incur many expenses, which we might and should avoid, were we better informed as to the amount.

Nothing, certainly, is lost, by knowing the condition of our pecuniary affairs. It is better to see the worst side of them, than to quiet ourselves with the delusive hope that they are not so bad as they really are. Procrastination will not lessen the amount of our indebtedness, nor, probably, facilitate its liquidation. On the contrary, debts generally increase by the lapse of time, while the means of their payment is not unfrequently diminished. It is better, therefore, to be informed of our indebtedness, even if the means be not at hand to discharge it; for the first step towards overcoming an obstacle is to know the extent of it.

It is, therefore, the dictate of prudence and wisdom to settle all accounts at least once a year, and so far as possible, the balances due should be paid. If every man, however small his business, would do this to the extent of his ability, there would be fewer losses by bad debts, less hard feeling in the intercourse of trade, and more general prosperity among all classes of people.

POSTMASTER GENERAL'S REPORT. This document recommends to make the rate of postage uniform for letters at five cents the half-ounce; for newspapers at one cent the ounce; for periodicals two cents the ounce; and on foreign letters fifteen cents the half-ounce; the total abolition of the franking privilege; the prepayment of all mail matter; and, lastly, a change in the tenure of the office of the Postmaster General, with a view of removing the opinion which exists, that as at present constituted, the Post Office Department is used by politicians, at the seat of government, with the view of promoting party purposes and party organizations.

TALLEYRAND AND ARNOLD.

There was a day when Talleyrand arrived in Havre, hot foot from Paris. It was in the darkest hour of the French Revolution. Pursued by the bloodhounds of the Reign of Terror, stripped of every wreck of property or power, Talleyrand secured a passage to America in a ship about to sail. He was going, a beggar and a wanderer to a strange land, to earn his bread by daily labor.

"Is there an American staying at your house?" he asked of the landlord of his hotel. "I am bound to cross the water, and would like a letter to some person of influence in the New World."

The landlord hesitated a moment, and then said:—

"There is a gentleman up stairs either from America or Britain, whether an American or an Englishman I cannot tell."

He pointed the way, and Talleyrand—who in his life was Bishop, Prince and Prime Minister—ascended the stairs. A miserable suppliant, he stood before the stranger's door, knocked and entered.

In a far corner of a dimly lighted room sat a gentleman of some fifty years, with his arms folded, and his head bowed on his breast. From a window directly opposite a flood of light poured over his forehead. His eyes looked from beneath the downcast brows, as he gazed in Talleyrand's face with a peculiar and searching expression. His face was striking in its outline—the mouth and chin indicative of an iron will. His form, vigorous even with the snows of fifty winters, was clad in a dark, but rich and distinguished costume.

Talleyrand advanced, and said if he was an American he solicited his kind and feeling offices.

He poured forth his history in eloquent French and broken English.

"I am a wanderer—an exile. I am forced to fly to the new world, without a friend or a home. You are an American! Give me, then, I beseech you, a letter of yours, so that I may be able to earn my bread. I am willing to toil in any manner—the scenes of Paris have filled me with such horror, that a life of labor would be a paradise, compared with a career of luxury in France. You will give me a letter to one of your friends. A gentleman like you has doubtless many friends."

The strange gentleman rose. With a look that Talleyrand never forgot, he revealed towards the door of the next chamber—his head downcast, but his eyes looking still from beneath his darkened brow. He spoke as he retreated backward; his voice was full of meaning:

"I am the only man in the new world who can raise his hand to God, and say—I have not a friend, not one, in all America."

Talleyrand never forgot the overwhelming sadness of that look which accompanied these words.

"Who are you?" he cried, as the strange man retreated towards the next room. "Your name?"

"My name!"—with a smile that had more mockery than joy in its convulsive expression—"my name is Benedict Arnold!"

He was gone. Talleyrand sank in a chair, gasping the words—

"Arnold the traitor!"

Thus you see he wandered over the earth, another Cain, with a wanderer's mark upon his brow. Even in that desolate room at that inn of Havre, his crimes found him out, and he was forced to tell his name—that name the synonyme of infamy.

The last twenty years of his life are covered with a cloud, from whose darkness but a few gleams of light flash out upon the page of history.

The manner of his death is not distinctly known. But we cannot doubt that he died utterly friendless—that his cold brow was not moistened by one farewell tear—that remorse pursued him to the grave, whispering John Andre! in his ears, and that the memory of his course of glory gnawed like a canker at his heart, murmuring forever—True to your country, what might you have been, O Arnold the Traitor!"

UMBRELLAS. It has been asked where do we get our consumption of umbrellas from? The fact is, there is no article so frequently neglected, and so frequently stolen. If it rains, your umbrella is sure to go, the moment you turn your head. They steal it out of the court room, out of the church, out of every place, without any compunctious visiting of conscience. If punishment followed conviction we should have no more of it. A female in England, has been sentenced to seven years' transportation, for stealing an umbrella! Thus has that crime, which every body commits on a rainy day, and winks at when the sun shines, been cruelly recognized by the civil law.

TO GRANITE WORKERS. A new stone cutting machine, propelled by steam, has been invented, and said to be capable of doing the work of one hundred men. Only one has been made, and that is in use in New Haven. It is thus described:

"The cutting instrument is simply a half-dozen circular saws fastened firmly by an axle running through the centre. These saws of course are made very hard and the teeth rather larger than the ordinary size. When firmly adjusted, it is forced rapidly over the surface of the stone, smoothing it very evenly."

THE SECRET OF WARM FEET.

Many of the colds which people are said to catch commence at the feet. To keep these extremities constantly warm, therefore, is to effect an assurance against the almost interminable list of disorders which spring out from a 'slight cold'; and at the risk of being thought trifling; and of telling people what they know already, I beg to remind them of the following simple rules: 1st—Never be tightly shod. Boots or shoes, when they fit closely, press against the veins of the foot, and prevent the free circulation of the blood. When, on the contrary, they do not embrace the feet too tightly, the blood gets fair play and the spaces left between the leather and the stocking are filled with a comfortable supply of warm air. Those who have handsome feet will, perhaps, be slow to adopt this dictum; but they are urgently recommended to sacrifice a little neatness to a great deal of comfort and safety by wearing what the makers call easy shoes. 2d—Never sit in damp shoes. It is often imagined, that unless they be positively wet, there is no necessity for changing them when the feet are at rest. This is a fallacy. For when the least dampness is absorbed into the sole, it is attracted further to the foot itself by its own heat, and thus perspiration is dangerously checked. Any person may prove this by trying the experiment of neglecting the rule; and his feet will feel cold and damp after a few minutes; although in taking off the shoe and examining it, it will appear perfectly dry. Should every one follow these rules there would be no more cold feet.

HUNT'S MERCHANTS' MAGAZINE AND COMMERCIAL REVIEW. This Magazine is now in its twentieth volume, having been published near ten years. No commercial Magazine has ever been published in this or any other country, that has acquired such a world-wide reputation. The merchant, the statesman, the lawyer, and the intelligent in every sphere of life, are among the subscribers to this deservedly popular work. Wherever commerce exists, and intelligent men are engaged in it, there the Magazine will be found. The library of an intelligent merchant, statesman, professional man, or the mere student, or general reader, seeking a knowledge of the great truths upon which a healthy trade and commerce depend, is not complete without it contains Hunt's Magazine. It is not a feature of our paper to speak in terms of praise of any publication possessing inferior, or even ordinary merit. To refuse to do so, is a rule we shall resolutely adhere to. But fully coinciding with thousands among the intelligent in Europe and America, that the Magazine, of which we are speaking, is distinguished above all others of a similar character, for the theoretical and practical information contained in its pages, we therefore feel that our commendations of it are but feebly expressed.

Freeman Hunt, the editor of the Magazine is not a mere statistician, though in the extent of his knowledge of commercial statistics he has few or no superiors. He is a man of enlarged and liberal ideas, the scope of whose mind embraces the whole field of human thought—a man competent to grasp with theoretical as well as practical truths. The extended patronage of the Magazine is proof that real merit, in this instance at least, is properly appreciated and rewarded. While many other works, the object of which is similar, have appeared and disappeared, or live accomplishing no other good but to show, by contrast, the superiority of HUNT'S MAGAZINE.—American Statesman.

STOPPING NEWSPAPERS. One of our exchanges has the following parable, which should be 'kept before the people':—

A certain man hit his toe against a pebble stone and fell headlong to the ground. He was vexed, and under the influence of anger and active self-sufficiency, he kicked old mother earth right saucily. With impetuous gravity, he looked to see 'the just globe itself dissolved' and come to naught. But the earth remained, and only his poor foot was injured in the encounter. This is the way of man. An article in the newspaper touches him in a weak place, and straightaway he sends word to stop his paper. With great self-complacency, he looks on to see a crash, when the object of his spleen shall cease to be. Poor fool, he has only bit his own toe against a world that does not perceptibly feel the shock, and injures, to no extent, any one but himself.

TRANSPLANTING TREES. Transplanting in winter with frozen balls of earth, is a well known and very capital mode of moving large specimens of evergreen. It requires time and patience, and the co-operation of several hands and sled with a pair of horses or cattle, etc.; but as trees skillfully removed in this way, suffer little by the removal, and as they may be made to produce considerable effect immediately, it is a mode deserving the attention of all ornamental planters.

EFFECTS OF WINE. Wine heightens indifference into love, love into jealousy, and jealousy into madness. It often turns the good-natured into an idiot, and the choleric man into an assassin. It gives bitterness to resentment, it makes vanity insupportable, and displays every little spot of the soul in its utmost deformity.

ENTHUSIASTS. Among enthusiasts of any sort, it is rather dangerous to take a middle ground. One is condemned at once by such people to sit on the benches opposite to them, whether he will or not. If they are the sheep, he must be a goat, of necessity, if he be not prepared to go all lengths with them, and to go in the very same manner.

VALEDICTORY. Hon. Horace Mann has for ten years been Secretary of the Massachusetts Board of Education, and during that time has edited the Massachusetts Common School Journal. The following is an extract from his farewell address to the readers of that instructive periodical:

Our motto used to be, 'The cause of education, the first of all causes.' Recent events, however, of a national character, have forced upon the public attention the great truth, that before a man can be educated he must be a FREE MAN. It is in obedience to this truth, that the editor of the Journal now leaves the immediate field of education, to assist in securing, as far as one vote among two hundred and thirty votes in one department of the national councils can do it, the FREEDOM OF MAN, in regions yet unoccupied by civilized races; so that the vast territories which are now roamed over by savage hordes, may rise from barbarian life into civilization, instead of sinking in this nineteenth century of the Christian era, from the depth of barbarism into the abyss of slavery.

GRAND TAYLOR FESTIVAL.

This Celebration, under the management of the "Rough and Ready Association," of Boston, which is to come off in Faneuil Hall on the 23d of February next, will prove the most splendid fete of the season. Arrangements are making on the most extensive scale to put the 'old cradle of Liberty' in first rate order, and it is supposed not less than one thousand persons will partake of the good things provided for the occasion. More than eight hundred tickets have already been sold.

The programme of the arrangements appears in our advertising columns, and from the well-known reputation of the committee, there can be no doubt but they will be fully carried out.

The Association was formed July 1st, 1846, and has been from that time in active operation, advocating the election of ZACHARY TAYLOR to the Presidency. Among the members are many individuals who have heretofore been prominent actors in the different political parties of the country; and we understand that the forth-coming celebration is not calculated to be exclusively of a party character.

A large number of distinguished individuals from abroad have been invited to be present on that occasion, many of whom have returned answers of acceptance. Among the number, we have heard the names of the Hon. John C. Spencer and Hon. J. Lansing of Albany; Hon. E. C. Cabell, Member of Congress from Florida; Hon. H. A. S. Dearborn of Roxbury; Hon. Judge White of Connecticut; Hon. Josiah Quincy, Jr. of Boston; Hon. David Paul Brown of Philadelphia and Col. J. Sidney Jones of do.; Col. Isaac H. Wright, (late of the Massachusetts Regiment) and many others.

We acknowledge the politeness of the President for our invitation, and intend to be present if we can possibly be spared from other duties.

ANNUAL MEETING. At the annual meeting of the Washington Total Abstinence Society of this town, held at the Lyceum Room on the 11th ult., the following named gentlemen were chosen its officers for the year ensuing:

President—Dea. George Baxter.
Vice Presidents—George W. Basley and Urbane Cudworth.
Corresponding Secretary—James M. Wade.
Recording Secretary—Theodore Kellogg.
Treasurer—Capt. John Hardwick.

CHEAP CASH STORE. Our readers will notice by the advertising columns, that D. M. Valentine of Boston, has no idea of 'getting through doing business' this winter, but goes upon the principle that all kinds of goods will sell at all seasons of the year, if bought cheap enough. His goods were all bought at the New York and Boston cash auctions, and he says will be sold twenty five to fifty per cent. below regular prices.

CATHOLIC ALMANAC FOR 1849. Donahoe, No. 1 Spring Lane, Boston, has this Almanac for the current year, published by F. Lucas, Jr., of Baltimore. It is in a convenient form, and contains more than three hundred pages, (besides the calendar ones), of information of much interest to the Catholic community. He has also for sale a large assortment of books for this religious denomination.

SINGULAR VERDICT. In an action for libel on the part of John Thompson, proprietor of Thompson's Bank Note Reporter, against Moses Y. Beach & Sons, proprietors of the New York Sun, the jury in New York have returned a verdict for the plaintiff of ten thousand dollars. We think this verdict worthy of the "dark ages" instead of the "enlightened era." In what the libel consists we have not been able to discern. It rather looks to us, however, not knowing anything about the so called libelous language, that the prosperity of the Sun establishment and the independence of its editorial columns have created a spirit to break down if possible, or annoy at least, this independent and able press. We trust the Messrs. Beach will carry the case to the highest tribunal in their power.

THE GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE. This document, as we stated, was communicated to the Legislature last week, but we had then no time to prepare a synopsis. The Governor recommends a revision of the militia law—the establishment of an asylum for idiots—the abolishment of capital punishment, except for murder in the first degree—and speaks with pride and favor of the State Reform school, at Westboro, for the reclamation of juvenile offenders.

On the subject of an increase in the salaries of the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas, he thus truly remarks:

'The unusual number of changes which have taken place in the Court of Common Pleas, within the last five years, necessarily have produced some delay in the business of the courts, and excited a good deal of public attention. During that period of time, nine judges have resigned their seats on the bench of that court. Eleven have been appointed, and as many as twelve gentlemen of the legal profession have, directly or indirectly declined to accept appointment as judges of that important court. The respectability and importance of that branch, of the interest of the people in its continuance, very naturally suggests inquiry into this remarkable state of things. I am satisfied, that what was deemed an inadequate salary, by the learned and competent judges, was, in nearly every instance, the reason which led them to retire from the bench. The same consideration operated upon the minds of those gentlemen who declined going there.'

He speaks with gratification of the proceedings of the Board of Education, in which he pays the following generous and deserved tribute to the Hon. Horace Mann:

'After five years of personal and official intercourse with Mr. Mann, it gives me pleasure to say, that these resolutions meet my entire and sincere approbation. He has made himself a benefactor of his race. The dexterity of his extraordinary services in the cause of education will be treasured up in the true hearts of one whole generation of the children of his native Commonwealth, who have been the witnesses of his labors and the partakers of their fruits. That memory will as certainly be transmitted to those who shall follow them, as one generation of men will, by the physical laws of their being, be succeeded by another.'

The Governor takes the highest ground against extending slavery into the new territories.

'Indications not to be misunderstood, authorize the belief, that the people of the free states have resolved that slavery is not to be extended over any territory belonging to the Union where it does not now exist. It is gratifying to know, that, among those who take this ground, there are many who lent their influence, and gave their support, to measures which led to the acquisition of new territory, and have brought the present question before the country.'

With reference to the Finances of the State, he thus figures:

Receipts into the Treasury the past year,	$550,000
Expenditures, over	538,000
Balance on the 1st inst., of nearly	12,000
Resources of the Commonwealth	$1,651,744
The debt	1,038,949
Balance in favor of the State	612,795

AUGUSTA BANK ROBBERY. Our readers will recollect the account of the robbery of the Augusta (Me.) Bank, a short time since. The robbers were two brothers, Frederic Augustus Wingate and Edward Wingate, of Charlestown, Mass. Edward was arrested in Augusta, and upon disclosing where he had concealed the money, was admitted to bail in the sum of two thousand dollars. He came immediately to Boston, and that indefatigable officer, City Marshal Tukey, forthwith went to work to trace him in order to find the elder brother, Frederic Augustus, having detailed for this purpose officer Heath to watch movements. On Friday of last week, the Boston officer ascertained that they were both in this town, and in the evening came out to arrest them, but during the day they had removed to Braintree. He procured the assistance of Deputy Sheriff George H. French and Mr. Dexter Faxon of this town, and went to Braintree, where he was joined by Constable J. R. Frazier and Mr. Ira R. Arnold. About ten o'clock that evening, they came upon the persons for whom they were in search, together with a third party, in the street. A desperate fight ensued, but the accused were at length secured. During the scuffle, a roll of bank bills, amounting to about two hundred and eighty dollars was thrown away, and was found near the spot the next morning. A further sum was found in a valise belonging to one of the prisoners. The younger brother was released in the morning as he was at large on bail, but the elder brother was conveyed to Maine, he having consented to go without an Executive requisition.

NEW YORK EXPRESS. This newspaper is of a large size and published weekly, semi-weekly and daily. The editors are James and Erastus Brooks, writers possessing that tact and talents peculiarly calculated to enhance the value and character of a paper. In politics, it advocates high principles, and the senior editor was chosen a member of the next Congress at the last election. It is one of the best, if it be not superior, to any other political paper published in New York City.

P. S. We hope our friends will not neglect to fulfill their promise as in the case of the publishers of the New York Tribune.

FIRE IN WEYMOUTH. The carpenter's shop of John O. Foye at Weymouth Landing, with the machinery, tools, a lot of doors, window sashes and blinds, together with lumber, was destroyed by fire last Saturday evening. There was an insurance on the building of seven hundred dollars at the Norfolk Mutual office at Dedham, and also an insurance of fifteen hundred dollars on the stock at the Dedham Mutual office. The loss will exceed three thousand dollars; and the fire is supposed to have been accidental.

The light seen in a northerly direction soon after the above conflagration was the destruction by fire of an unfinished building in Malden.

AMERICAN METROPOLITAN MAGAZINE. Such is the name given to a new monthly periodical issued in New York, by that enterprising publisher, Israel Post, the late proprietor of the Union Magazine, and edited by William Landon. The first or January number has been received, and from the "Introductory" we learn that "every department, both in literature and art, is to be original, and produced expressly by our best writers and artists, and that the engravings will be illustrative generally of American history or character." The mechanical execution will vie, if not rival, older publications of this character. The contributors embrace a large number distinguished for their literary abilities, as will be seen by the articles in the present issue. For literary merit, artistic excellence, and truthful fulfillment of promises, the public have a strong guaranty in the well established reputation of the publisher. It will be the very best three dollar Magazine in the country.

STEAMBOAT DESTROYED. The splendid steamer Empire State took fire at the wharf, in Fall River, about half past ten o'clock last Saturday evening, and was burnt to the water's edge. The origin of the fire is unknown, but is supposed to have been occasioned by the carelessness of the watchman on board. Every exertion was made to save the floating palace and furniture, but they were of no avail. She was one of the largest and finest boats plying to New York, and made her first trip on the sixth of June last. She was nineteen hundred tons burden—three hundred and nineteen feet long—forty feet and six inches breadth of beam—seventy-eight feet wide over all, and fourteen feet depth of hold. There was an insurance in Philadelphia and New York to the amount of about one hundred thousand dollars, which it is supposed will cover the loss. The silver ware was saved in a safe.

GENERAL COURT. The joint and other usual Committees have been appointed.

A petition has been presented for a bank charter in Dorchester.

Timothy J. Gridley of Amherst, has been chosen Councillor in place of Oeymyn Baker, who declined the office.

The Judiciary Committee were instructed to provide against the printing of shop bills after the manner and form of bank notes.

AN USEFUL PERIODICAL. The Boys' and Girls' Magazine and Fireside Companion, published by Bradbury & Guild of Boston, the January number of which we have received, is an excellent publication for boys and girls, containing as it does every month a large amount of instructive and entertaining knowledge, besides being embellished with appropriate illustrations.

THE TRUE RESULT. The official vote, in the four Congressional districts of this State, in which second trials were recently made, shows that, in District No. 2, Mr. King's majority is 689; in No. 4, Mr. Palfrey lacks 86 votes of an election; in No. 5, Mr. Allen's majority is 1733; and in No. 9, Mr. Fowler's majority is 171.

CONGRESS. More talk about the mileage of members. Some discussion about slavery. Random remarks concerning a government for California. Presentation of petitions, etc. Some speeches on the reduction of postage rates. This is the sum and substance of Congress business the past week.

The slaveholder's meeting clearly shows to the few hot heads that a great many of their number will stick to the Constitution and the Union.

LEGISLATIVE AGRICULTURAL ASSOCIATION. This Society has held its first meeting for the session in the Chamber of Representatives. Marshall P. Wilder of Dorchester was unanimously chosen President; Lieut. Governor John Reed, first Vice President; Cromwell Leonard, second Vice President, and the Editors of the Agricultural journals in Boston, Secretaries. The business was principally the organization of the Society.

In Tennessee there are seven cotton factories at work, and it is said that arrangements are making for erecting others.

The President of France means to live in splendor. Thirty servants are already engaged for his residence. Louis Phillip's Chateau de Neuilly is to be rebuilt for him by subscription.

It is stated that during the thirty four past years, 233 steamboats have exploded; causing the death of 2563 persons and wounding 2099. The pecuniary loss has been $3,099,356.

The debt of the C. nadass is stated as being nearly fourteen millions of dollars—a dead weight not likely to be lessened by the additional evils of an extravagant system of official expenditure and a decreasing revenue.

The Legislature of New Hampshire have voted a sword to Brig. Gen. Franklin Peirce, to be presented by the Governor in the name of the State.

The majority for Governor Johnston, in Pennsylvania, by the official count, is 297.

Columbus sailed from Spain on Friday, discovered land on Friday, and re-entered the port of Palos on Friday. These curious coincidences should have sufficed, one might think, to dispel the superstitious dread still so prevalent of commencing a voyage on that day.

Isaac O. Barnes, Esq. has been appointed by the President, Marshal of the District of Massachusetts from the 15th inst, when his present Commission expired.

Marmont and Soul are the only survivors of Napoleon's marshals.

Of about thirty-four millions inhabitants of France, eight millions voted for President at the late election. In this country at the last election there was not quite three millions.

During the mild weather of the winter, fruit grafts may be cut. If packed in a box of moist saw dust and placed in a cellar, they will be ready for use in the grafting season in the spring.

During the year 1846, the amount of boots and shoes manufactured in the Eastern States was $15,000,000; during 1847, $17,000,000; and even this vast amount is said not to have been sufficient to meet the orders.

The death is recorded of Lieut. Col. Roger S. Dix of the United States Army. He was an Aid to Gen. Taylor at the battle of Buena Vista. He was also with Gen. Scott on the Black Hawk expedition.

No fewer than nineteen thousand one hundred and seventeen dead letters have been transmitted, by post, to Washington—they being those accumulated at the Boston Post Office during the last quarter of a year.

An old man of seventy-seven years of age, named Jesse Bates, from Cohasset, who had been an inmate for a number of years of the poor-house there, wandered away on Sunday last and coming to Boston he met with some friends, who plied him with liquor and left him to the mischances attendant upon old age and helpless poverty. He wandered until eleven o'clock at night, when he fell into the dock at the foot of Long wharf, and was rescued by the crew of the bark Hamilton, alongside. It was feared the shock would cause death.

A newspaper establishment at Springfield (Mass.) sued a mercantile firm on a bill of advertising. The firm refused payment, because the advertisement was incorrectly published. To this the plaintiffs responded by proving that the errors were caused by the inferior writing of the manuscript, which could not be read. Verdict was given for the plaintiffs.

The Hon. A. H. Dodge, (dem) has been re-elected Senator, to serve for six years from the fourth of March next, from the State of Iowa.

R. Manning, of Salem (Mass.) cutting off all the blossoms from a Baldwin apple tree, in the spring of bearing year, changed the fruitful year to the following season. The unfruitful seasons have become bearing years, and vice versa.

The whole amount expended by New York City in fitting out the Mexican Volunteers, the funeral obsequies of the officers and the presentation of medals did not fall short of sixteen thousand dollars.

A sailor who while at sea allows his wife half pay, is not responsible for her debts. Such is the decision of the English Court.

Hon. William Appleton has been elected President of the Provident Institution for Savings in place of Hon. Peter C. Brooks, deceased.

London papers announce the decease of Professor Samuel Cooper, the eminent surgeon and author of Cooper's Surgical Dictionary.

The Board of Overseers of Harvard College have nominated Jared Sparks, LL. D. to the office of president of that institution.

R. K. Meade of Virginia, in a speech delivered last week in Congress, estimated the slave property in the Union as high as nine hundred millions of dollars.

Washington Goodie, convicted of the wilful murder of Thomas Harding, in Boston, a few months ago, has been sentenced to be executed on such a day as the Chief Magistrate of the Commonwealth may appoint.

In the late Cambridge Court of Common Pleas a constable was prosecuted in a suit for slander brought by a man against whom he had a civil process. The man had run off on seeing him approach, whereupon the constable pursued him, crying "stop thief." The jury rendered a verdict for the plaintiff assessing the damages at six cents.

Twenty cases of scarlet fever existed among the children of the Female Orphan Asylum in Boston on Sunday last, says the Medical and Surgical Journal.

The number of vessels up at New York for the Gold Region is so great that the bakers of ship-bread, though working day and night, are unable to supply the demand, and many vessels are consequently detained beyond their appointed time. The amount of bread manufactured there has averaged fifty thousand pounds per day since the first of December last, or more than two millions of pounds in all.

The Golden Valley of California is five hundred miles long and fifty miles broad—about as large as all Ireland.

Is your Liver Diseased?

You may find relief if you will but try in New Jersey, Bordentown, Oct. 25.

Mr. Seth W. Fowler, Dear Sir—I am well aware that persons of age and sex, and condition in life, in every country, have used, and been benefited by, DR. WISTAR'S BALM OF WILD C.

My own life has been saved by it. My mother and my mother's family were both consumptive, father, mother, and a sister died with that fatal disease. I have been predisposed to it.

About one year ago I was quite sick for a week, confined to my bed when the pain in my side would allow me to lay. My physician prescribed a course of liver complaint, but my side was so severe that the cataplasms prescribed by the doctor affected me. I was cupped and had various other remedies applied, but purpose; I got no relief. At last my physician could not cure me. I expected to die.

provisionally, I was, of, and obtained, a young Balm, which relieved me at once. I was encouraged to persevere in using it, until I cured five bottles, which saved my life and cured my health is now good. For Liver Complaints it is a most certain cure.

Signed, MARTHA A. BETO, I am acquainted with Mrs. Betto's life is true.

Dear Sir—Having tested the value of your pills and Tomato Bitters, I take pleasure in telling you the facts of my case for your own satisfaction and the benefit of others. I have been suffering from Erysipelas humor in my side, causing my arm to swell very much, and to be painful some time, and for some time previous, I was troubled with a weak stomach; most of my food was thrown up, and I had a singular pain in the stomach, which has been increasing, and me much difficulty. After I commenced taking Bitters, I could perceive a gradual and immediate relief, and would recommend it with much confidence to those who are troubled with such complaints.

Yours, truly, WM. DONN

A sure cure for Dyspepsia and Costiveness.
HARRISON'S PERISTALTICS have had 12 years' trial by the Medical Faculty and the public generally. This medicine is in Lozenges, pleasant to the taste, and may be given to children. The Peristaltics improve the digestive organs and invigorate the whole system. They cure Costiveness, Headache, Dizziness, Sleepiness, Jaundice, Oppression after Eating, Liver Complaint, Diarrhoea, Piles, Dropsy, Debility, Faintness, Weak Stomach, Heartburn, Palpitation, Rheumatism, Pains in the Bones, Scrofula, The Douletous Worms, &c., &c.
These Lozenges are excellent in all Nervous complaints and dyspeptic symptoms. Female Suppressions and irregularities, especially in the young. This medicine contains no preparation of Mercury whatever, and no ingredient which may not safely be given to the most delicate female and under any circumstances.
This preparation is also put up in bottles for searing persons, who should always have a supply. An occasional use of the Peristaltics prevents Fevers, Bilious complaints, and chronic or East India Diarrhoea.
They are admirably adapted to the complaints incident to the coast of Africa, Sumatra, West Indies and South America.
These Lozenges are recommended by some of the best Physicians in Boston, who use them in their families and general practice. All afflicted with oppression after eating, or rising of food will find great relief. They are the best medicine for children known.

WHITWELL'S PINK ROOT SYRUP.
Spigilla, or Indian Pink,
has been in use for hundreds of years among the Indian tribes of North America, as a certain remedy
for Worms.
Almost every family in N. E., is acquainted with its use. The great and only objection heretofore to its use, has been that it was necessary to pour half a pint down a child's throat in order to destroy and ex-pell the worms; but that objection exists no longer.
In the Pink Root Syrup, you have the strongest possible preparation of the Pink root, united with CAT-HARTHUS and Tonics, made into a pleasant and healthful Syrup, which children will take without any trouble. Indeed, they like it much, and will population."

There are a few interesting facts, of which we wish to remind you, and which we are inclined to think it will be for your advantage as well as ours to remember.
1st. That at the QUINCY BOOKSTORE you will find all the
SCHOOL BOOKS
in use in this and the neighboring towns.
2d. That at the same place you will find every kind of
Blank Account Book,
RECORD or MEMORANDUM BOOK.
3d. That there you will find a great assortment of
Miscellaneous, Juvenile and Toy Books.
4th. That there you will find all kinds of
STATIONERY.
5th. That there you will find an innumerable variety of
FANCY GOODS.
6th. That all the above will be sold at the very Lowest Market Prices.
7th. That we are entirely disinterested when we say that you will be much better satisfied with your selves and your bargains if you trade at home, in preference to "out of town."
8th. That there you will find a GOOD LIBRARY
where you can procure reading on reasonable terms.
9th. That the Proprietors are agents for all the popular MAGAZINES, receiving the subscriptions
themselves and furnishing the numbers on their own responsibility, free of any expense. Many have forgotten this of late, preferring to subscribe of some travelling agent, to one in their own town.
10th. That they RE-PRINT old Books, Pamphlets, Periodicals, Music, etc., "as cheap as they can afford to and as quick as anybody."
These things we wish to call to your memory, because while we have been moving on in a quiet kind of a way, you seem partly to have forgotten the old place, thinking perhaps that we did not keep up with the times in the variety of our goods and also in prices.
Our rule, like that of many others, is, "quick sales and small profits," therefore call in and we will supply you most satisfactorily.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.
LOVE THE LORD.

Love the Lord, our teachers cry!
Love him, teacher! tell me why?
Is it that we here are found
Lab'ring on the rich man's ground?
From the cradle to the grave,
Toiling, toiling like the slave?
Suffering sickness want and pain,
Ever toiling still in vain,
Flourished by the rich and proud,
Jostled by the thoughtless crowd,
Subject to the cold world's frown,
Not a foot of earth our own,
Where we may unchalleng'd tread
Or unlicensed earn our bread,—
All that God has made so fair
Fraud and force and cunning share,
For a life precarious lent
Must we say we are content?
Victims of the plague and sword,
Must we praise and love Lord.

Yes, for know his promise sure,
All who faithful shall endure,
In a better world than this
Reap the joys of endless bliss.
Time shall pass like night away,
Ush'ring in eternal day,
Patient bear life's transient ill,
Love the Lord and trust him still.

F. M. ADLINGTON, Weymouth.

SONG OF THE SNOW BIRD.

The ground was all covered with snow one day,
And two little sisters were busy at play,
When a snow-bird was sitting close by on a tree,
And merrily singing his chick-a-de-de.

He had not been singing that tune very long Ere Emily heard him, so loud was that song,
'O, sister, look out of the window,' said she,
'Here's a dear little bird singing chick-a-de-de.'

'Poor fellow! he walks in the snow and the sleet,
And has neither stockings nor shoes to his feet;
I pity him so! how cold he must be!
And yet he keeps singing his chick-a-de-de.'

'If I were a bare-footed snow-bird, I know
I would not stay out in the cold and the snow;
I wonder what makes him so full of his glee,
He's all the time singing his chick-a-de-de.'

'O, mother! do get him some stockings and shoes,
And a nice little frock to wear if he chooses;
I wish he would come into the parlor and see How warm we could make him, poor chick-a-de-de.'

The bird hath flown down from some pieces of bread,
And heard every word little Emily said;
'What a figure I'd make in that dress!' thought he,
And he laughed as he warbled his chick-a-de-de.

'I'm grateful,' said he, 'for the wish you express,
But I have no occasion for such a fine dress;
I had rather remain with my limbs all free,
Then he hobbled about, singing chick-a-de-de.'

'There is One, my dear child, though I cannot tell who
Hath clothed me already, and warm enough, too,
Good morning! O, who are so happy as we?
And away he went, singing his chick-a-de-de.'

THE TEAR-DROP.

Restrain not the tear-drop
Which fond memory would shed,
'Tis the rich dew-drop
On the grave of the dead;

Reviving each flower
Which encircles the tomb;
And imparting, each hour,
Fresh beauty and bloom.

Such pearls of affection
May fall to the ground,
To chasten affliction,
Or shed lustre around.

Spare not their effusion—
They are gems of the soul;
And, if shed in profusion,
Seek not their control.

ANECDOTES.

'What's the matter of your zeal?' said a nasal-voiced Yankee to a street-butcher, the other morning. 'What makes it look so blue?' Didn't die, did it? 'No, said the other, 'I did n't die, zactly; it kind o' gin coute!'

In some parish churches it is the custom to separate the men from the women. A clergyman, being interrupted by loud talking, stopped short, when a woman, eager for the honor of her sex, arose and said—'Your Reverence, the noise is not among us.' 'So much the better,' answered the priest, 'it will be the sooner over.'

'What cartload headed ugly little brat is that, madam? do you know his name?' 'Why, yes, that's my youngest son.' 'You don't say so, indeed! why, what a beautiful little sweet dove eyed cherub he is, to be sure.'

Two gentlemen were lately examining the breast of a plow on a stall in a market place. 'I'll bet you a guinea,' said one, 'you don't know what this is for.' 'Done,' said the other, 'it's for sale.' The bet was won and the wager paid.

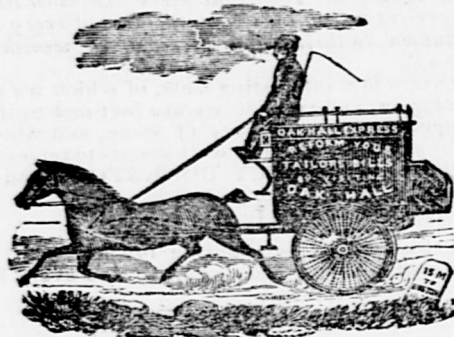

A notion seller was offering a Yankee clock, finely varnished and colored, and with a looking glass in front, to a certain lady not remarkable for personal beauty. 'Why, it is beautiful,' said the vender. 'Beautiful, indeed! a look at it almost frightens me,' said the lady.

'Then, marm,' replied Jonathan, 'I guess you'd better take one that ain't got no looking glass.'

'Out of darkness cometh light,' as the printer's devil said when he looked into the ink keg.

THE DISCOVERY.

'It is a party evening,' said Mr Dornton, the retired stock-broker, as he settled himself in the last inside place of the last Fulham coach, driven by our friend Mat—an especial friend in need, he remembered, to the fair sex.

'I wouldn't be outside,' said Mr Jones, another stock-broker, 'for a trifle.'

'Nor as a speculator in opinions,' said Mr Parsons, another frequenter of the Alley.

'I wonder what Mat is waiting for,' said Mr Tidwell, 'for we are full inside and out.'

Mr. Tidwell's doubt was soon solved—the coach door opened, and Mat somewhat ostentatiously inquired what indeed he very well knew—I believe every place is took up inside!

'We are all here,' answered Mr Jones, on behalf of the usual complement of old stagers.

'I told you so, Ma'am,' said Mat to a female who stood beside him, but still leaving the door open to an invitation from within. However, nobody spoke—on the contrary, I felt Mr Hindmarsh, my next neighbor dilating himself like the frog in the fable.

'I don't know what I shall do,' exclaimed the woman; 'I've no place to go to, and it's raining cats and dogs.'

'You'd better not hang about anyhow,' said Mat—for you may catch your death—and I am the last coach—aint I, Mr Jones?

'To be sure you are,' said Mr Jones rather impatiently, 'shut the door.'

'I told the lady the gentlemen couldn't make room for her,' answered Mat, in a tone of apology. 'I'm very sorry my dear,' (turning towards the female), 'you should have my seat, if you could hold the ribbons—but such a pretty one as you ought to have a coach of her own.'

He began slowly closing the door.

'Stop, Mat, stop!' cried Mr Dornton, and the door quickly unclosed again; 'I can't give up my place, for I am expected home to dinner; but if the lady wouldn't object to sit on my knees—'

'Not the least in the world,' answered Mat, eagerly, 'you won't object, will you Ma'am, for once in a way, with a married gentleman, and a wet night, and the last coach on the road?'

'If I thought I shouldn't uncommodate,' said the lady, precipitately furling her umbrella, which she handed in to one gentleman whilst she favored another with her muddy patterns.

She then followed herself, Mat shutting the door behind in such a manner as to help her in. 'I'm sure I'm much obliged for the favor,' she said, looking round, 'but which gentleman was so kind?'

'It was I who had the pleasure of proposing, Madam,' said Mr Dornton, and before he had pronounced the last words, she was in his lap with an assurance that she would sit as lightly as she could. Both parties seemed very well pleased with the arrangement; but to judge according to the rules of Lavater, the rest of the company were but ill at ease. For my own part, I candidly confess I was equally out of humor with myself and the person who had set me such an example of gallantry. I, who had read the lays of Troubadours—the awards of 'Courts of love' the lives of the 'preux Chevaliers'—the history of Sir Charles Grandison—to be outdone in courtesy to the sex by a married stock-broker! How I grudged him the honor she conferred upon him—how I envied his feelings!

I did not stand alone, I suspect, in this unjustifiable jealousy; Messrs. Jones, Hindmarsh, Tidwell and Parsons, seemed equally disinclined to forgive the chivalrous act which had as true knights lowered all our crests, and blotted our escutcheons, and cut off our spurs. Many an unfair jibe was launched at the champion of the fair and when he attempted to enter into conversation with the lady, he was interrupted by questions of, 'What is stirring in the

Alleys?' 'What is doing in Dutch?' 'How are the Reins?'

To all these questions Mr. Dornton incidentally returned business-like answers, according to the last Stock Exchange quotations; and he was in the middle of an enumeration, that so and so were very low, and this rather brisk and that getting up, and operations, and fluctuations, and so forth, when somebody enquired about Spanish Bonds.

'They are looking up my dear,' answered Mr Dornton, somewhat abstractedly; and before the other stock brokers were done uttering, the stage stopped. A bell was rung, and Mat stood beside the open coach door; a staid female in calash and clogs, with a lantern in her hand, came clattering pompously down a front garden.

'Is Susan Pegge come?' inquired a shrill voice.

'Yes I be,' replied the lady who had been dry-nursed from town—are you Ma'am, number ten, Grove Place?'

'This is Mr Dornton's,' said the dignified woman in the hood, advancing her lantern—and—mercy on us! you're in master's lap!'

A shout of laughter from five of the inside passengers corroborated the assertion, and like a literal cat out of the bag, the cidevant lady forgetting her umbrella and her patterns bolted out of the coach, and with feline celerity rushed up the garden, and down the area of number ten.

'Renounce the woman!' said Mr Dornton as she scuttled out of the stage—Why the devil didn't she tell me she was the new cook?'

YOUNG WOMEN IN HUNGARY.

Every year, at the feast of St. Peter, which comes on in the latter days of June, the peasantry of this district (Bihar) meet together at a certain place for the purpose of a general fair. This fair has a very peculiar interest for the young maidens, for it is there that, whilst purchasing household utensils and family necessities, they choose for themselves partners, and conclude marriages. The parents bring their grown up daughters, with each one her little dowry accompanying her, loaded up in a small cart. This dowry is coarse, proportionate to the lowly condition of these mountaineers—some sheep, sometimes a few hogs, or even chickens. These girls are attired in their best, or what pieces of gold and silver coin they may possess are strung upon a string and neatly attached to the braids of their hair.

Thus fitted out, every girl who desires to find a husband, betakes herself to the fair. She quits the house of her father, perhaps forever and bids her mother adieu, quite ignorant of what roof is to shelter her, or what fate awaits her at the journey's end. As to her fortune it is in the little cart that attends her. The object of her journey is never mistaken, nobody wonders at it, nor is there occasion for a public officer to make record of the deed. On the other hand, the youths who wish to procure themselves wives, hasten to the fair arrayed in the very best skin garments their chests contained. These savage looking chaps, who would be quite enough to make our young ladies run and hide themselves, proceed with a good deal of personal interest and zest, to inspect the fair mountain lasses that are brought thither by their fathers and their uncles, casting many side glances and wishful looks towards the captivating merchandise. He gives his free rein, and when he finds one that seems to claim his preference, he at once addresses the parents, asks what they have given her, and asks what price they have set upon the lot so exposed for sale—at the same time stating his property and standing. If the parents ask too much, these gallant "boys" make their own offer, which, if it does not suit the other, the fond lover passes on to seek for some one else.

We may suppose that the prudent young men always keep a "top eye" open to the correspondence of loveliness upon the one hand and the size of the dowry upon the other. At last he finds one for whom he is willing to give the price, and a loud clapping of the hands together announces to the bystanders that the bargain is complete. What a terrible blow this must be for some lady rival who has not decided quick enough, who is halting and considering whether she will suit him, and whether she is as lovely and accomplished in household matters as some of the others. However, the deed is done and the bargain is completed, and forthwith the young girl (poor thing) proceeds also to clasp the hand of her future husband. What a moment of interest and anxiety to her! The destiny of her life was sealed by the rude clasp of the hand. In this fact she as much as said, "Yes, I will be yours for life, and I consent to partake of your joys and troubles, to follow you through weal and through woe!"

The families of the "betrothed" pair then surround them, offering their congratulations, and at once, without delay, the priest who is upon the ground for the occasion, pronounces the nuptial benediction. Then comes the moment of separation—the young woman presses the parting hand of that family who has reared her but of which she is no longer a part—mounts the cart of her new husband, whom but a few hours before she never so much as knew, and escorted by her dowry, is conducted to the house thenceforward to be her home.

The Hungarian Government has long tried, but in vain, to suppress these fairs for young girls. Positive orders have been given, that they should no longer take place, but such is the force of long established custom, united to the necessities of this pastoral race, that all such orders have been disregarded. The fair still continues, and every year such cavalcades as we have described may be seen descending into the plains of Kalmassa, there to barter off these precious jewels of the household tree, as though they were senseless beavers or mere produce of the soil.

FIGHTING A WIND-MILL.

A short time since, a stout, pugnacious seafaring individual was wending his way slowly down one of the wharves of Boston, towards his ship. The night was dark, and he had been 'seeing' the 'farnal critter' to such an extent as to render him quite bellicose in his feelings and somewhat unsteady in his gait.

'Now I should just like to see the cove what can stan' up afore me; by —ye —!' and he gesticulated furiously with both arms in most approved style.

'It would be some't of a treat to give a feller a reg'lar broadside—wouldn't I douse his gim? may be I wouldn't—'

'Hallo! hullo!—who's that struck me?' cried he in a frenzy of passion, as he ran his face, with a force that nearly prostrated him, against a capstan bar that had been left without being unshipped.

'Fair play—fair play—an' no skulking in the dark—jist stan' out if you want—'

Meanwhile the force with which he had run against the bar pushed the capstan around, and another bar which was also in place came up behind and dealt him a blow on the back of his head.

'Oh! ho! my coves, two of ye, is there—and one of ye abait the beam—ye d-d Mexicans—but I'm good for twenty—'

He had barely time to change fronts and defend himself in the rear, before the last given blow brought back the first bar, and he received another heavy blow in the (then) rear.

'Clubs?—ha!—d-n ye, ye cowards!'—and he showered his blows upon the unoffending air with a weight that would have felled a brace of giants.

The other bar came up like a returning shuttle-cock and another blow from the wooden monster fell upon his ear.

'Brickbats?—ye skulkers—ye robbers—but I'll—'

Here the battle raged "fast and furious" and in proportion to the rapidity of the onsets, were they returned. The blows fell like "lightnings from the mountain cloud." He stood up manfully for a time—the bent bow—the muttered curse—the execration, all told of the determination manifested; but it was no avail—down went the hero in the dust.

A party of men proceeding down the wharf shortly after, were attracted by the strange murmuring noise; there they found the hero battered and bruised in a shocking manner, but still "striking out" manfully in the dust.

DEPTH OF PLOUGHING.

All cultivated plants are benefited by a deep permeable soil, through which their roots can penetrate in search of food; and although depth of soil is not fully equivalent to its superficial extension, it is evident that there must be a great increase of product from this cause. For general tillage crops, the depth of soil may be gradually augmented to about twelve inches, with decided advantage. Such are appropriated to gardens and horticultural purposes may be deepened to fifteen and even eighteen inches to the manifest profit of their occupants. But whatever is the depth of the soil the plough ought to turn up the entire mass, if within its reach; and what is beyond it should be thoroughly broken up by the subsoil plough, and some of it occasionally incorporated with that, upon the surface.

The subsoil only ought not to be brought out of its bed, except in small quantities, to be exposed to the atmosphere during the fall, winter, and spring, or in a summer fallow; nor even then, but with the application of such fertilizers as are necessary to put it at once into a productive condition. The depth of the soil can alone determine the depth of ploughing; and when that is too shallow, the gradual deepening of it should be sought by the use of proper materials for improvement till the object is fully attained. Two indifferent soils of opposite characters, as of a stiff clay and sliding sand sometimes occupy the relation of surface and subsoil towards each other; and when intimately mixed and subjected to the meliorating influence of cultivation, they will frequently produce a soil of great value.

FLOWERS. How the universal heart of man blesses flowers! They are wreathed round the cradle, the marriage altar, and the tomb. The Persian in the far East delights in their perfume, and writes his love in nosegays while the Indian child of the far West clasps his hands with glee, as he gathers the abundant blossoms—the illuminated scripture of the prairies. The Cupid of the ancient Hindoos tipped his arrows with flowers, and orange buds are the bridal crowns with us, a nation of yesterday. Flowers garlanded the Grecian altar, and they hung in votive wreaths before the Christian shrine. All these are appropriate uses. Flowers should deck the brow of the youthful bride, for they are in themselves a lovely type of marriage. They should twine round the tomb, for their perpetually renewed beauty is a symbol of the resurrection. They should festoon the altar for their fragrance and their beauty ascend in perpetual worship before the Most High.

A NIGHT BEFORE THE WEDDING.

'We shall be very happy together,' said Louisa to her Aunt, the evening before the wedding—and her cheek was tinged with a rich color and her eyes sparkled with soul-felt happiness.

When a young bride says 'we,' it may easily be imagined whom she is talking of.

'I doubt it not, dearest Louisa,' answered her aunt, 'take heed only, that you remain as happy.'

'O! no fear of that, my prudent aunt, I know myself and my faults; but my love for him will correct them. So long as they love each other, we can never be unhappy and our affections cannot change.'

'Ah! said her aunt, 'you talk like a girl of nineteen on the eve of marriage, in the heyday of hope and bright anticipations. Dear child—believe, even the heart grows old. The day must come, when the rapture of passion will decay: when the delusion is over and we stand revealed in our real characters. After custom has robbed beauty of its dazzling charms—after youth has departed or shadows mingled with the light of home, then, Louisa, the wife may talk of the excellencies of her husband, or husband of the admirable qualities of his wife. But the day before the wedding, such encomiums go for nothing with me.'

'I understand you, dear aunt. You mean to say the virtues only of each can give lasting pleasure to the other. Now for myself I say nothing—for I can boast only will; but you cannot deny that my betrothed is the best and most deserving of all the young men of this town! Are not all virtues that lead to happiness blooming in him?'

'I will do you both justice,' answered her relative, 'and acknowledge that virtues bloom in both; I can say that to you without flattery. Louisa, my love, they only bloom, and need a lifetime of rain and sunshine to ripen them. No blossoms are more deceitful at first opening. We cannot know in what soil they are rooted. Who knows the hidden heart?'

'Nay, my dear child, even could you always be as you are, youth and beauty would lose the power to charm, with habit and their constant presence. Men grow soon weary of the loveliest face. Besides, your husband must grow old himself; and then youthful manners will cease to please him. Your habits, your tastes, would not be congenial,' Louisa sighed.

'I could store your memory,' resumed her aunt, 'with precepts to guard your happiness. I would tell you to beware the first quarrel; never to contend even in jest; to have no secrets from each other, lest the springs of confidence be insensibly snapped; to beware of the interference of relations. But these are maxims which your prudence will sufficiently impress upon you, and their observance at best will have but a negative effect.'

'Would you have the secret of perpetual loveliness. It is a treasure—not feature or complexion, but in the soul. Men worship beauty for the inward graces of which it is the pledge. Would you know how to keep the soul fair?—religion is the only true secret for that.'

'Thus you see my love, how little we can depend upon personal perfection; how little on mental excellencies or amiable traits of character. But, the virtues born of, and nourished by religion, are immortal—seek them from Him who is the author of religion; and seek them daily from Him. Be assured thus, that you will ever remain fair and amiable in the eyes of your husband, and be blessed in every relation of life.'

Louisa flung her arms around her aunt's neck and thanked her with tearful eyes for her lesson.

EVENING LECTURE OF MRS. JONES, CONCERNING NEWSPAPERS.

Well Jones, you are a pretty fellow—here you've come home again as drunk as a biled owl, and you don't know yourself from four dollars and a half. The children are crying for bread, their clothes are worn out, and here I have to slave, slave the whole blessed day, till I have not a whole rag to my back; and, what there is, sticks as tight to me as the skin does to the model artists old Mrs. Smith tells about.

'We must retrench,' Retrench, indeed. I'd like to see what you'd retrench about this house, except vices and clothes; and I'm sure we've none to spare in them respects. You wouldn't want your own flesh and blood to go naked and hungry, would you? You're are too much of a man, if you be an old brute, Jones, for that. If you'd keep to your work, and mind your own business, be steady, and stop your drinking all day and speering all night, times would be a heap better for us. You aint the man, Jones, you was when I give you my virgin affections; you don't come into the house modestly, and lift off your hat, and say good evening Miss Hetty, and draw your chair close up to mine, and then take hold of my hand and kind of blush, and then hitch up a little closer, and—'

'Don't make a fool of myself!' I ain't a going to Jones; but it sort a does my old heart good to call up these reminiscences, and wish it had always been so. But you are as tender hearted as a turtle dove, and just as sensible, when you have any sense, as any body. Set down, Jones, and eat your supper, and tell me all the news a flying—'

'You've stopped the paper!' You lie, Jones; you know you lie. You'd a stopped your wind first, you'd a stopped the children's bread, you'd a—'

'You couldn't afford it! Aint you got no conscience, Jones, to let on so? The paper costs you four cents a week, and the printer takes all kind of truck for pay. And here it's Saturday night, and I'd like to know how much money you've thrown away this week. I'll count it up. I'll give you a blessing before I get through. It ain't often I catch you at home and when I do you'll take it for better or worse, as the saying is. There's a gallon of whiskey on Monday morning, costs thirty seven and a half cents; there's half a gallon of beer on Tuesday cost eighteen pence; there's a shilling to treat that old flummix that come along and said he knowed you when you was a boy. The Lord only knows how much you've spent today; it must have took a heap of change, for you ain't an old sponge, Jones, you don't get drunk on any body's money but your own; and I reckon it must a took at least a quarter to make a man drunk enough to stop his paper. Well, now, I'll go and count it all up; three shillings and eighteen pence, and one shilling, and a quarter just makes ninety-four cents. In my opinion as good as that very sum thrown into the fire, and better, too; and that would a most paid for the 'Telescope' a whole year; and I expect the printer needs the money as bad as most folks. There's a power of economy in such doings. Why what would a body know if it wasn't for the paper; and now, too, when there's so many parties, and a body wants to know how to vote?'

'Wimmen don't vote!' Well, I know it, and it's a great pity they don't. They'd revolutionize the world and have a provisional government every where, as they call it; and they'd—they wouldn't kill off all the men, not quite, cause they're useful in their places; but they'd make them keep their places, mind. I tell you, Jones. But, as I was saying about the printer, we must have the news; wiser varsey, we must have printers, and if they can live without nothing to eat, then they're the critters that's in advance of the age, for the people of this generation make a god of their bellies, according to the best of their belief. Another thing, I should'n't wonder if you stopped the paper and never paid for it; and then you'll get published in the black list, and your poor wife's reputation be ruined, and your children go to the penitentiary. It won't do Jones; it won't do; and here she broke off, for Jones was asleep!

COURT SCENE.

There is a point beyond which human forbearance cannot go, and the most even of tempers will become ruffled at times. At the Assizes held during the last year at Lincoln in England, both Judge and counsel had much trouble to make the timid witnesses upon a trial speak sufficiently loud to be heard by the jury, and it is possible that the temper of the counsel may thereby have been turned from the even tenor of its way, and the more likely perhaps owing to his feeling himself to be a man of considerable importance since he had married a dowager Duchess. After this gentleman had gone through the various stages of blarneying, and had coaxed, threatened, and even bullied witnesses, there was one called into the box, a young ostler, who appeared to be simplicity personified.

'Now, sir,' said the above named counsel, in a tone which at any other time would have been denounced as vulgarly loud, 'I hope we shall have no difficulty in making you speak up.'

'I hope not, sir,' was shouted or rather belated out by the witness, in tones which almost shook the building, and would have certainly alarmed any timid and nervous lady.

'How dare you speak in that way, sir?' said the counsel.

'Please, zur, I can't speak no louder, zur,' said the astonished witness, attempting to shout louder than before, evidently thinking the fault to be his speaking too low.

'Pray, have you been drinking this morning?' shouted the counsel, who had now thoroughly lost the last remnant of his temper.

'Yes, zur,' was the reply.

'And what have you been drinking?'

'Coffee, zur.'

'And what did you have in your coffee, sir?'

'I shouted the exasperated counsel.

'A spune, zur,' was the answer, innocently spoken, amid the roars of the whole Court, excepting only the now thoroughly wild counsel, who flung down his brief and rushed out of the Court.

HOW TO ENLARGE VEGETABLES. A vast increase of food may be obtained by managing judiciously, and systematically carrying out for a time the principal of increase. Take, for instance, a pea. Plant it in a very rich ground. Allow it to bear the first year say half a dozen pods only: remove all others. Save the largest single pea of these, sow it the next year, and retain of the produce three pods only; sow the largest one the following year, and retain one pod. Again select the largest, and the next year the sort will by this time have trebled its size and weight. Ever afterwards sow the largest seed. By this means you will get peas (or any thing else) of a bulk of which we at present have no conception.

WORLDLY FRIENDSHIP. A writer compared worldly friendship to our shadow, and a better comparison was never made: for while we walk in sunshine, it sticks close to us; but the moment we enter the shade it deserts us.

PAUPER ABSTRACT FOR 1848. The number of persons supported in the State as paupers last year, was 18,693. Not one-half, 7165, had a legal settlement in the town or elsewhere in the Commonwealth. Number of State paupers, 9434; foreigners, 7413—of this number 6707 were from England and Ireland; 1454 of these came into the Commonwealth within one year. Paupers made so by intemperance in themselves or others, 8566; by reason of insanity or idiocy 729; insane, relieved or supported, 611; idiots relieved or supported, 324. Number of persons relieved in Alms Houses during the year, 8833; average number supported in alms houses, 4028; number unable to perform labor, 4087. Number aided and supported out of alms houses, 9817. The average weekly cost of supporting each pauper in the alms houses, 101 1-3c; weekly cost of supporting paupers out of the house, 107 1-3c. Value of labor performed in alms houses, $16,232. The whole number of alms houses in the State is 174, to which are attached 16,667 acres of land. Value of these establishments, $1,056,494. Net amount of expense of supporting and relieving paupers, including interest on Alms House establishments $372,749.75. The lowest average weekly cost of supporting paupers, in Alms houses, is in Franklin county, 75 cts; highest in Suffolk, $1.30 2-3. The lowest out of the house, is in Essex county 50, 5-22 highest in Suffolk, $2.50. No returns were received from thirty six towns, and from five the returns were received too late for the Abstract.

THE UNION. It is a fact worth noticing, says the Philadelphia Inquirer, that while certain restless and ambitious spirits of the South are busily engaged in an effort to get up a crisis, the great masses of the people North and South are not consulted in the slightest manner. The attachment to the Union every where throughout the Confederacy, except perhaps in South Carolina, was never stronger than at this moment. The press truly reflects the sentiments of the people in this matter, and we cannot name half a dozen public journals in the United States that sympathize with the ultras of the Southern Cause or Convention. Why then, should these men strive so earnestly to kindle excitement, fever and sectional prejudice? The masses are sound to the core. They love the Republic as it is, and the individual who with ambitious objects, or under a momentary excitement, would deliberately attempt to sever the Union, would justly merit the severest indignation of every true-hearted American. The Ultras should understand this condition of popular sentiment, and govern themselves accordingly.—Boston Transcript.

HOW TO FIND THE VALUE OF CALIFORNIA.—Multiply Typee by Baron Munchausen—add the seven league boots of Jack the Giant Killer—carry the Moon Hoax, raised to its fifteenth power, to the amount, with its unit figure in the column of millions—cast out the nines and subtract seventeen thousand and nine hundred and thirty seven from the result—square the remainder of the Arabian Nights Entertainments—to which add seventeen new voyages of Sindbad the Sailor, a topsail schooner load of Aladdin's lamps, (latest patterns) and the great carbuncle for Mount Jebelbarbad, which gives light to two-thirds of Bumbungistan—and divide the whole or your own jugular, with a towie-knife. The result will be astonishing.—New York Globe.

CLIMATE AND PRODUCTIONS OF CALIFORNIA. The thermometer ranges at San Francisco from 60 degs. to 75 degs. A peach orchard bloomed in January, and the fruit uninjured. Culinary vegetables are raised the year round. Wheat succeeds admirably, yielding in quality equal to Genesee or Egyptian. In grapes and wine, this land will, ere long, challenge the world. It is emphatically the land of the vine. Sheep are very prolific, and subject to no diseases; and here is just the pasturage and climate for growing the finest Merino and Saxony fleeces. Old Spain and New Holland not excepted.

NEW AND PROFITABLE INVESTMENT. Within a few years a number of plank roads have been constructed in the State of New York, and it is now discovered that they are more profitable than railroads. The readiness and promptness with which subscriptions for well located plank roads are filled up is one of the remarkable events of the times. Plank roads, to connect with the Erie Railroad are being formed in many of the middle counties, and it is calculated that they will yield from fifteen to twenty per cent. to the stockholders.—New York Mirror.

CHURCH AND STATE. The anomalies resulting from the union of Church and State are most striking, when it is considered that the English Government supports Presbyterianism in Scotland, Roman Catholicism in Canada, and the worship of Juggernaut in India.

CURIOUS JEWISH CUSTOM. The Jews of the Crimea, upon their marriage, wear a shirt of the finest texture, which, after the wedding, is carefully put up and kept till the time of their death when they are uniformly buried in it. So valuable is this shirt in their estimation, and so indispensable a part of their possession is it, that in money transactions, when they require to borrow, and have no other pledge of value to give, frequently deposit this shirt, which is always a satisfactory security to the lender, as the Jew could not die happy without redeeming it.

ARTIFICIAL LIGHTNING. Provide a tin tube that is larger at one end than it is at the other, and in which there are several holes. Fill this tube with powdered resin; and when it is shook over the flame of a torch, the reflection will produce the exact appearance of lightning.

KISSING TO SOME PURPOSE. A singular scheme for raising funds, was hit upon and put in practice at a donation party. It appears that some of the kissable ladies present actually allowed their sweet lips to be used at the rate of fifty cents a kiss—this being considered a suitable price for the privilege! One gentleman of the party took five dollars' worth! Really if the ladies do not "set their faces" against such a business-like proceeding they may expect soon to see kisses named in the "Price Current," and their marketable value regulated by the demand for the article.

TRUE RELIGION. There is religion in every thing around us—there is a calm and holy religion not only in the animate, but in the inanimate, unbreathing things of nature, and we would be wise to consider it. It is a meek and blessed influence, stealing as it were upon the heart. It has no errors, it rouses not the passions, and is untrammelled by the creeds and superstitions of men.

WOMAN'S PART. It is the part of woman, like her own beautiful planet, to cheer both the dawn and the darkness to be both the morning and the evening star of a man's life. The light of her eye is the first to rise and the last to set upon manhood's day of trial and suffering.

For the Quincy Patriot.

THE "TENDER PASSION."

MR. GREEN—Enclosed I send you some lines written by an intimate friend and brother, in answer to a letter he had received from a lady with whom, in more youthful days, he was very intimate. He says in his letter to me, accompanying the lines, that "I send you a copy, believing that you will appreciate them; for they are as applicable to you as me." Now what the fellow means by that, can't say; but I can say to every young man and every young woman, never leave him or her who is the object of your earliest affections and first true love; for I do know that the first disinterested love is the best, strongest and most lasting! I have heard sportsmen say that the first sight, under almost all circumstances, is the best—the surest; and there can be no doubt, it appears to me, that that principle is most emphatically true in relation to the tender passion—Love.

"THERE'S SADNESS IN REVIEWING THE PAST."

—Extract from the letter of a Lady.

'Tis sad to think of by-gone days,
In memory's glass to view the past,
The scenes that others love to praise,
With me are fleeting, fading fast.

In early life I had a home,
A father and a mother dear,
But they are sleeping in the tomb,
Where oft I've shed the scalding tear.

Health, wealth, and numerous friends were mine,
Few enemies, if any, had,
I could not at my lot repine,
My contentment was seldom sad.

All said that I was wondrous fair,
All praised the beauties of my face,
My snow-white neck and auburn hair,
My sparkling eye and modest grace.

With words like these and many more,
No wonder I was vain and gay,
No wonder that the distant shore
Of life should seem a far off day.

The lover's vow I laughed to scorn,
An idle thing to me was love,
From morn till eve, from eve till morn,
In vain they sought my heart to move.

And yet I do confess with shame,
The seeming coldness of my heart
Towards one unknown to wealth or fame,
Who strove to act the lover's part.

But what was youthful love to me,
With ridicule his love I met,
I was determined to be free,
His men's try haunts my spirit yet.

His grief in silence well he bore,
The secret of his heart none knew,
Alone he sought the far off shore,
That loving heart, so fond, so true.

But mine the anguish, mine the pain,
His absence long with grief I've mourned,
He never sought my side again,
To friends and kindred ne'er returned.

And now that grief has dimmed my eye,
And friends have vanished from my sight,
And wintry clouds o'erhang the sky,
And storms portend a dismal night,

As friends are leaving one by one,
And earth is fading from my view,
Life's lonely journey almost run,
I think of him so fond, so true.

And now as oft my memory turns,
To view life's sands receding fast,
With untold grief my bosom yearns,
In thinking o'er the scenes that's past.

And when I read the billet doux,
He gave the last time that we met,
And think upon his last adieu,
No wonder I should feel regret.

'Farewell,' said he, 'the happy now,
The gayest of the gay,
May you forever happy be,
And dash the past away.'

Like him I pray you struggle not,
With feelings of regret,
Who loves you still, yet must not love,
Who must yet can't forget.

W. A. B.

A curious claim is now before Congress, the owners and masters of the ship Cadmus demanding payment for the passage of Gen. Lafayette and family from France in 1824. The amount claimed is five thousand dollars, of which four thousand is for passage money, and one thousand is asked by the captain as a bonus for giving his personal attention during the voyage.

GENERAL COURT. During the past week, besides the presentation of petitions and adoption of orders, there has been considerable discussion on the report of a new law giving cities and towns additional authority over the dog race. It has passed to be engrossed. By its provisions, cities and towns are empowered to pass by-laws to license or tax dogs to the amount of twenty dollars or demand twenty dollars for a license, or to prohibit such animals from going at large, or kill them, if in their judgment they shall deem such severe measures expedient.

The Representative from this town participated in the debate, and went for a general law instead of leaving the subject to towns, as one town might prohibit while an adjoining one would allow, and thus the cause of complaint could not be removed. Moreover, the present law might be enforced one year, and the town the following year abolish it and refund the fines, and thus the law would be a mere farce.

The Committee on the Judiciary has been directed, on motion of Mr. Marsh of Quincy, to inquire into the expediency of providing for the appointment of one or more additional Judges of the Court of Common Pleas; and for an additional term of said Court for the County of Norfolk.

GOING TO CALIFORNIA. A company has been formed at Neponset Village, (Dorchester), to prosecute Mining and Trading in California. It is understood that they will sail in the Bark Laner from Boston, sometime during the ensuing week. The following gentlemen of the company have been chosen its Officers, viz:

President—Nathaniel Hebard of Dorchester.
Vice President—John Sims of Milton.
Secretary—John C. Edwards of Quincy.
Directors—Joseph C. Robinson, James Blanchard, Henry Pope, Lemuel S. Blackman, of Dorchester.
Members—John T. Durgin, William A. Pierce, Benjamin Jacobs, Charles C. Moor, Michael Humphrey, Jr., George A. Hebard, William W. Brumell, Henry Beckwith of Dorchester; W. G. Howard, Eben A. Tufts, Bartholomew Trow of Milton; Edwin Lane, Edwin P. Worcester, Peter Lane of Weymouth; Marcellus Hutton, John Hutton of Canton; Thomas H. H. Esty, Mr. Beals.

TOTAL ABSTINENCE SOCIETY. At the annual meeting of the Quincy Total Abstinence Society, held on the 15th inst., the following officers were chosen for the current year:

President—John Hardwick.
Vice President—William Pratt.
Secretary—David B. Stetson.
Corresponding Secretary—Seth Adams.
Treasurer—Jonathan Baxter.
Directors—Abram Prescott, George Veazie, Thomas Hardwick, Benjamin Bass, George S. T. Whiting, Jonathan Leavitt, Jr., George Washington Hardwick, George Veazie, 2d, George Clapp, Joseph G. Brackett, George H. Veazie, Charles Hardwick, Jr., Urbane Cudworth, Jr., Ambrose Merritt, Edward M. Page, William Nash, Lewis Jones, George H. Pratt, John Holden.

"THE MARRYING MAN." We recently received from the publishers, H. Long & Co., of New York, a copy of a work bearing the foregoing title. It is a book of some two hundred pages, printed and bound in a mailable form, and sold for twenty five cents. We should recommend the reading of novels or works of romance, and indeed as a general thing we think they should be avoided. They may serve to pass away a leisure hour, if a judicious selection is made. We have perused the work before us with much satisfaction and can cheerfully recommend it to any one having leisure for light reading. They cannot make a better selection than to purchase the Marrying Man.

REPORTED HYDROPHOBIA. Miss Sarah Crehore of Boston, was bitten in the foot by a dog on the twenty-first of September last, at Newton Corner. The wound suppurated and healed. A few weeks since, while on a visit to Castleton, (Vt.), she went into convulsions at the sight of water, and died in a few days with all the horrors of hydrophobia.

AT HOME. It is stated that of the Senate, fifteen, and of the House, ninety-two, members of the Legislature of Massachusetts, board at home by means of railroad travelling.

FIRE IN BRAINTREE. Last Wednesday evening, about half past nine o'clock, a barn with a small school-house, on Middle Street, in Braintree, was destroyed by fire, doubtless the work of an incendiary. The light was quite visible in this town.

DEFERRED. The communication of 'Probe,' on Scandal, will be published next week. His sentiments fully accord with our views.

CONGRESS. The claim for a slave taken by Government during the Florida war has again passed the House, awarding to the heirs of Pacheco one thousand dollars, by a vote, yeas 106 to nays 94.

The Mayor and Council of Washington City have petitioned Congress either to abolish directly or empower them to abolish, the District Slave Trade.

The subjects of slavery, reduction of postage, and the mileage of members, engross a large share of attention. The appropriations are being made.

THE AUGUSTA BANK ROBBER. Frederick Augustus Wingate, whose arrest at Braintree was mentioned last week, charged with robbing the Augusta Bank of twenty thousand dollars, has been examined and bound over for trial in April, in the sum of three thousand dollars. The evidence against him was not very strong, as his brother's confession does not implicate him.

FALL RIVER RAILROAD. The following individuals were chosen Directors of the Fall River Railroad Company, for the year ensuing, January 18th, 1849:—Nathaniel B. Borden, Richard Borden, and Jefferson Borden, of Fall River; Joseph S. Tillinghast of New Bedford; Nahum Stetson of Bridgewater; Peter H. Pierce of Middleborough; Royal Turner, of Randolph; C. C. Gilbert, and Robert Waterston of Boston.

CASES OF CONSCIENCE. A late number of the Salem Gazette contains seven cards of acknowledgements for money received from persons unknown, the letters being generally signed "Conscience." The sums vary from five dollars to eight hundred and fifty dollars, and the total amount thus received from these conscience stricken individuals, is fourteen hundred and seventy three dollars.

HO FOR CALIFORNIA. The ship Capitol of six hundred and eighty seven tons sailed on Wednesday last for San Francisco from the port of Boston. Her outward manifest is thirteen feet long and has four hundred and sixty five articles of entry. It is the longest manifest ever produced at the Boston Custom House. The Capitol also takes out the largest number of passengers of any one ship for a distant port; and among them William Frederic Field of this town.

DROWNED. It is stated that Amasa Collins, a boy about fifteen years of age, son of Patrick Collins of Milton, was drowned in Neponset river on Friday of last week, by falling through the ice.

WELL MERITED COMPLIMENT. The Philadelphia News thus speak of Col. Marshall P. Wilder of Dorchester, the Councilor from this District.

"This gentleman seems to be as universal a favorite in Boston, as from his disinterested and enthusiastic exertions in the cause of horticulture, he has made himself throughout the country. We find that the Massachusetts Horticultural Society has paid him a very handsome compliment—one of which any citizen of the republic might well be proud. Mr. Wilder, long a President of the Society, has resigned; and a service of plate of the value of one hundred and fifty dollars has been voted to him. There is no one engaged in the cause of horticulture, here or elsewhere, that will not regard the tribute as one well merited. But the people of Massachusetts, not contented with this manifestation, have selected Mr. Wilder as one of their councilors. There is no honor in the State of which he is not worthy."

The Bed Plate for a new steamship called the "Atlantic" has been cast at the Novelty Works, in New York City, which is said to be the largest and heaviest casting ever made in this country for any purpose. Forty tons of iron were melted on the occasion. The length of the casting is thirty feet, with nine feet four and a half inches, and the extreme height is about five feet. Four furnaces were employed in melting the iron, and the whole operation was performed in six hours.

When Cholera prevails as an epidemic, persons having an unclean skin are most exposed to the disease. Such people seldom or never escape this plague, while those who bathe regularly, generally do escape it.

The present number of Clergymen of all denominations in the United States, according to the latest estimate, is about thirty thousand.

The Supreme Court of the United States have decided upon the tax levied on foreign passengers under the laws of New York and Massachusetts, is unconstitutional.

David Hale, one of the editors of the New York Journal of Commerce, died at Fredericksburg, (Va.) on Saturday of last week.

The Virginia Legislature have adopted a series of resolutions, strongly in favor of slavery.

The authorities of New York city intend having portraits of Gens. Taylor and Scott painted for the Governor's Room in the City Hall. The sum of twelve hundred dollars is appropriated for the paintings.

The Episcopal Church in the United States has twenty nine Bishops, fourteen hundred and twenty seven clergymen, and about eighty thousand communicants.

Hon John C. Calhoun's sudden indisposition is said to have arisen from the excitement incident to his labors in the caucus of Southern Congressmen. It is feared that he will be compelled to retire to private life.

The first declaration of Independence issued by American colonists has been discovered among the English state papers, in London, by George Bancroft, the United States Minister. It was issued by a meeting in Mecklenburg County, North Carolina, in May, 1775.

A. C. Dodge of Iowa, is the son of Henry Dodge of Wisconsin. They are both members of the United States Senate, or will be at the next session. Father and son in the Senate of the United States at the same time, seems strange enough, and it is believed not to have happened before.

It is said the lamented Lt. Col. R. S. Dix partook of an oyster supper at a late hour on the night before the day on which he came to his sudden death.

The Oregon Legislature has refused to license taverns. The majority was small.

A distinguished chemist in New York lately assayed five different parcels of California gold, one of which proved to be pure gold, but the other four, supposed to be worth eighty thousand dollars turned out to be a mineral totally different from gold, and of no sort of value.

More than three thousand tons of ice have been housed at Fresh Pond. The workmen are all in full operation every day, and a great many visitors go from Boston daily to see the process.

A bill has passed the Kentucky Legislature repealing all acts heretofore existing, which prohibited the circulation of bank notes of a less denomination than five dollars.

Henry Clay has been unanimously re-elected President of the American Colonization Society at its recent annual meeting held in the city of Washington.

Dr. John Lofland, well known by the literary appellation of the 'Mildred Bard,' recently died in Wilmington, (Del.)

The Northern Star states that the liberal donation of land made by Gerritt Smith to colored men has added some three thousand men to the voters of New York.

Resolutions highly complimentary to General William O. Butler have passed the Legislature of Kentucky, inviting him to visit the capitol of the State, and meet his late companion in arms, Gen. Taylor, on his expected visit.

The Legislature of Missouri has at last agreed to accept the share of the surplus funds to which the State became entitled under the Deposit Law of Congress, passed some years since.

Charles Burton and Elizabeth Nichols of Boston, were lately married in the Albany jail. The bridegroom is under sentence to the State Prison for two years, for horse stealing, and the bride is a pretty, intelligent and respectable girl.

The executor of James Munroe, fifth President of the United States, has memorialized Congress, to have it purchase the papers of the deceased, which will be essentially a history of the country which gave him birth.

Hon. Lewis Cass (dem.) has been elected a Senator of the United States from the State of Michigan.

Gen. John McQueen, (Taylor, democrat) has been elected a member of Congress from South Carolina, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of A. D. Sims.

Maj. Gen. E. P. Gaines has been a commissioned officer in the United States Army more than fifty years. His first commission as Ensign was issued by President John Adams, on the 10th of January, 1790.

Cultural and Horticultural Society of the County of Norfolk.

Undersigned, considering it of the greatest importance to the CULTIVATORS OF THE LAND, as well as every other citizen, that an AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY should be formed in the County of Norfolk, respectfully request that persons, in the several towns, as may be, to cooperate in the accomplishment of that noble object, would attend a meeting to be held at the Temperance Hall, at Dedham, on SATURDAY, the 9th day of February next, at ten in the forenoon.

Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry.
My own life, and that of my family, have been saved by it. My father and my mother's family were both consumptive. My father, mother, and a sister died of that fatal disease. For some years, I have been predisposed to it myself. About one year ago I was quite sick for a number of weeks, confined to my bed when the pain in my side would allow me to lay. A physician pronounced my disease liver complaint; my liver was very much enlarged—I raised blood several times; the pain in my side was so severe that the carts passing in the street by the door affected me. I was cupped, bled, and had various other remedies applied, but all to no purpose; I got no relief. A friend of my father's brought me a bottle of Dr. Wistar's Balsam, which relieved me at once. I was encouraged to persevere in using it, until I took four or five bottles, which cured my liver complaint, and my health is now good. For Liver Complaints I believe it is a most certain cure.

Signed, MARTHA A. BETCHEL.

I am acquainted with Mrs. Betchel's statement and it is true.

Signed, WHITWELL STOKES, Druggist.

None genuine, unless signed I. BUTTS, on the wrapper.

BATH, Me., May 28.

Mr. F. Brown—

Dear Sir—Having tested the value of your Sarsaparilla and Tomato Bitters, I take pleasure in giving you the facts of my case for your own satisfaction and the benefit of others. I have been suffering with the Erysipelas humor in my side, causing my hand and arm to swell very much, and to be painful; at the same time, and for some time previous, have been troubled with a weak stomach; most of my food has been lost, and there has been a singular fatness at the stomach, which has been increasing, and caused me much difficulty. After I commenced taking your Bitters, I could perceive a gradual and immediate relief, and would recommend it with much confidence to those who are troubled with such complaints.

Yours, truly, W. H. DONNELLY.

For sale in Quincy by Mrs. E. HAYDEN and CHARLES CLAPP, Braintree, Oliver Perkins; South Braintree, J. Stoddard & Co. Sold also by agents generally.

A sure cure for Dyspepsia and Constipation.

HARRISON'S PERISTALTICS have had 12 years' trial by the Medical faculty and the public generally. This medicine is in Lozenges, pleasant to the taste, and may be given to children. The Peristaltics are gently laxative, and by their tonic qualities improve the digestive organs and invigorate the whole system. They cure Constipation, Headache, Dizziness, Sleeplessness, Jaundice, Oppression after Eating, Liver Complaint, Diarrhea, Piles, Dropsy, Debility, Fatness, Weak Stomach, Heartburn, Palpitation, Rheumatism, Pains in the Bones, Scrofula, the Doubling, Worms, etc.

These Lozenges are excellent in all Nervous complaints and Dyspeptic symptoms, Female Suppression and irregularities, especially in the young. This medicine contains no preparation of Mercury whatever, and no ingredient which may not safely be given to the most delicate female and under any circumstances.

This preparation is also put up in bottles for seafaring persons, who should always have a supply. An occasional use of the Peristaltics prevents Fevers, Bilious complaints, and chronic or East India Diarrhea. They are admirably adapted to the complaints incident to the coast of Africa, Sumatra, West Indies and South America.

These Lozenges are recommended by some of the best Physicians in Boston, and are in use by families and general practice. All afflicted with oppression after eating, or rising of food will find great relief. They are the best medicine for children known.

For sale in Quincy by Mrs. E. HAYDEN, South W. Fowle, 438 Washington street, Boston, General Agent.

To be Let.

FOR one or five years, and possession given on the first of April next, Minot Thayer's FARM, containing a Dwelling House, Barn, and other necessary Out Buildings, and about one hundred and twenty acres of Mowing, Tillage and Pasture Land, situate in the town of Braintree, on the Monaquot River and forty rods from the South Shore Railroad Depot. The farm is in a high state of cultivation, has a great variety of Fruit, cuts about fifty tons of Hay yearly, of the most superior quality, both English and Black Grass.

There are great advantages on the farm relating to the selling of Stones of any kind. There is a ready sale of the most inferior for ballast. The pasturing is very good, and there is no farm in the County more suitable for the milk business. The situation perhaps the most pleasant and delightful of any in the State. A few pairs of superior Maley and Yellow Leg DORKIN FOWL, may be had at said Farm. Please apply as above.

United States

HEALTH INSURANCE COMPANY,

Office No. 17 State Street, Boston.

Incorporated by the Legislature of Massachusetts, May 10, 1843.

Capital, $50,000.

Directors.

Sam'l Aspinwall, Lemuel M. Barker, John Bigelow, Jonas Chickering, George Darracott, James Clark, Heman Lincoln, Samuel H. Jenks, Benj. Lamson, Joseph Lewis, Elijah Mayes, S. P. Merriam, Joseph B. Pierce, Thomas Reddick, N. Sturtevant, Simon P. Taylor, Charles H. White, D. W. Wiswell, Dan. Leverett, Charlestown, J. L. Lord, New York.

President and Treasurer—JAMES CLARK.

Secretary—SAMUEL H. JENKS.

Consulting Physicians—D. Humphrey Storer, M. D., 14 Winter St.; Augustus A. Gould, M. D., 15 West St.

Superintendent of Agencies—Simeon P. Taylor.

THIS Institution insures both males and females against disease or accident, according to the rates specified in their tables. The former, by depositing a given sum yearly, may insure a return of four-fifths of that deposit, for each and every week within that year, during which he may be so disabled by illness as to be prevented from pursuing his usual occupation;—such allowance not to exceed four hundred dollars in any one year. Females, insured against all maladies common to both sexes, are entitled to return allowances equal to three-fourths of their yearly payments, for every week's sickness. Thus, an insuror of $5 a year by the former, or of $5.35 by the latter, will, if deprived of health, secure to the party insured, a payment of $4 per week.

An advance payment of not less than one dollar will be required of each applicant at the time of making the proposal; which sum, in case of rejection, will be refunded, or allowed in case of acceptance. The applicant is thereby insured, if the proposal be approved, for the term of thirty days, and no longer, unless the policy be taken, and the balance of premium paid within that time.

Persons insured by this Company become members thereof, so far as to entitle them to a proportion of all dividends of its annual profits, in the ratio of their respective premiums, and according to the duration of their policies.

The renewal of any policy may be secured, on notice given to the Secretary within three months of its expiration, and on furnishing proof of sound health at the date of such notice.

For rates of insurance and other information, apply to the Agents in this town.

THE LITTLE CURL.

Ay! press it to your lips again,
My darling little Belle—Unroll it in the sunshine then,
And mark its lustre well.
That little curl bloomed on a brow
That bends among the seraphs now.

I kissed that lovely brow in death,
Cold as the winter's clay,
Ere the murmur of the parting breath
Passed from the lips away;
And that sweet golden curl I shed
From the bright tresses of the dead.

That little curl—my hand had brushed
Its ruffled gold full oft,
As the sweet prattler's cries I hushed,
With care and low and soft;
And as he sank to smiling rest,
That curl lay gleaming on my breast.

I watched its growth with tearful eye,
Ere one short month had rolled,
And still, as week by week went by,
Lengthened its wavy gold;
And, like a diamond, 'neath its shade
That small, pure infant brow was laid.

My brother! 'twas no lightsome thing
To bid thy soul 'Good night'—
To watch its struggling ushering
To Heaven's own world of light—
We bowed our trembling heads to pray,
As angels bore our babe away.

But Time came with a gentle balm,
To heal our wounded breasts:
And mild religion shed a calm,
Blest radiance where he rests;
And now with tearful smiles we kiss
That little curl that once was his.

I could not leave that lock to mould
Within the lonely tomb—
That quenchless spark of living gold
To light so drear a gloom—
But when the earth gives up her dead,
That curl shall grace a cherub's head.

PERSEVERANCE.

A swallow in the spring,
Came to our granary, and 'neath the eaves
Easied to make a nest, and there did bring Wet earth, and straw, and leaves.

Day after day she toiled,
With patient heart; but ere her work was crowned,
Some sad mishap the tiny fabric spoiled,
And dashed it to the ground.

She found the ruin wrought,
But not cast down, forth from the place she flew,
And, with her mate, fresh earth and grasses brought,
And build her nest anew.

But scarcely had she placed
The last soft feather on its ample floor,
When wicked hand, or chance, again laid waste,
And wrought the ruin o'er.

But still her heart she kept,
And toiled again; and last night, hearing calls,
I looked, and, lo! three little swallows slept
Within the earth-made walls.

What truth is here, O man!
Hath hope been written in its early dawn!
Have clouds o'ercast thy purpose, trust or plan?
Have FAITH and struggle on!

A KISS.

A kiss, a kiss,
Replete with bliss,
I send within this paper,
Take it in haste,
Don't stop to taste,
'Tis little more than vapor.

Pray don't complain
That it's in this strain,
To pledges I'd be steady;
And were you here
I would appear
Not 'rough,' perhaps, but 'ready.'

ANECDOTES.

"I wish you to make for the church," said an Episcopal vestryman, one morning, to a carpenter, "two new commandment boards. We want them of fine sound timber, with no knots in it." "You'd better take some of the 'note' out of the commandments then," replied the carpenter. "I never saw a commandment board yet that wasn't full of 'em."

"I can't conceive, my love, what is the matter with my watch; I think it must want cleaning." "Oh no! Papa dear! I don't think it wants cleaning, because baby and I had it washing in the basin for ever so long this morning!"

At a pleasant dinner party, Mrs. Mountain, the vocalist, (who was a very lively person) asked Mr. David Grove, "whether he was any relation to the Groves of Blarney?" Grove gravely replied, that he had but one relation and that was his brother John.

A man was lately brought before a magistrate, charged with stealing a dead sheep; the magistrate dismissed the complaint, observing that there was no such thing—as when a sheep died it became mutton.

"Why is a drunken hesitating to sign the pledge like a skeptical Hindoo? Because he is in doubt whether to give up the worship of the Jug-or-not!"

"I don't like to pay forfeits," said Jimmie, "and have all the fellows kissing me—it makes me common property." "Nothing is common which is dear," meekly responded Bessie.

In allusion to the many advertisements headed "Ho! for California," Mrs. Partington thinks a spade would be more useful than a hoe, to the diggers.

"Put that right back where you took it from," said the girl said when her lover snatched a kiss.

MISCELLANY.

OLD ZEKE'S DAUGHTER.

One of the loveliest of the thousand lovely spots that adorn the valley of the Connecticut, was the haunt of my childhood. It might have been a haunt of fairies and wood-nymphs; for they could not have found a sweeter or more secluded gamboling ground; and I did sometimes think I heard strange whistlings in the air, and fairy-like music floating around me; and I sometimes imagined I saw tiny footprints upon the velvet moss. True, the sober thought of years rather discards the idea, but we love to foster childhood's impressions; so I will cherish this, with every flower and leaf and ripple of the singing brook, and light and shadow which are dearer treasured upon my heart. I would love to take you there dear reader, and by the light of the autumn moon, talk of the days of "long syne." Come, sit with me upon this mossy bank, and see the soft moonlight flirting with those dancing ripples.

Perhaps some of you, who have never seen Miss Cynthia out of the city, have always thought her a staid and sober damsel; but I assure you that in the country she frolics about in a most unmatronly like manner. See her now dancing down that brook, and now playing bow-peep with us through those thick branches, and whispering soft words to every green leaf that turns its face towards her, and casting loving glances on these sweet flowers at our feet.

And now follow this little brook; we will pluck some of those violets that fringe its edge for a memento; now step across the brook and there, in that little wood beyond, is my Eden,—but I cannot take you there, dear reader—There I always go alone. A word—the slightest whisper—there, would break the perfect harmony that breathes around. I would hear no voice but nature's there. The gentle sighing among the leaves, the occasional chirp of an insect, twitter of a bird, or a falling leaf, speak in more eloquent tones than ever breathed through earthly lips. And then the sometimes perfect mysterious silence which not even a trembling leaf disturbs—it lulls my spirit, subdues every worldly passion, and with folded hands I sit listening to the still small voice communing with my soul.

Do you see, through the opening beyond the wood, that little white cottage? That was the home of my little heroine.

Old Mr. Melwood, or old Zeke, as he was always called, was one of those poverty misfortune had been added. He was a cripple, and able to do little else than ride to the village and leave at the doors of his customers, the products of his little farm, which was his only means of support. These were few, but he always found a ready market for them; for every one said that old Zeke's vegetables were the best, and his eggs the freshest that were brought to town, and that the berries that pretty Rose Melwood sold, were the sweetest that were ever tasted; indeed, every thing which Rose Melwood had, or said, or did, was the best in the world.

Rose lost her mother in very early childhood; and between herself and her father there existed the greatest fondness. She did not love to hear him called "Old Zeke." for it seemed to her to give an impression of unworthiness; but it was not so, for every one respected the old man. I do not know how he came to receive that cognomen, but I think it was because his infirmities made him seem much older than he really was, and it was something of a feeling of pity that promoted it. But Rose did not love to hear it; and always, when speaking of her parent, she would call him her "dear, dear father;" always was she saying some kind word, or performing some kind action to make her dear father happy. And she was his idol; "Rosy, dear," he always called her, and every one else came to call her so, except when some naughty child at school, who had his falsehood exposed by her undeviating truth, would call her "Old Zeke's daughter." But Rose was the name that all loved to call her by. She was the pet of the village; every one was glad when she came for her; aunt Mary used to say she brought a whole shower of happiness, to sprinkle over every body.

But Rose Melwood had her day of sorrow, and that was when Julia Weston refused to invite her to her birthday party.

This party had been the grand subject of talk among all the school girls, during 'recess' and 'whispering-time,' for half a year. All expected to attend; all knew what they would wear; and all hoped most eagerly that it would be a pleasant day.

Rose Melwood knew in her little heart what she intended to do that day; but she had told no one, for it would be such a sweet surprise, she thought, to bring a wreath of flowers in April. Every day, after the snow was off the ground, she would look by the brook and in the wood for the first flowers, to see how they came on. She knew just where the trailing Arbutus hid itself, and where the first violets would spring up and she felt quite sure they would be in bloom before Julia's birthday.

The morning previous to Julia Weston's birthday, I had invited Rose and two or three of her companions to walk with me; and just as we entered a path which led through the wood, Rose darted away, exclaiming, 'I am going to hide from you now, but I will be with you soon.' My young friends wandered off one by one, in search of flowers and winter green and I had just entered the path which led to my loved retreat, when I saw through the trees that it was already tenanted, and on coming nearer, discovered Rose Melwood. She was unconscious of my approach, and I never saw a sweeter subject for a painter than she was at that moment. She was sitting upon the ground with her lap full of flowers, and a half formed wreath lying beside her. Her bonnet had fallen back upon her neck; her small white hands were clasped, and her full blue eyes were turned towards heaven, with an expression of perfect purity, love and holiness. 'O, Miss Emily!' she exclaimed, as soon as she observed me, 'is not this beautiful? It seems just like heaven to me.'

'O, Rosy dear! where did you find your flowers?' exclaimed our companions coming up at that moment; 'we have been searching every where, and have not found one.'

'Oh! I know their hiding places,' replied Rose, smiling; 'see here—will not this be beautiful?' she exclaimed, holding up a half-woven wreath; 'this is for Julia to wear on her birthday.'

'But you are not going, to her party!' exclaimed one.

'Why, yes, of course I shall go,' replied Rose. 'I know Julia expects me to go.'

'But she told me yesterday she should not invite you.'

'Why not?' inquired Rose, sorrowfully.

'Because,' replied another, who seemed somewhat vexed that Rose had found so many flowers, 'because she says she don't want old Zeke's daughter at her party.'

Never shall I forget the expression which passed over Rose's countenance at these words. It was not of anger, but of mingled sorrow and resentment, which one experiences when they feel that they have been undeservedly slighted by those they love. She spoke not a word, but her eyes filled with tears, and after a moment's silence, she said, 'Well, I will send her the flowers—she will like them, I am sure.'

The truth was, Julia had heard, and talked, and thought so much of her party, that she had begun to imagine herself a much more important personage than she had done before, and to think that she must be somewhat select in her invitations; so after some consideration, she decided that it would be unaristocratic to have it said that old Zeke's daughter was at her party. Besides, she was a year older than Rose, which very much enhanced her own importance, she thought; so, without consulting her parents, she decided that Rose Melwood should not come to her party.

But Julia little thought that by refusing admittance to Rose she was depriving herself and others of all enjoyment. But so it was, for when all were assembled, there seemed some one wanting. No one seemed happy, and each whispered to the other, 'I wish Rosy dear was here,' and when Frank Weston and two or three of his schoolfellows came in to share in the sports, nothing seemed to go right.

'Why, where is Rosy dear?' exclaimed Frank in surprise, after looking around the room.

'Julia would not have her here,' exclaimed half a dozen voices.

'I should like to know, Miss Julia Weston, why you would not have her here?' inquired Frank with spirit.

'Because I didn't want her here,' replied Julia, a little tartly.

'Because she is old Zeke's daughter,' replied several voices.

'Well, I wish, Julia, you were half as good as old Zeke's daughter,' exclaimed Frank. 'I declare, this is outrageous. She shall come, or else I don't stay here.'

'Nor I, nor I,' exclaimed the other embryo gentlemen.

At this moment Mrs. Weston entered the room.

'Why, what does this mean?' she exclaimed. 'I came to see how happy you were, and really there is not one happy face in the room; what is the matter?'

'Rosy dear is not here,' exclaimed a dozen voices.

'Rosy not here? 'Why, what is the reason?' inquired Mrs. Weston, in surprise.

'Why, Julia has acted like a dunce. She has not invited her,' replied Frank.

'Not invited Rosy? Why, Julia, what does this mean? I thought surely you had invited her.'

Julia had by this time begun to repent seriously of her conduct. The party which she had looked forward to with so much happiness, had been, so far, naught but wretchedness, and all in consequence of her foolish pride. So she acknowledged to her mother the reason, and expressed her sorrow.

At this moment a light tap was heard at the door, and a little girl who lived, neighbor to Rose, entered with a beautiful wreath in her hand, and presenting it to Julia, said, 'Rosy dear sent it to you.'

The scent of the flowers filled the room, and all gazed eagerly at such a quantity of flowers at that season.

'Oh! where did Rosy dear find them?' I could not find one, all exclaimed.

'She always knew where the first flowers grew,' exclaimed one of the boys.

'She always knew ten times more than any other girl about everything,' was the rather ungallant reply of Frank Weston.

Julia stood holding the wreath, looking sorrowful and ashamed.

'My dear,' exclaimed Mrs. Weston, 'you are not worthy to wear this wreath to-day,—the one who deserves it must wear it. Put on your bonnet and go down to old Zeke's, and make the best apology you can to Rosy. Beg her pardon, and ask her to come and spend the remainder of the day; for I am quite sure there will be no enjoyment unless she is here; and she is so good a girl, I think she will not refuse to come, tho' you have treated her so ill. Frank will entertain your company while you are gone, and I hope you will yet be happy.'

The two girls were soon seen returning, and as they entered the door, all exclaimed, 'I am so glad you have come, Rosy dear; now we will be happy.'

'But first,' said Mrs. W., 'let us dispose of this beautiful wreath. It should not lie withering here. Julia, it was sent to you but I presume you do not feel that you deserve to wear it, so you may place it upon the head of the one you think most deserving of it.'

Julia took the wreath with a smile and a kiss, placed it upon the Rosy's head amid the shouts of the children.

'Oh, I had much rather you would wear it, dear Julia,' exclaimed Rose. 'I am sure I never intended it for myself.'

'The good we do to others,' said Mrs. Weston, 'often returns upon our own heads, and I hope the lesson, Julia, you learn will be of far more value than the wreath.' * * *

Soon after the event old Zeke and Rosy left our village, and went to live with a rich relative at the South, who adopted Rose as her own daughter.

Years passed away. Frank Weston, who had established himself in a distant city, wrote for Julia to come and spend the winter with him. Julia joyfully accepted the invitation. As soon as she had arrived and had been welcomed by her brother, he said, 'I have an invitation for you, Julia, to act as bridesmaid this very evening.'

'Pray, for whom?' inquired Julia.

'To a certain lady who is to be my wife,' replied Frank, laughing.

'Ah! you rogue! Why did not you tell me of this before?'

'I knew that you liked pleasant surprises,' replied Frank.

'But I cannot tell whether it will be a pleasant one until I know who is to be your bride. Come tell me quick, who is it?'

'No, not until we are married, so now prepare yourself, and hasten to the wedding.'

When Frank Weston led in his bride, Julia thought she had never seen a creature so perfectly lovely. But brides are always beautiful and perhaps she was not more so than many others; but Julia thought so, and I think Frank thought so too. But it was not her beauty alone that riveted Julia's gaze; it was an impression that she had seen that face before, but she could not tell when nor where.

When the ceremony was over, and Frank presented Julia to his bride, 'Do tell me, my sister,' exclaimed Julia, 'have we never known each other before?'

'Dear Julia, have you forgotten old Zeke's daughter,' whispered the beautiful bride.

A sudden remembrance, such as, in some hour of your life, reader, has flashed over your mind when you have seen a face or an object that called to recollection bygone days, came over Julia's thought. She gazed earnestly at the fair girl for a minute, then, clasping her hand, and turning to Frank, she exclaimed joyfully, 'Rosy dear! yes—yes—it is indeed her—it is our Rosy dear!'

A ROBBER'S STRATAGEM.

A freebooter taking an evening walk on a highway in Scotland, overtook and robbed a wealthy merchant traveller. His purpose was not achieved without a severe struggle, in which the thief lost his bonnet, and was obliged to escape, leaving it on the road. A respectable farmer happened to be the next passer, and seeing the bonnet, alighted, took it up, and rather imprudently put it on his own head. At this instant the robbed man came up with assistance and recognizing the bonnet, charged the farmer with having robbed him, and took him into custody.

There being some likeness between the two parties, the merchant persisted in the charge, and though the respectability of the farmer was admitted he was placed at the bar of a Superior Court for trial. The Government witness, the merchant, swore positively as to the identity of his bonnet, and deposed likewise to the identity of the farmer. The case was made out by this and other evidence, apparently against the prisoner. But there was a man in Court, who well knew both who did and who did not commit the crime. This was the real robber, who advanced from the crowd, and seizing the fatal bonnet, which laid on the table before the witness, placed it on his own head and looking him full in the face, said to him in a voice of thunder, "Look at me sir, and tell me on the oath you have sworn, am not I the man who robbed you on the highway?" The merchant replied in very great astonishment, "By heavens! you are the very man!" "You see," said the robber, what sort of memory the gentleman has; he swears to the bonnet, whatever features are under it. If the Honorable Judge were to put it on his own head, I dare say that he would testify that he robbed him." The innocent prisoner was on this evidence at once acquitted because no reliance could be placed on such testimony, and yet it was positive evidence.

THE ECHO.

Little George did not understand the Echo. Once, he cried from the window, 'Hop, hop.' Immediately from the grove near, echo cried: 'Hop hop!' Thereupon he cried, wonderingly, 'Who are you?' The voice also cried, 'Who are you?' He cried—'You are a stupid boy.' 'Stupid boy,' echoed the wood.

Then George became angry, and called nicknames more and more provoking. All these were faithfully returned to him by the wood. At this he searched all through the wood for the imagined boy, that he might revenge his insults; but he could find nobody. So he ran to his mother and told her that a bad boy had hid himself in the wood and abused him by nicknames.

'You have finely betrayed yourself, this time!' said the mother: 'you accuse yourself! You have heard only your own words for as you have often seen your face in water, so have you heard your own voice in the wood. Had you spoken pleasant words, the grove would have sent back to you pleasant words.'

So it always is; the treatment we receive from others, is generally but an echo of our own. If we treat others courteously they will treat us in the same manner; but if we behave rudely towards them, we have no right to expect from them any better conduct.

ODD FANCIES.

There is something extremely curious in the impressions and delusions with which the mind may be affected. A physician was once called to see a man laboring under the fancy that he was converted into a tea-pot. When the physician endeavored to ridicule him out of the idea, he indignantly replied, 'I am a tea-pot,' and forming a semi-circle with one arm, by placing his hand upon his hip, he said 'there is the handle,' and thrusting out the other arm, 'there is the spout.' Men have believed themselves converted into barrels rolled along the street. One is recorded of a man who believed himself a clock, and would stand for hours at the head of the stairs clicking with his tongue. A respectable tradesman in England even fancied himself metamorphosed into a seven shilling piece, and took the precaution of requesting as a particular favor of his friends, that if his wife should present him in payment, they would not give change for him. A madman in the Pennsylvania Hospital believed that he was once a calf, and mentioned the name of the butcher who killed him, and the stall on the Philadelphia market in which his flesh was sold previously to his animating his present body.

DON'T SIT UP TO HER.

A Green Mountain boy fell in love with a pretty girl, and determined 'to court her.' To that end he dressed himself in his 'Sunday-go-to-meeting'; went to her father's house and found her alone.

'How d'ye do?' said Jonathan.

'I'm nicely,' says the girl.

Jonathan took a seat, and seated himself in the farthest corner of the room, as though the beauty was a thing to be feared rather than loved.

'Aint you cold—hadn't you better set up to the fire,' says Sally, supposing he would, of course, if he was going to make love at all, do it in a proper manner.

'No, I thankie; I recon I'm comfortable,' returns Jonathan.

'How is your marm?' said Sally.

'Well, she's complainin' a little,' said Jonathan. Here a pause of ten minutes ensued, during which time he amused himself whittling a stick.

'There's nothin' new up your way, is there?' said Sally, which Jonathan might understand as applying to his present situation, or to his father's dominion.

'Here! oh—yes, you mean hum; well, no; that is, yes; our spotted cow's broke her horn!' said Jonathan.

Sally would undoubtedly have laughed at this queer piece of information, only she was too much vexed at the speaker. At length, after much protracted silence, Sally got up a very small edition of a scream, and in a loud voice exclaimed, 'let me alone.'

'Why,' says Jonathan, dropping his knife and stick in astonishment, 'why, I ain't touchin' on ye.'

'Well,' says Sally, in a voice which might be indicative of fear, but sounded very like a request, 'Well, aint you goin' tu?'

Jonathan thought a moment of this equivocal reply, and then placing his knife in his pocket, he drew his chair by the side of pretty Sally, gently encircled her waist, and—the next week they were married.

SAUSAGES. Chop six pounds of lean with two pounds of fat pork, four table spoonfuls of salt, six ditto of powdered sage, four of black pepper and two of cloves—a little rosemary may be added. If not stuffed, keep the meat in a tin vessel, tied down close; and when to be used, roll it into cakes, dust them with flour, and fry.

For the Quincy Patriot.

SCANDAL.

Evil speaking, from the innuendo to perjury, is a violation of the ninth article of the decalogue. Petty scandal, practised more or less by almost every person, often produces more mischief than a false oath. The sly whisper, the mysterious hint, the anxious inquiry, the uncharitable inference, gather importance and magnitude, as they pass from one to another, until they become dreadful realities in the public mind. By the small envenomed worm of petty scandal many a fine ship has been sunk—many a fair character has been ruined, that would have outtried the storm of open and violent slander.

In many there is a sad propensity in their very nature, to listen to the retailers of petty scandal. With many, it is the spice of conversation, the exhilarating gas of their minds. Without any intention of doing essential injury to a neighbor, a careless remark relative to some minor fault of his, may be seized by a babbling, and as it passes through the babbling tribe, each one adds to its bulk, and gives its color a darker hue, until it assumes the magnitude and blackness of base slander. Few are without visible faults—most persons are sometimes inconsistent, and upon these faults and mistakes petty scandal delights to feast. Nor are those safe from the filth and scum of this poisonous tribe, who are free from external blemishes. Envy and jealousy can start the blood-hound of suspicion; create a noise that will attract attention; and many may be led to suppose that there is game, when there is nothing but thin air. An unjust and unfavorable innuendo is started against a person of unblemished character; it gathers force as it is rolled through Babbletown—it soon assumes the dignity of a problem—is solved by the rule of double position, and the result increased by geometrical progression and permutation of quantities; and before truth can get her shoes on, a stain, deep and damning, has been stamped on the fair fame of an innocent victim, by an unknown hand. To trace calumny back to the small fountain of petty scandal, is often impossible; and always more difficult than to find the source of the Nile. There is real masonry in petty scandal. Every thing is communicated with the finger on the lips, breast to breast. A hypocritical tenderness for the good name of the victim, is salt that preserves the scandal from stench, and renders it palatable to some, who would be nauseated by an appearance of malice or revenge.

It is a melancholy reflection upon human nature, to see how small a matter will put the band of scandal in motion. A mere hint, a significant look, a mysterious countenance; directing attention to a particular person; often gives an alarming impetus to this ignis fatuus. A mere interrogatory is converted into an affirmative assertion—the cry of mad dog is raised—the mass join in the chase, and not unfrequently a mortal wound is inflicted on the innocent and meritorious, perhaps by one who had no ill-will or desire to do wrong in any case, but, from mere impulse, joined the rushing crowd, without having examined the victim, to know if any symptoms of disease were visible. If more caution were used, less mischief would be effected by dealers in defraction. If they had no hearers, they would not preach their tales of falsehood. Rebuke has a magic effect upon this tribe of paltry cowards. It suffocates them, and brings them down as quickly as the fumes of burning brimstone will a wild turkey from a tree. Let the sword of rebuke be drawn upon the dealers in back-biting, wherever they show their green eyes and forked tongue and the murky waters of falsehood will not so often stain the fair fame of the innocent, and poison the happiness of the most amiable in community.

Professing Christians, and especially the clergy, ought not to lend their aid and influence to such base purposes; but it is often the case that we find the clergy first, and foremost in circulating falsehood and slander, and by so doing they paralyze reform, they destroy the happiness of families and neighborhoods, and if they chance to be members of a society for the benefit and happiness of the race, they will in so doing convert them into a boiling caldron, disgraceful to those concerned, and a stigma on their profession as a Society, Club or Lodge. O think of the difference between their conduct and that of him who went about doing good, and in whose mouth guile was never found.

CALIFORNIA ITEMS.

A runaway soldier is said to have discovered a lump, or a rock of gold, that weighed eight hundred and thirty-nine pounds and eleven and one half ounces; he was afraid to leave it, and mounted guard upon it; and at the last account he had sat there sixty-seven days, and had offered twenty-seven thousand dollars for a plate of beans and pork, but his offer had always been indignantly refused, and the poor fellow only laughed at, for the niggardliness of his offer, by parties going further on, where the article was said to be more abundant.

A Regiment of about one thousand men are now organizing in New York City, who will offer themselves to Government to serve in California for three years, taking their pay from the Mines, clothing themselves, and being armed with rifles and supplied with all other necessities by Government, and to be sent to California at the public expense! Gen. McLellan of Texas, has been elected Colonel, and Gen. James Arlington Bennett of New York, Lieutenant Colonel.

Messrs. Savage & Hawkins, gold assayers, &c., of New York City, have lately received a lump of what was supposed to be California gold, weighing twenty ounces Troy weight, to be assayed. It was not affected by acids, but in the refining pot evaporated. It proved to be sulphureted of iron. The owner of the article purchased it at San Francisco, where he paid seven dollars per ounce for it, in merchandise. The assayers say they have received several specimens of California rocks to assay, but as yet they have received no gold.

The steamer, Senator, which has been running on the Fall River route, has been sold to a company and is to be fitted up in fine style and proceed to the gold region.

Some of the California gold brought home has been coined at the mint, in Philadelphia, and returned to Salem (Mass.) with the new stamp "Cal." Six hundred thousand dollars was the full value of all the California gold received at the United States mint up to the twenty third day of January last.

A meeting of gentlemen of color has been held in New York, and an association formed to go to the gold diggings. Nearly fifty are booked for the region. No whites are admitted.

As the ship Brooklyn was leaving the wharf at New York for California, the other day, an Irishman, whose passage had been paid by some gentlemen going out, who had engaged him as their servant, took a half eagle from his pocket and threw it among the crowd on shore. "There," said he, "take that. It's all I've got, but I'm going where there is plenty of it."

A building designed for a Hotel, has been prepared complete in all its parts, and shipped on board a vessel bound from New York to San Francisco. It will accommodate two hundred persons when finished. All its furniture goes with it, beds and bedding, carpets, and the complete fixtures of a first rate hotel. The entire cost of this venture is seventy thousand dollars. A gentleman of high worth and much experience goes out in charge of it.

Among the current anecdotes is one of a young gentleman, who, after a long residence among the gold diggers, in California, (who it seems, equal Falstaff's regiment for lack of linen,) had only one article left that had any pretensions to the name of a shirt, and this he hired out at the rate of five dollars an evening for weddings and other festivities.

The fortunate discoverer of a very large lump of gold in California, finding it too heavy for immediate transportation, carefully pointed it of a dull copper color, to deceive other adventurers, until he should have time to carry it off.

A young man from a town in the northeastern section of Massachusetts became afflicted with the prevailing mania, and took passage for California in a brig from Boston. His young wife, on hearing of his determination, immediately declared that she would accompany him and share his fortune; be it good or evil. Expostulation was useless, and as a last resource the husband determined to take her to Boston, show her the limited accommodations on ship-board, and explain to her the various inconveniences which she would be obliged to endure. She was accordingly taken on board the vessel, and duly escorted through every part. The lady was perfectly delighted with everything about the vessel, and declared, with true woman spirit, that if the voyage was perilous her husband should not undertake it without a friend and companion to share his dangers and soften his discomforts. The husband finally decided to yield the point, and engaged a passage for his wife.

A writer of the New York Courier and Enquirer, dated Platt City, (Missouri) Jan. 6th, says from the best information he can obtain, he believes that twenty thousand persons at least will leave for the gold mines, from that state alone, as spring sets in. This includes all classes, from the man of wealth, down to those who obtain the outfit on credit—tradesmen and farmers, and here and there men with families, but mostly single men.

A late official gentleman in California, writing to a friend in New York City, says that his letter, including paper, pen, ink and time spent in writing, cost him about three hundred dollars.

The following letter from Anthony Ten Eyck, American Commissioner at the Sandwich Islands, addressed from San Francisco to his mother, at Watertown, (N. Y.) is published. It is under date of Aug. 6th 1849.

"I have visited the famous gold mines at the base of the California mountains, and, upon the southern tributaries of Sacramento river, some two hundred miles from San Francisco to the north side of the bay, and went up by land on horseback. I returned in an open boat by water, down the Sacramento and the bay. The journey was long, tedious, fatiguing, and disagreeable in every respect. The weather, after getting twenty miles from here, was very hot, and the farther I advanced into the interior the more oppressive it became. I was absent from this place just three weeks, and during that time I eat scarcely anything that I did not cook myself or assist in cooking, and made my bed and slept upon the ground. I could have slept most of the time in a California house, but preferred being out of doors to avoid the fleas, which infest every house in the country. After May, and until late in October, it never rains in California; therefore, there is no danger of being wet in travelling here in this season of the year. The country, I find pleasant and interesting. It can never be an agricultural country and is only valuable for grazing. The vicinity of the mountains, and for many miles down the streams, which take their rise amongst the mountains, abound in gold, which is now being collected by thousands of people in very large quantities. The mineral region covers a very large extent of territory, and the gold seems to be inexhaustible—there are now probably three thousand persons digging gold, and I do not exaggerate when I say they will average from forty to sixty dollars a day each person. I suppose that no gold mines have ever been discovered of equal extent, and yielding such quantities, with so little labor as those of this country; and it will be, years before it can be exhausted. I have visited the 'diggings,' some forty miles along what is called the 'American Fork' of the Sacramento, almost every yard is occupied, and all are getting out quantities of ore. I have about five dollars worth of gold dust, which I washed out myself, in the course of two or three hours. I shall keep it, of course, as a memento of what I have done myself in gold digging. I would not again go through what I have, to see the country, and I would not sit down to write it, for all the gold in the mines. The mode of life is horrible, and a more dissipated and immoral set of people I never yet saw. People are flocking in here from all parts of the coast, and as soon as the news reaches foreign parts, the worst of their population will emigrate thither. I pity any decent white man who may live in this region six months hence."

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, FEB. 3, 1849.

John A. Green, Editor.

AGRICULTURAL CONVENTION. This body is to meet on Wednesday next, the seventh instant, instead of the ninth as was published last week. It is to be hoped that a goodly number interested in the objects for which the meeting was called will attend from every town in the County. The importance of such a movement has long been manifest, and now that a spirit is prevalent of the right stamp, let the good work be encouraged by the formation of a society and other means of advancement. Observe the notice in another column.

TERRIBLE EXPLOSION. As the New York train on the Providence Railroad was coming down the grade at Canton, last Thursday morning between five and six o'clock, the boiler burst, and killed instantly the engineer, Lucius Cummings, a portion of whose head was severed from the body and thrown a distance of several yards. The fireman who was in the tender removing the wood to the forward part, and thus escaped without much injury although stunned by the explosion. The engine, tender and a platform car for crates, were detached from the passenger cars at the time of the accident, and went over a mile before they were checked. None of the passengers were injured, but much frightened. The engineer was about thirty-six years of age and leaves a wife and family. The locomotive was the Ticonic, a new and very powerful engine, and no reason can be assigned for the explosion. An investigation will doubtless be instituted in order to learn the cause. By the forethought of William Hichborn of Hingham, the conductor, a collision with the freight train was prevented, he having despatched a messenger back with a red lantern, to warn them. The morning was quite dark, and the snow falling thickly. He deserves the highest commendation.

MAD DOGS. People have got it into their heads that the dogs are running mad, and they are supported in their opinions from the fact that quite a number have been bitten in different localities.

In Foxboro, eighteen dogs and one horse, said to have been bitten by a mad dog, have been killed in that town. The mad dog tried to bite several people, but fortunately without success. The furious animal was finally despatched with the butt end of a gun.

An association has been formed in Newton Upper Falls, the members of which bind themselves to kill all the dogs they find running at large unmuzzled, within a mile and a half of that place, until the next town meeting is held. Each member is to be paid twenty-five cents for every dog he kills, from the funds of the Society.

A dog, presumed to be mad, has been killed in the vicinity of the Tremont House in Boston. Previously, the dog had bitten two other dogs.

A strange dog has been shot in West Milton, near the residence of Lewis Davenport, Esq. All the symptoms of hydrophobia were manifest.

Several persons have been bitten in Hingham, and one person at Braintree Neck, was bitten in Boston.

CONGRESSIONAL. A good day's work has been done in the House of Representatives when sixty-six private bills were passed in committee of the whole.

A petition has been presented for aid in constructing a line of electric telegraph across the Atlantic.

It is reported that the Finance Committee of the Senate will recommend the coinage of the double gold Eagles, (twenty dollar pieces,) and also the coinage of silver quarter pieces, and small cents made of silver and copper.

The petition of Col. George W. Boyd and thirty-eight others of Quincy, (Mass.) praying Congress will establish the mileage of its members by the nearest post route, has been presented by Mr. Mann.

In the House, the Committee on the District of Columbia have reported a bill prohibiting the slave traffic in the District, which was read twice and ordered to be engrossed.

RAILROAD TO NEW YORK. The compromise arrangement between the New York and New Haven, and Hartford and New Haven Railroads, has gone into operation. It amounts to simply this—that passengers from or to New York may take the railroad or the steamboat between that city and New Haven, and be sure of a connection by either conveyance. The fare is the same either way. The mail will come by the boats as usual, and as the trains north from New Haven will not start until they arrive, (that is, on ordinary occasions,) nothing will be gained in time beyond that point. The tickets by this route between New York and Boston are fixed at five dollars, and may be procured at the Worcester Depot—passengers from Boston electing at the time of purchase which conveyance they will take beyond New Haven.

'A LITTLE MORE GRAPE.' Capt. Braxton Bragg, (now Colonel,) at a late public dinner in Mobile, (Missouri) took occasion to correct a popular saying, which associated his name so much with the battle of Buena Vista—"A little more grape, Capt. Bragg." He pronounced it a fancy sketch—no such occurrence having taken place on the field of battle; and the first he heard of this famous order was by newspapers from the United States.

THE SOUTH ON SLAVERY. The address of John C. Calhoun, although much modified from the original draft, has finally been adopted in the southern caucus by a small majority. The address is shrewd and artful, and entirely offensive. It is a fact worthy of notice, that the Texas members opposed the movement, and went for the Union under all circumstances. The whole affair will soon be forgot, except by a few southern fanatics.

SOME TO SPARE. The editor of the Lynn (Mass.) News in his last week's paper, remarks—"We like to have loafers pry round our desk, and stick their noses into our editorial—it looks so familiar and so nice!" Neighbor, we have a few of this sort of creatures to spare, especially on the eve of publication. Pay their fare, and we will label them to you without delay.

HARVARD COLLEGE. The nomination of Jared Sparks, LL.D., as President of the University, has been unanimously confirmed at the meeting of the Board of Overseers.

Hon. Edward Everett has been chosen to fill the vacancy in the Board of Overseers, created by the death of John Quincy Adams.

ACCIDENT. A few evenings since, Michael Hyde of Weymouth, was thrown from a wagon in Dorchester, striking his head against a stone, and badly fracturing his skull.

RAILROAD EXTENSION. The Sullivan Railroad has been opened during the past week from Bellows Falls to Windsor. By this important extension of the line of the Fitchburg, Vermont and Massachusetts, and Cheshire Roads, this entire line will be connected with the Central, and Passumpsic Railroads in Vermont, and the Northern Railroad in New Hampshire.

SUICIDE AT STOUGHTON. Israel Tisdale, Jr., Superintendent of the Stoughton Branch Railroad, was found early Monday morning last, suspended by his handkerchief, in one of the cars in the Depot in Stoughton. He was about forty-five years old, and leaves a wife and several children.

Mr. Tisdale was for many years, the driver of the stage between Boston and Stoughton, previous to the opening of the railroad.

MASSACHUSETTS MILITIA. The Adjutant General has submitted an able report on the Militia of the Commonwealth, during the past year. The active force numbered 4,588 at the Fall trainings, a decrease of four hundred and three men since the year previous. The total enrolled force is 98,076. He proposes that in lieu of the present drill and inspections, every regiment or brigade, at the option of the latter, do annually three consecutive days of regular duty, in camp, during which, they should conform, in all respects, to the routine of regular service, under a strict and systematic discipline. Company parades are also recommended.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS. Through the kindness of Hon. Marshall P. Wilder, we are indebted for a copy of the "Report of the Twentieth Annual Exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society," etc, from which we have extracted the beautiful hymn to the memory of the late Ex-President Adams, on the last page of to-day's paper.

Hon. Horace Mann is entitled to our thanks for important Congressional documents; and also the Hon. William B. Calhoun for his contribution in forwarding Legislative papers, etc.

LEGISLATIVE. A petition has been presented of Isaac McLellan and others for a railroad from Dorchester to Boston. Two remonstrances have also been presented against the above railroad project.

The petition of Anson Robbins and three hundred and seventy-three others has been presented, praying for a division of the town of Scituate.

The Committee on the Judiciary reported, that it was inexpedient to legislate upon the subject of providing more stringent laws to regulate the sale of ardent spirits.

The fifth annual report of the Old Colony Railroad has been presented and referred.

The bill to increase the salaries of the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas has been ordered to be engrossed in the House of Representatives, by a vote of 109 to 104, [absent 49.] This bill establishes the salary of the Chief Justice at $2300, and that of the associate Judges at $2100 each. The vote for Norfolk County stood—yeas, nine—nays, five—and two were absent. The Representative from this town voted with the nays.

ACCIDENT. Last Wednesday evening, as a freight train on the Old Colony Railroad was passing under the bridge in School Street in this town, one of the brakemen, John Slavin of Braintree, who was on the top of the cars, came in contact with the abutments of the bridge, by which the scalp of his head was considerably lacerated. If he had been struck an inch lower, it would have immediately proved fatal.

FOREIGN ARRIVAL. The California gold fever had reached England, and many were preparing to emigrate. France remained quiet—the Pope had not returned to Rome—Ireland was still. No other news of importance by this arrival.

Hon. Millard Fillmore has resigned his office of Comptroller of the State of New York, preparatory to assuming the duties of Vice President.

The present Mayor of Kingston, Canada, is a Yankee printer. He served his time in Utica, (N.Y.)

The two democratic claimants from Cincinnati have been admitted to seats in the Ohio Legislature. The democrats now have the ascendancy in the lower house.

In the Phenological Almanac for this year, is the following remarkable prediction, "Many will learn in 1849 for the first time, that it is no mark of a Christian or a gentleman, to smoke, chew, or snuff tobacco, drink spirits, or deceive."

The ice crop has thus far been remarkably good, and harvesting has been carried on swimmingly. From present appearances the shipments of this valuable product of ponds in the vicinity of Boston, will greatly exceed those of last year, which amounted to nearly seventy five thousand tons, and loaded ninety five vessels. The ice trade and the demand for vessels to go to California will give a new impulse to navigation.

The recent speech of the Governor General to the Parliament of Canada, on the opening of the session, announces the intention of the Crown to grant a general amnesty in favor of all persons who are still liable to penal consequences for political offences arising out of the occurrences of 1837 and 1838.

The birth day of Thomas Paine was celebrated by the firing of guns on Boston Common and by a ball in Charlestown.

The baptismal admission of the Hindoos, is as impressive on the bystander as it is beautiful. "Little babe thou enterest the world weeping while all around smile; contrive so to live, that you may depart in smiles while all around you weep."

Cassius M. Clay proposes a convention of the Anti-Slavery men of Kentucky, to be held at Louisville next spring, for the purpose of organization, with a view to secure the adoption of some scheme of emancipation in the new Constitution.

A Western editor says that no man who has paid regularly for his newspaper was ever known to be bitten by a mad dog.

Henry B. Anthony, editor of the Providence Journal, has been nominated as the whig candidate for Governor of Rhode Island.

The Albany correspondent of the Cornwall County (N. Y.) Whig says that "Ex-Gov. Seward is writing a life of John Quincy Adams." Humbug!

The trade of China with the United States, in round numbers, is worth ten million of dollars a year, independently of the traffic of opium, which is principally in the hands of foreign houses.

Two hundred and sixty-one steamboats have been wrecked on the Mississippi, since the commencement of steamboat navigation on that river.

A bill for the preservation of newspapers has been introduced into the Assembly of New York. It directs the clerks of the several counties to subscribe for and take at the public expense, not exceeding two newspapers published in the several counties, and to preserve the same among the records of the offices. A good idea.

An Irishman lately died in New York, from the effects of Chloroform administered to alleviate the suffering of a surgical operation.

In the year 1833 an extraordinary mania raged in the United States for digging gold in Georgia. The gold mines of that State are situated about one hundred and eighty miles from Augusta, the capital of Georgia.

Dr. J. W. Francis, who commenced life as a printer, in some remarks at the late Franklin Festival in New York, alluded to the singular fact that, when he afterwards became a lecturer in the medical college of that metropolis, one of the text books which he employed was a copy of the proof sheets of a work, every type of which had been set by his own hand when a printer!

The letter "H," has been painted on houses, fences and posts, in all quarters of Boston, indicating the location of the different hydrants.

A person who had been listening to a very dull address, remarked that every thing went off well, especially the audience.

If a man twenty-one years of age would begin to save one dollar per week, and put it at interest every year, he would have at thirty-one years of age, six hundred and fifty dollars; at forty-five years of age, one thousand six hundred and eighty; at sixty years of age, six thousand one hundred and fifty; and at seventy years of age, eleven thousand and five hundred dollars.

The hull of the steamer Empire State which was lately burnt at Fall River, has been raised and emptied of water. Her bottom was found to be but little injured.

Petitions signed by fifteen thousand respectable citizens, have been presented to the Mayor of New York, asking his interference for an abatement of the Sunday liquor traffic in that city.

The corner stone of the Jackson monument, to be erected in Washington, will be laid on the fourth of July next.

Fifty-seven boys have already been received at the Massachusetts State Reform School.

The farmers in Hampshire, (Eng.) before sowing their wheat, steep it in a strong solution of arsenic, to prevent the ravages of the wire worms. The consequence is, that thousands of partridges are found dead, sitting with their heads erect and eyes open, as if they were alive.

Sixty-six years ago on Saturday, Jan. 30th, 1783, Great Britain acknowledged the United States an independent nation.

CAUTION.

The public are particularly cautioned against being imposed upon by persons that are selling preparations of Sarsaparilla which they pretend have in some qualities as Brown's Sarsaparilla and Tomato Bitters. Since these Bitters have been offered to the public, there have been no less than four different imitations got up by as many different individuals, and sold for the genuine. The good qualities of Brown's Extract of Sarsaparilla and Tomatoes, or Sarsaparilla and Tomato Bitters, is already known and appreciated by physicians and the public, particularly by those who have used them for impurities of the blood, bad humors, scurvy, bilious affections, Costiveness, loss of appetite, &c. There has been no medicine said that has given such general satisfaction. There cannot be the least doubt but this compound is the best alternative now in use. We have abundance of proof of that fact. There have been thousands of cases of the blood cured by this medicine. Some of them have been truly wonderful, where the patients have been given over as incurable. The above compound is not merely a common extract of Sarsaparilla, but a very strong extract of the best Spanish Sarsaparilla, extracted by an entirely new apparatus, made expressly for the proprietor, and used by no other person in this country. This apparatus ensures the whole medical qualities of this most valuable root.

Feb. 3.

The Boston Mercantile Journal, of March 25, 1846, gives the following notice of the most popular remedy of the day:

WILD CHERRY BALSAM.

We speak in praise of Wilder's Balsam of Wild Cherry, because we believe from our own knowledge of the article that it is one of the best in the market for the complaints for which it is recommended.

This medicine, coming from such a respectable source, and carefully prepared by an experienced and skillful physician, is received by the public with confidence. Its efficacy has been proved in many obdurate cases of disease, and its fame has rapidly extended. It has been extensively used in every part of the country, particularly in the Middle and Northern States; and strong testimony from intelligent and highly respectable persons, has been adduced in favor of its merits as a remedy for colds and coughs, affections of the chest, diseased liver and dyspepsia.

None genuine, unless signed I. BUTTS, on the wrapper.

For sale in Quincy by Mrs. E. HAYDEN & Braintree, Oliver Perkins; South Braintree, J. Stoddard. Sold also by Druggists generally.

A sure cure for Dyspepsia and Costiveness.

HARRISON'S PERISTALTICS have had 12 years' trial by the Medical faculty and the public generally. This medicine is in Lozenges, pleasant to the taste, and may be given to children. The Peristaltics are gently laxative, and by their tonic qualities improve the digestive and assimilative powers of the system. They cure Costiveness, Headache, Dizziness, Sleeplessness, Jaundice, Oppression after Eating, Liver Complaint, Diarrhoea, Piles, Dropsy, Debility, Faintness, Weak Stomach, Heartburn, Palpitation, Rheumatism, Pains in the Bones, Scrofula, The Double-crux, Worms, &c., &c.

These Lozenges are excellent in all Nervous complaints and Dyspeptic symptoms, Female Suppressions and Irregularities, especially in the young. This medicine contains no preparation of Mercury whatever, and no ingredient which may not safely be given to the most delicate female and under any circumstances.

This preparation is also put up in bottles for seafaring persons, who should always have a supply. The occasional use of the Peristaltics prevents Fevers, Bilious complaints, and chronic or East India Diarrhoea. They are admirably adapted to the complaints incident to the coast of Africa, Sumatra, West Indies and South America.

These Lozenges are recommended by some of the best Physicians in Boston, who use them in their families and general practice. All afflicted with oppression after eating, or rising of food will find great relief. They are the best medicine for children known.

For sale in Quincy by Mrs. E. HAYDEN, Seth W. Fowle, 138 Washington street, Boston. General Agent.

To be Let,

FOR one or five years, and possession given on the first of April next, Minot Thayer's FARM, containing a Dwelling House, Barn, and other necessary Out Buildings, and about twenty acres of Mowing, Tillage and Pasture Land, situated in the town of Braintree, on the Monaquon River and forty rods from the South Shore Railroad Depot. The farm is in a high state of cultivation, has a great variety of Fruit, cuts about fifty tons of Hay yearly, of the most superior quality, both English and Black Grass.

There are great advantages on the farm relating to the selling of Stones of any kind. There is a ready sale of the most inferior for ballast. The pasturing is very good, and there is no farm in the County more suitable for the milk business. The situation perhaps the most pleasant and delightful of any in the State.

P. S. A few pairs of superior Malay and Yellow Leg DORKIN FOWL, may be had at said Farm.

Please apply as above.

Worms! Worms!

PINK ROOT SYRUP

ARE safely, speedily and most effectually expelled from the system by the use of

WHITWELLS PINK ROOT SYRUP.

Spigelia, or Indian Pink.

has been in use for hundreds of years among the Indian tribes of North America, as a certain remedy for Worms.

Almost every family in N. E. is acquainted with its use. The great and only objection heretofore to its use, has been that it was necessary to pour half a pint down a child's throat in order to destroy and expell the worms; but that objection exists no longer.

In the PINK ROOT SYRUP, you have the strongest possible preparation of the Pink root, united with Castor-oil and Tonic, made into a pleasant and healthful Syrup, which children will take without any trouble. Indeed, they like it much, and will never refuse to take it. The dose of this agreeable medicine for an infant is only Half a Teaspoon Full.

Full and ample directions accompany its use. The public are respectfully requested to give it a trial, and they will never use any other remedy.

—ALSO FOR SALE—

Whitwells Syrup of Blackberry.

(Made of the Root.)

For Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Cholera Morbus, WHITWELLS TEMPERANCE BITTERS.

Sold in Quincy by Mrs. E. HAYDEN, Sole Agent.

THE subscribers would respectfully inform the public that they intend running a Carriage every morning for the accommodation of passengers from Quincy Point to Braintree Neck, returning always by Quincy Point, in season for passengers to take the Plymouth Train for Boston; also, to leave the Depot every afternoon on the arrival of the Plymouth Train for Quincy Point and Braintree Neck.

The subscribers hope by promptness and despatch to secure the patronage of the public. Should sufficient encouragement be extended to this enterprise, it is intended to place on the route a larger and still more suitable conveyance.

Rates of Fare.

On the regular line, 12 1/2 cts. each

Extra Trains, 15 " "

Single passengers to extra trains, 25 " "

A state will be kept at the Store of Mr. Benjamin Newcomb, Mr. Elias Hayward and George Newcomb.

Persons leaving their names at either of the above places early in the morning for any other than the Plymouth trains, will be sent for in season.

THE FISHERMAN.

There lived an honest fisherman,
I knew him passing well,
Who dwelt hard by a little pond,
Within a little dell.
A grave and quiet man was he,
Who loved his hook and rod;
So even ran his line of life,
His neighbors thought it odd.

For silence and for books, he said,
He never had a wish;
No school with him was worth a fig,
Except a "school of fish."
The single minded fisherman
A double calling had—
To tend his flock in winter time,
In summer fish for shed.

In short, this honest fisherman
All other toils forsook,
And though no vagrant man was he,
He lived by "hook and crook."
All day that fisherman would sit Upon an ancient log,
And gaze into the water, like
Some sedentary frog.

A cunning fisherman was he,
His angles were all right,
And when he scratched his aged roll,
You'd know he'd got a bite.
To charm the fish he spoke,
Although his voice was fine,
He found the most convenient way
Was just to "drop a line."

And many a "gudgeon" of the pond,
If made to speak to day,
Would own, with grief, this angler had
A mighty "taking way."
One day, while fishing on a log,
He mourned his want of luck,
When suddenly he felt a bite,
And jerking—caught a duck.

Alas, that day the fisherman
Had taken too much grog,
And being but a landsman, too,
He couldn't "keep his log."
In vain he strove with all his might,
And tried to gain the shore;
Down, down he went, to feed the fish
He'd baited off before!

The moral of this mournful tale
To all is plain and clear;
A single "drop too much" of rum
May make a watery beer.
And he who will not "sign the pledge,"
And keep the promise fast,
May be, in spite of fate, a STIFF COLD WATER MAN at last!

IN MEMORY OF JOHN QUINCY ADAMS.
BY MRS. LYDIA H. SUGGINS.

Written for and sung at the annual exhibition of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, at Faneuil Hall, Boston, in September last.

Remember him, who year by year,
To bless this festive circle came,
Who held the arts of peace more dear
Than all the warrior's biazon'd fame:
Towards him, in highest halls of state,
A listening throng attentive bent,
And wisdom hush'd the deep debate,
To hear that "old man eloquent."

For, by his clear, far-reaching mind,
Enrich'd with lore of many a land,
The fruits that deck the board refin'd,
The flowers that bloom in beauty's hand,
The fields, the laboring swain that feed,
The plough that breaks the yielding ground,
Were priz'd,—though Learning's proudest meed,
With active wreaths, his brow had crown'd.

Oh, ne'er forget that patriot sage,
The Mentor of his native clime,
Revere the counsels of his age,
His apothecary sublime,
His studious youth, from folly free,
His hoary years, no cloud might dim,
And bid the child upon your knee
Remember him,—remember him.

ANECDOTES.

A clergyman having indulged too freely in filling up his glass with one Sabbath into the pulpit, and having given out a hymn to his congregation, sat down; the melody of the sacred song soon lulled him to sleep, and he continued for some time to play a treble bass symphony with his nose. At length one of the deacons, ascending to the sacred desk, and told him the hymn was out.

"Well," says he, "fill it up again."
"Come here, my lad," said an attorney to a boy about nine years old. The boy went, and asked the attorney what case was to be tried next. The lawyer answered, "a case between the people and the devil—which do you think will be most likely to gain the action?" The boy replied, "I guess it will be a pretty hard squeeze—the people have got the most money, but the devil the most lawyers."

"What news?" said one neighbor to another. "Ah
it's very sad!" "Sad—why?" "Why the plague has arrived!" replied he of the rueful countenance.
"The plague!" goodness, gracious!" stammered the other, turning deadly pale, and gasping for breath.
"Yes," rejoined he, with a sigh so piteous that it shook his whole bulk, "My wife has come home!"

A gentleman who has a warm side for a young lady, was recently making sport of a sack which she wore.

"You had better keep quiet, or I'll give you the sack," said the lady archly.

"I should be most happy," was the gallant response,
"if you will give it to me as it is, with yourself inside of it!"

"What, sir, have my client did? Nothing, sir, nothing. But that is the man who had did the mischief. Him it was, what with the ferocity of a bloodhound, seized a shingle and pursued the victim!"

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

Quite a large and enthusiastic meeting was held at Dedham, on Wednesday last, for the purpose of forming an Agricultural Society for the County of Norfolk. Hon. Benjamin V. French called the convention to order, when it was temporarily organized by the choice of E. K. Whitaker, Esq. of Needham, as Chairman, and E. M. Richards of Dedham, Secretary.

Hon. R. F. Copeland of Roxbury, Cheever Newhall, Esq., of Dorchester, Hon. Joseph Hawes of Walpole, Leonard Everett, Esq. of Canton, and Elijah Perry, Esq., of Dover, were appointed a committee to select a list of Officers for the convention, who made the following report, viz:

President—Charles F. Adams of Quincy.
Vice Presidents—Josiah Quincy of Quincy, M. P. Wilder of Dorchester, B. V. French of Braintree, Ebenezer Burgess of Dedham, Thomas French of Canton, Joseph L. Richardson of Medway.
Secretaries—E. L. Keyes of Dedham, E. G. Robinson of Dedham, J. A. Green of Quincy.

On motion of M. P. Wilder, Voted, That it is now expedient to form an Agricultural Society for Norfolk County, and that a Committee be appointed to report a Constitution.

Chose M. P. Wilder of Dorchester, Josiah Brigham of Quincy, Thomas Motley, Jr. of Dedham, E. K. Whitaker of Needham, and Samuel Walker of Roxbury, as the Committee on the Constitution.

A committee was also selected, of one gentleman from each of the towns in the County, to report a list of Officers for the Society.

The President of the Convention on taking the chair, made some excellent remarks as did also Vice President B. V. French. Hon. Josiah Quincy, Jr. spoke with good effect, and in his usual easy and pleasant style. Remarks were also made by other gentlemen, when the convention adjourned for a short time.

At the afternoon session, the Committee on the Constitution submitted their report, which, after some debate, their draft of such an instrument was unanimously adopted.

The Committee on Officers for the Society recommended the following gentlemen, and they were accordingly chosen, viz:—

President—Marshall P. Wilder of Dorchester.
Vice Presidents—Charles F. Adams of Quincy, Benjamin V. French of Braintree, S. D. Bradford of Roxbury, Cheever Newhall of Dorchester, Ebenezer Burgess of Dedham, Joseph L. Richardson of Medway.

Corresponding Secretary—Edgar K. Whitaker of Needham.
Recording Secretary—Edward L. Keyes of Dedham.
Treasurer—Enos Ford of Dedham.

Finance Committee—E. M. Richards of Dedham, Jonathan French of Roxbury, Ebenezer Wight of Dedham.

Trustees—A. D. Williams, Charles Ellis of Roxbury; F. W. Macomber, Edward King of Dorchester; George W. Bond of Quincy, Charles M. Fogg of Braintree, Thomas Motley, Jr. of Dedham, John Howe of Brookline, Jesse Pierce of Stoughton, Lynn Kingsley of Canton, Elijah Perry of Dover, William Flag of Needham, Rev. Charles C. Sewall of Medfield, Charles Breck of Milton, Horatio Mison of Medway, Asa Pickering of Bellingham, J. C. Doane of Cohasset, Truman Clarke of Walpole, Caleb Holbrook of Randolph, Meletiah Everett of Wrentham, Ward Adams of Franklin, Martin Torrey of Foxboro', Lemuel Humphrey of Weymouth, Elijah Hewins of Sharon.

Executive Committee—Marshall P. Wilder of Dorchester, Enos Ford of Dedham, Joseph Hawes of Walpole, Thomas Motley, Jr. of Dedham, G. R. Russell of Roxbury.

Samuel Walker, Esq. of Roxbury, moved the appointment of a committee to solicit funds and members for the Society. By the Constitution five dollars constitutes a person a member for life and exempts him from assessments. This committee shortly reported that they had obtained eight hundred and seventy dollars, including three hundred dollars given by Hon. C. F. Adams, and one hundred dollars each by Hon. M. P. Wilder, Hon. B. V. French, and A. D. Williams, Esq.

After an effective speech from Samuel Walker, Esq. of Roxbury, gentlemen pledged to the Society further sums, viz:—Roxbury, five hundred dollars; Dedham, three hundred dollars; Wrentham, two hundred dollars; Quincy, Needham and Milton, each, one hundred dollars; Dover, fifty dollars. This sum will be increased to three thousand dollars, and then the Society will be entitled to six hundred dollars, annually, from the State.

The Officers of the Society were authorized to apply to the Legislature for an act of incorporation. Thanks were passed to the officers, and to the gentlemen who had so generously aided the Society by their liberal donations.

On motion of E. L. Keyes of Dedham, the following well-merited vote was unanimously passed, to which the gentleman briefly replied.

Voted—That the thanks of this convention be presented to E. K. Whitaker for the industry and zeal with which he has labored for the establishment of an agricultural society in the County of Norfolk.

The convention was then dissolved.

DUTCH AUCTION. The mode of sale is by bidding downwards, which is invariably followed in Holland, and is sometimes adopted at large private and government auctions. It is done thus: The article is set up at any price the auctioneer pleases; if nobody bids, he lowers the price, and thus continues lowering until some person cries "mine," and the person who so claims is then entitled to it. "A practice," says a law writer, "congenial to Dutch taciturnity."

THE UNION. Ninety and nine of every hundred of the people of this country are attached to the Union without any regard to motives of interest; and even a yet larger number—nine hundred and ninety nine of every thousand—are interested in its preservation, the poor even more than the rich. The fools who talk of the destruction of the confederacy, are only one degree less foolish than the fools who believe that it can take place. Five and thirty years ago, a few great men might have brought about the dissolution of the Union, as the effect of their united exertions; now, the only effect of such exertions would be their own dissolution.—Boston Times.

The Legislature of Arkansas, have changed the name of a county from Van Buren to Cass.

ORIGIN OF VARIOUS PLANTS.

Every farmer ought to be so far acquainted with the history of all ordinary plants and trees, as to know their nature, country and condition. Such knowledge, besides being on every account proper and desirable, will sometimes explain phenomena in their habits that would otherwise appear anomalous and inexplicable.

Wheat was brought from the central table land of Tibet, where its original yet exists as a grass, with small mealy seeds.

Rye, exists wild in Siberia.

Barley, exists wild in the mountains of Himalaya.

Oats, wild in Northern Africa.

Maize, Indian Corn, was brought from America.

Rice, from South Africa, whence it was taken to India, and from thence to Europe and America.

The Garden Bean, from the East Indies.

The Horse Bean, from the Caspian Sea.

Backwheat, originally came from Siberia and Tartary.

Rape Seed, and Cabbage, grow wild in Sicily and Naples.

The Poppy, from the East.

The Sunflower, from Peru.

Flax, or Linseed, is, in Southern Europe, a weed in the ordinary grain crops.

The Raddish, from China.

The Garden Cress, out of Egypt and the East.

Hemp, is a native of Persia and the East Indies.

The Nettle, which sometimes furnishes fibres for spinning, is a native of Europe.

Of Dye Plants, the Madder comes from the East.

Dyers weed grows in Southern Germany.

Safflower from Egypt.

Dyers Knotgrass, from China.

Hops come to perfection as a wild plant in Germany.

Mustard and Caraway Seed the same.

Anise, from Egypt and the Grecian Archipelago.

Koriander grows wild near the Mediterranean.

Saffron, from the Levant.

The Onion, out of Egypt.

Horseradish, from South Europe.

Tobacco, is a native of Virginia, Tobago and California. Another Species has also been found wild in Asia.

Fuller's Teazel, grows wild in Southern Europe.

The Grasses, are mostly native plants, and so are the Clovers except Lucerne, which is a native of Sicily.

The Gourd, is probably an Eastern plant.

The Potato, is a well known native of Peru and Mexico.

Turnip and Mangold Wurzel come from the shores of the Mediterranean.

Monaltri and White Turnips, are natives of Germany.

The Carrot, is supposed by some to have been brought from Asia, but others maintain it to be a native of the same place as the White Turnip.

Amongst other kitchen plants, the Spinach is attributed to Arabia.

The Cucumber, from the East Indies.

The Melon, from Kalmuck.

Parsley, grows in Sardinia.

Celery, in Germany.

Of Fruit Trees and Shrubs, the Currant and Gooseberry came from Southern Europe.

Medlar Pear, and Apple are likewise European plants.

The Cherry, Plum, and Almond, came from Asia Minor.

The Walnut, and Peach, from the same country.

The Citron, from Media.

The Quince from the Island of Crete.

The Chestnut, from Italy.

OLDEN TIME WINTERS. In 1664 the cold was so intense that the Thames was covered with ice sixty one inches thick. Almost all the birds perished.

In 1691 the cold was so excessive that the famished wolves entered Vienna and attacked beasts and even men. Many people in Germany were frozen to death in 1695, and the winters of 1697 and 1699 were nearly as bad.

In 1708 occurred that famous winter, called, by distinction the cold winter. All the rivers and lakes were frozen, and even the sea for several miles from the shore. The ground was frozen nine feet deep. Birds and beasts were struck dead in the fields, and men perished by thousands in their houses.

In 1792, in Scotland, multitudes of cattle and sheep were buried in the snow.

In 1740 the winter was scarcely inferior to that of 1799. The snow lay ten feet deep in Spain and Portugal. The Zuyder Zee was frozen over, and thousands of people went over it. And the lakes of England froze.

In 1744 the winter was very cold. Snow fell in Portugal to the depth of twenty three feet on a level.

In 1754 and 1755 the winters were very severe and cold. In England the strongest ale, exposed in this air in a glass, was covered in fifteen minutes with ice one-eighth of an inch thick.

In 1771 the Elbe was frozen to the bottom.

In 1776 the Danube bore ice five feet deep below Vienna. Vast numbers of the feathered and furry tribes perished.

The winters of 1784 and 1785 were uncommonly severe. The Little Belt was frozen over.

From 1800 to 1812, also, the winters were remarkably cold, particularly the latter, in Russia, which proved so disastrous to the French army.

"THE OLD OAKEN BUCKET." The New York Sunday Age relates the origin of this famous fable, written it seems by Samuel B. Woodworth, when a Journeyman Printer in an office situated at the corner of Chatham and Chambers streets, New York. Nearby, in Frankfort Street, was a drinking shop kept by a man named Mallory, where Woodworth and several particular friends used to resort. One afternoon the liquor was super-excellent and Woodworth seemed inspired by it; for, after taking a draught, he laid his glass upon the table, and smacking his lips, declared that Mallory's EAU DE VIE was superior to any he had ever tasted? "No," said Mallory, "you are mistaken; there was one thing which, in both our estimations, far surpassed this, in the way of drinking." "What was that?" asked Woodworth, dubiously. "The draught of pure, fresh spring water, that we used to drink from the old oaken bucket that hung in the well, after our return from the labors of the field on a sultry day in the summer." The teardrop glistened for a moment in Woodworth's eye.

"True—true!" he replied, and shortly after quitted the place. He immediately returned to the office, grasped a pen, and in half an hour "The Old Oaken Bucket," one of the most delightful compositions in our language, was ready in manuscript to be embalmed in the memories of succeeding generations.

LIVE NOT FOR THYSELF ALONE. God has written upon the flowers that sweeten the air—on the breeze that rocks the flowers on the stem, upon the raindrop that refreshes the sprig of moss that lifts its head in the dust—upon the ocean that rocks every swimmer in its deep chamber—upon every pencilled shell that sleeps in the caverns of the deep, no less than upon the mighty sun that warms and cheers millions of creatures that live in its light, upon his works he has written, "None of us live to himself." And probably were we wise enough to understand these words, we should find there is nothing, from the cold stone in the earth or the minutest creature that breathes, which may not in some way or other minister to the happiness of some living creature. We admire and praise the flower that best answers the end for which it was created, and the tree that bears fruit the most rich and abundant, the star that is most useful in the heavens we admire the most.

And is it not reasonable that man, to whom the whole creation from the flower up to the spangled heavens, all minister—who has power of conferring deeper misery and higher happiness than any being on earth—man, who can act like God if he will, is it not reasonable he should live for the noble end of living—not for himself but for others.

It is said that upwards of forty thousand passports have been issued at Washington within the last three months.

At the recent presidential election, Taylor received 1,355,828 votes; Cass, 1,216,746; and Van Buren, 291,927. Scattering, about 4,000.

There are forty one savings-banks in Massachusetts. During last year there were about seventy thousand depositors. Over $11,980,000 were deposited, and $460,000 interest paid.

The benefit at the Boston Museum for the family of the late William J. Snelling, late editor of the Boston Herald, netted $406.37, which amount has been paid to his widow and duly acknowledged by her.

Messrs. James Bergen and Richard Ryan, who were so long imprisoned in Dublin, on suspicion of an intention to assist in destroying, in the language of John Mitchell, "the bloody old British Empire," have arrived at New York from Liverpool.

Flowers were in bloom at Pensacola (Fla.) on the 16th ult, and the orange trees loaded with fruit.

The total expenses of the United States government during the past year, the Secretary of the Treasury puts at $58,240,000; the resources of the government, $58,430,000; balance in the treasury about $150,000.

CONGRESS. Mr. Davis of this State, presented in the Senate, the memorial of Little & Brown of Boston, asking the patronage of government in a publication which they propose to issue of the writings of John Adams, second President of the United States.

The bill appropriating $171,224 for the expenses of West Point Academy has passed the house. So also has the naval pension bill, and the revolutionary pension bill.

Mr. Mann has presented to the House, the petition of William Allen and ninety three others, inhabitants of Quincy, (Mass.) in behalf of cheap postage. Also, the petition of James W. Ward and three hundred and forty others, inhabitants of Abington, praying for cheap postage.

A proposition has been presented to the United States Senate, having in view the establishment of a magnetic communication between this country and Europe.

THE DAGUERRETYPE. We have received several numbers of this beautifully printed magazine of literature and science, compiled in part from the periodical publications of England, France and Germany. We have not thoroughly perused the numbers, but from what we have read entertain a very favorable view of the magazine. Good taste in the selection of articles of solid value appear to mark its pages. A foreign miscellaneous publication of this character should receive a large support, and especially at the low rate at which it is afforded. Crosby & Nichols, 111 Washington Street, Boston, are the publishers.

WORTH SEEING. Curtis's Panoramic Views in Mexico, connected with the landing of the American Army at Vera Cruz, the several battles fought, and the march and entry into the City of Mexico, are the best executed and most natural designs that have been exhibited in relation to Mexican affairs, scenery, etc. No one should fail to visit the exhibition where a chance happens.

U. S. SENATORS. Henry Clay has been elected to the United States Senate by the Kentucky Legislature, for six years in place of Thomas H. Metcalfe, whose term expires.

Ex. Gov. William H. Seward (whig.) has been elected by both branches of the legislature of New York, Senator to Congress for six years.

ARSON. A young man, named Holbrook, has been arrested at South Braintree, on the charge of setting fire to the school-house and barn which were burnt in that town on the evening of the 24th ult. He was examined before Justice Kingsbury of Weymouth, and gave bail in the sum of eight hundred dollars, to appear for trial at the next term of the Court of Common Pleas, to be held at Dedham.

LICENSES. Seth Crane, Isaac H. Willey and Harrison Keith of this town, have each been examined before Justice Gourgass, during the present week, for violations of the license laws of this State, and all of them have been fined.

ANOTHER TRIAL. The Governor has assigned Monday the 5th day of March next, for a trial in District No. IV of this State, to elect a member of the thirty first Congress.

FOR WASHINGTON. Maj. Gen. Zachary Taylor and suite have started for the seat of government. A large gathering witnessed his departure, and crowds have welcomed him at places on his journey. He intends to reach the Capital by the 20th instant.

QUINCY STONE BANK. At an administrator's sale, in this town the present week, two shares in this Bank brought one hundred and fourteen dollars each, being twenty eight dollars above the par value.

THE GREAT FESTIVAL. All who intend to be present at the Taylor Festival, in Faneuil Hall, Boston, had better be in season to procure their tickets, as we understand the number is limited. Over eight hundred have already been sold. Many of the most distinguished men in our country have signified their acceptance of an invitation to be present, and the highest gratification may be anticipated in listening to the eloquence of some of our ablest orators.

LEGISLATIVE. The House have made choice of Rev Dr Hitchcock of Amherst College to preach the next election sermon.

The petition of the Old Colony Railroad Corporation, for further time to file the location of their Mount Hope Branch in Quincy, was presented and referred.

The Committee on Towns have made a report favorable to the division of the town of Scituate. Some debate has arisen in the Senate on the dog law passed by the House.

PENMANSHIP. The classes in the art of Writing under the direction of Mr. Lewis C. Rice, are making very rapid improvement under his uniform mode of instruction, as we can testify from an examination of specimens of the improvement made by his pupils. His method of instruction is systematic and expeditious, and his success in communicating in a very short space of time, a well formed and elegant hand writing is said to be, and we believe, stands unrivalled. Punctual in his appointments, and assiduous in his devotion to the advancement of his pupils, we trust his room will be well filled at the commencement of his second term.

To such perfection is agriculture carried in Flanders, that two and one half acres are considered ample for the support of a man, wife and three children. A hundred acres then would support forty families, or two hundred souls, and yet we Americans talk of a crowded population.

It is said that about fifty prize-fighters are to leave New York for California, in about a week after the fight between Hyer and Sullivan, and that they are loud in their boasts of what they will do when they arrive at the "diggins."

In Boston, colds and quinseys prevail very generally, and the ravages of scarlet fever among the young are extensive and severe. There have been nearly a dozen deaths from this disease, within a few days.

A mechanic of Utica (N. Y.) has invented a gun that discharges twenty-six times for one loading, which it does in two minutes, or less—the charges being attached to an endless chain.

It is stated in the Boston Atlas that of the 4,182,000 acres of land in Massachusetts available for cultivation in some form, only two hundred and sixty thousand acres, or six and a half per cent. are "under tillage," the remaining ninety-three and half per cent. consisting of woodlands, meadows, swamps, pasturage, etc.

DIED.

In this town, 3d inst., Mrs. Margaret, widow of the late Dea Josiah Adams, aged 75.

In Braintree, (Vt) 11th ult., Dea. Zenas Thayer, aged 64. He was born in Braintree, (Mass.) but had resided in Braintree, (Vt.) the last forty years of his life.

LINES

Suggested by the death of Bridget Hardy and James Humphreys,—members of Grammar School, District No. 1, Dorchester,—by Elwell Woodbury, Grammar Master of said School. The former died Jan. 13th, and the latter Jan. 25th, 1849.

We meet, as oft we've met before,
 In our accustomed room;
 But ~~two~~ are seen by us no more—
 They've journeyed to the tomb.

The days are few since he and she,
 Our friends and schoolmates dear,
 Performed their part most faithfully,
 In all the duties here.

Alas! a sudden change we see—
 A change from joy to gloom—
 Those active spirits, kind and free,
 Are silent in the tomb.

But yesterday we saw them here—
 Their voices sweet we heard—
 Their buoyant spirits served to cheer
 The hopes within us stirred.

The bright examples that they set—
 The places they did fill
 Within our hearts, are vivid yet—
 Tho' dead, they're living still.

'Tis meet to mourn the loss of two
 We only knew to love—
 But they've commenced a life anew,
 A life of bliss above.

The loss that we've been made to feel
 Is their eternal gain;
 That loss no earthly charm can heal,
 But heaven can soothe the pain.

We pray for strength to onward go,
 In the same path they trod;
 For that must lead from earth below,
 To heaven above—to God.

Their bodies rest within the tomb—
 Their spirits—they now dwell
 Where sorrow never comes, nor gloom;
 Farewell, school-mates, farewell.

CAUTION.

The public are particularly cautioned against being imposed upon by persons that are selling preparations of Sarsaparilla which they pretend have the same qualities as Brown's Sarsaparilla and Tomato Bitters. Since these Bitters have been offered to the public, there have been no less than four different imitations got up by as many different individuals, and sold for the genuine. The good qualities of Brown's Extract of Sarsaparilla and Tomatoes, or Sarsaparilla and Tomato Bitters, is already known and appreciated by physicians and the public, particularly by those who have used them for impurities of the blood, and Humors, Scrofulous diseases, Bilious affections, Constiveness, loss of appetite, etc. There has been no medicine sold that has given such general satisfaction. There cannot be the least doubt but this compound is the best alternative now in use. We have abundance of proof of that fact. There have been thousands of cases of impurities of the blood cured by this medicine. Some of them have been truly wonderful, where the patients have been given over as incurable. The above compound is not merely a common extract of Sarsaparilla, but a very strong extract of the best Spanish Sarsaparilla, extracted by an entirely new apparatus, made expressly for the proprietor, and used by no other person in this country. This apparatus ensures the whole medicinal qualities of this most valuable root.

WILD CHERRY BALSAM.

We speak in praise of Wietar's Balsam of Wild Cherry, because we believe from our own knowledge of the article that it is one of the best in the market for the complaints for which it is recommended. This medicine, coming from such a respectable source, and carefully prepared by an experienced and skillful physician, is received by the public with confidence. Its efficacy has been proved in many obdurate cases of disease, and its fame has rapidly extended. It has been extensively used in every part of the country, particularly in the Middle and Northern States; and strong testimony from intelligent and highly respectable persons, has been adduced in favor of its merits as a remedy for colds and coughs, affections of the chest, diseased liver and dyspepsia.

None genuine, unless signed I. BUTTS, on the wrapper.

For sale in Quincy by Mrs. E. HAYDEN; Braintree, Oliver Perkins; South Braintree, J. Stoddard & Co. Sold also by agents generally. 2w Feb. 3.

A sure cure for Dyspepsia and Constiveness.

HARRISON'S PERISTALTICS have had 12 years' trial by the Medical faculty and the public generally. This medicine is in Lozenges, pleasant to the taste, and may be given to children. The Peristaltics are gently laxative, and by their tonic qualities improve the digestive organs and invigorate the whole system. They cure Constiveness, Headache, Dizziness, Sleepiness, Jaundice, Oppression after Eating, Liver Complaint, Diarrhoea, Piles, Dropsy, Debility, Painfulness, Weak Stomach, Heartburn, Palpitation, Rheumatism, Pains in the Bones, Scrofula, Tic Douloureux, Worms, etc.

These Lozenges are excellent in all Nervous complaints and Dyspeptic symptoms, Female Suppressions and Irregularities, especially in the young. This medicine contains no preparation of Mercury whatever, and no ingredient which may not safely be given to the most delicate female and under any circumstances.

This preparation is also put up in bottles for seafaring persons, who should always have a supply. An occasional use of the Peristaltics prevents Fevers, Bilious complaints, and chronic or East India Diarrhoea. They are admirably adapted to the complaints incident to the coast of Africa, Sumatra, West Indies and South America.

These Lozenges are recommended by some of the best Physicians in Boston, who use them in their families and general practice. All afflicted with oppression after eating, or rising of food will find great relief. They are the best medicine for children known.

United States HEALTH INSURANCE COMPANY,

Office No. 17 State Street, Boston. Incorporated by the Legislature of Massachusetts, May 10, 1848. Capital, $50,000.

Directors. Sam'l Aspinwall, Lemuel M. Barker, John Bigelow, Jonas Chickering, George Farrar, James Clark, Heman Lincoln, Samuel H. Jenks, Benj. Lamson, Joseph Lewis, Elijah Mears, S. P. Meriam, Joseph B. Paine, Thomas R. Saxe, N. Sturtevant, Simeon P. Taylor, Charles H. White, D. W. Wiswell, Dan. Leverett, Charlestown, J. L. Lord, New York.

President and Treasurer—JAMES CLARK. Secretary—SAMUEL H. JENKS. Consulting Physicians—D. Humphrey, Storor, M. D., 14 Winter St.; Augustus A. Gould, M. D., 15 West St.

Superintendent of Agencies—Simeon P. Taylor. THIS Institution insures both males and females against disease or accident, according to the rates specified in their tables. The former, by depositing a given sum yearly, may insure a return of four-fifths of that deposit, for each and every week within that year, during which he may be so disabled by illness as to be prevented from pursuing his usual occupation, such allowance not to exceed four hundred dollars in any one year. Females, insured against all maladies common to both sexes, are entitled to return allowances equal to three-fourths of their yearly payments, for every week's sickness. Thus, an investment of $5 a year by the former, or of $5.33 by the latter, will, if deprived of health, secure to the party insured, a repayment of $4 per week.

An advance payment of not less than one dollar will be required of each applicant at the time of making the proposal; which sum, in case of rejection, will be refunded, or allowed in case of acceptance. The applicant is thereby insured, if the proposal be approved, for the term of thirty days, and no longer, unless the policy be taken, and the balance of premium paid within that time.

Persons insured by this Company become members thereof, so far as to entitle them to a proportion of all dividends of its annual profits, in the ratio of their respective premiums, and according to the duration of their policies.

The renewal of any policy may be secured, on notice given to the Secretary within three months of its expiration, and on furnishing proof of sound health at the date of such notice.

For rates of insurance and other information, apply to the Agents in this town.

To be Let, FOR one or five years, and possession given on the first of April next, Minot Thayer's FARM, containing a Dwelling House, Barn, and other necessary Out Buildings, and about one hundred and twenty acres of Mowing, Tillage and Pasture Land, situated in the town of Braintree, on the Monksquon River and forty rods from the South Shore Railroad Depot. The farm is in a high state of cultivation, has a great variety of Fruit, cuts about fifty tons of Hay yearly, of the most superior quality, both English and Black Grass.

There are great advantages on the farm relating to the selling of Stones of any kind. There is a ready sale of the most inferior for ballast. The pasturing is very good, and there is no farm in the County more suitable for the milk business. The situation perhaps the most pleasant and delightful of any in the State. P. S. A few pairs of superior Malay and Yellow Leg DORSET FOWLS, may be had at said Farm. Please apply as above.

MINOTT THAYER. Braintree, Jan. 27.

To Let. THE STORE adjoining the Orthodox Meeting-house. The lower floor can be improved to advantage by a Barber, Milliner, etc. The upper part might be used as a Boot maker's shop, &c. Apply on the premises, or to FRANCIS WILLIAMS. SAMUEL V. HARDWICK. Quincy, Nov. 25.

Rough and Ready Hall. PURCHASERS OF READY MADE CLOTHING, one and all, are respectfully invited to call at Rough and Ready Hall, where they will find a FIRST RATE STOCK to select from, at prices that will suit the most ECONOMICAL. GEORGE SAVIL & Co. Quincy, Oct. 7.

Wool Frocking. 200 TO 300 YDS. of all wool Frocking, an extra article, just received and for sale as cheap as can possibly be purchased elsewhere. D. BAXTER & Co. Quincy, Sept. 23.

Ladies' & Gent's BOOT AND SHOE STORE. THE subscriber having fitted up his Store on Hancock Street, will keep constantly on hand a good assortment of LADIES' & CHILDREN'S Shoes, Gaiters, Polkas, etc. Which for Style, Durability and Cheapness, CANNOT BE SURPASSED BY ANY DEALER, In this Town

POETRY.

WOMAN'S EMPIRE.

Freed from the sceptre and the crown,
We scorn the despot's sway,
And spurn the autocrat, whose nod
A thousand self obey,
But when she speaks, with listening ears,
The grateful sounds we hear,
And spring like slaves to do her will,
And bend—but not in fear.

Her rule is boundless as the air,
And wide as Earth her realms—
Her strength is in the power of love,
And not in spear or helm;
Her surest chain, the spell of truth
All potent, yet unseen—
Her throne—the mighty mind of men,
That owns in her its Queen.

A spirit—yet on Earth, unstained,
A mortal—yet divine,
With smiles of holiest light to cheer
Each pilgrim at her shrine,
Not hers to gather glittering gold
Or gems of mystic art,
But simple offerings from the soul,
And tributes from the heart.

Ambition's hope and Fancy's dream,
To her as suppliants come,
The high born promptings from within,
To her—the spirit's home.
Her gentle hand shall mould them all,
And guide them on their way,
Her smile, the moon of passion's night—
The star of Reason's day.

ST. VALENTINE'S DAY.

The tuneful choir in amorous strains
Accost their feathered loves;
While each fond mate, with equal pains,
The tender suit approves.

With cheerful hop from spray to spray,
They sport along the meads;
In social bliss together stray,
Where love or fancy leads.

Through spring's gay scenes each happy pair
Their fluttering joys pursue;
Its various charms and produce share,
Forever kind and true.

Their sprightly notes from every shade
Their mutual loves proclaim;
Till winter's chilling blasts invade,
And damp the enlivening flame.

Then all the joyous scenes decline,
Nor woods nor meads delight;
The drooping pine in secret pine,
And mourn th' unwelcome sight.

Go, blissful wanderer! timely wise,
Th' instructive moral tell;
Nor thou their meaning lays despise,
My charming Anabelle!

HOPE.

The brightest gem the crown of life can show,
Casting a radiance on our path below,
Where clouds are gathering, and the low'ring storm
Seems almost bursting o'er the shrinking form,
The Sun of Hope o'er the horizon gleams,
Sheds o'er the fainting spirit healing beams.

Hope on—hope ever! life hath many flowers,
Twining around us e'en in gloomy hours;
The cloudiest day will have bright gleams of light,
And stars will twinkle through the darkest night.

Retrace the past, there may be sorrow tears,
Yet joy—heart soothing joy—also appears;
If rightly read, each trial sacrifice
Would seem as mercies—angels in disguise.

Hope on—hope ever! what if hope deceive,
Are we not happier when we thus believe!
Look to the brightest side through misery's veil,
Anchor thy hope in Heaven, they cannot fail.

ANECDOTES.

An elderly lady with two huge bundles in her hands came into the Springfield depot, recently, and planted herself in a chair directly before the delivery box of the ticket office of the Connecticut River Railroad. After sitting composedly a short time she accosted a gentleman standing by, and inquired, with evident concern—

"Can you tell me, Mister, if I'm near the engine, where I shall get blowed up?"

"O no, madam," replied the latter, "you are safe there?"

"Well, then," rejoined she, after a short pause, "when shall we get to Northampton?"

"On being informed that she must get into the cars to go to Northampton, she exclaimed with astonishment—

"Du tell if this 'ere thing,' (meaning the depot,) don't all go!"

A gentleman, travelling on a journey, having a light guinea which he could not pass, gave it to his Irish servant, and desired him to pass it upon the road. At night he asked him if he had passed the guinea?

"Yes, sir," replied Teague, "but I was forced to be very shy; the people refused it at breakfast and at dinner, so at a turnpike, where I had fourpence to pay, I whipped it in between two half pence, and the man put it into his pocket and never saw it."

A witness spoke several times during his testimony of occurrences during his birth, when a surly judge interrupted him—

"Do you mean to say that you can relate occurrences at the time of your birth, from your own recollection?"

The laugh, which began against the witness, turned upon the Judge, as the former replied—

"Why, sir, I cannot say that I remember every particular, but I can assure you that 'I was there.'"

"I have learned this profound truth," says Alderman Johnson, "from eating turtle; that it shows a most depraved taste to mock anything for its greenness."

Encourage your Own.

To the People of Quincy—
THE following is a well known motto, and strictly true:
"That County or Town that gives the most liberal encouragement to its own manufactures of every kind is well known to thrive, and increase in wealth and population."
There are a few interesting facts, of which we wish to remind you, and which we are inclined to think have slipped from the memory of some, and which it will be for your advantage as well as ours to remember.

1st. That at the QUINCY BOOKSTORE you will find all the

SCHOOL BOOKS

in use in this and the neighboring towns.

2d. That at the same place you will find every kind of

Blank Account Book,

RECORD or MEMORANDUM BOOK.

3d. That there you will find a great assortment of

Miscellaneous, Juvenile and Toy Books.

4th. That there you will find all kinds of

STATIONERY.

5th. That there you will find an innumerable variety of

FANCY GOODS.

6th. That all the above will be sold at the very

Lowest Market Prices.

7th. That we are entirely disinterested when we say that you will be much better satisfied with yourselves and your bargains if you trade at home, in preference to "out of town."

8th. That there you will find a GOOD LIBRARY where you can procure reading on reasonable terms.

9th. That the Proprietors are agents for all the popular MAGAZINES, receiving the subscriptions themselves and furnishing the numbers on their own responsibility, free of any expense. Many have forgotten this of late, preferring to subscribe of some travelling agent, to one in their own town.

10th. That they RE-BIND old Books, Pamphlets, Periodicals, Music, etc., as cheap as they can afford to and as quick as anybody.

These things we wish to call to your memory, because while we have been moving on in a quiet kind of a way, you seem partly to have forgotten the old place, thinking perhaps that we did not keep up with the times in the variety of our goods and also in prices. Our rule, like that of many others, is, "quick sales and small profits," therefore call in and we will supply you most satisfactorily.

MISCELLANY.

CASE OF DAVID DUBOIS.

"Reges must hang that juryman may dine."
The public have doubtless heard of the fate of poor David Dubois, whose case was decided by a hungry jury. But it may not be uninteresting to state a few of the particular circumstances attending that decision.

It was a case of life and death—but one doubtful and difficult to decide. The evidence was entirely circumstantial, and in many respects contradictory. The prisoner unfortunately bore a very bad character, and many people did not hesitate to say, that, if he did not commit the murder, he was none too good to do it. But what made his conduct still more unfortunate, was the condition of the stomachs of the jury. They had been kept out all night and it was near the hour of dining.

Consider, then, the perilous condition of the prisoner, his life depending upon such untoward circumstances—presumptive evidence, a doubtful character, a hungry jury. He might have got over the two first, but woe to him whose life depends on the last. A comfortably filled stomach is one of the best guarantees for acts of justice, kindness and charity. Trust a hungry jury with one's life! never! Hunger renders a man savage, and he who has a stomach to let, seldom has any bowels of compassion.

In the case of David Dubois, seven of the jury were for hanging, and five for acquittal. Thus they had been for some time, without any prospects of ever thinking alike. Both sides were conscientious, both felt bound in honesty by their oath to adhere to what they conceived to be the true state of the case. Said those in favor of hanging,

"The men are very evidently guilty, and we could neither answer to God nor our country, should we consent to his acquittal."

While those on the other side said: "We have serious doubts of his guilt; the evidence is circumstantial, and exceedingly contradictory, and we could not answer to God nor our consciences to take the poor fellow's life."

"Gentlemen," said the constable, for the fifteenth time, "have you agreed upon your verdict?"

"No," said the foreman, "and what is worse we are not likely to agree; therefore we beg you once more to conduct us into court."

"There is no use of it," said the tall staff, "the judge will send you back."

"At all events," said one of the jury, "let us have something to eat, and not keep us shut up here starving."

"The more you starve, the sooner you will be likely to agree," returned the constable.

"Besides, you know it is strictly against the law to allow you anything to eat till your verdict is made up."

The jury again took up the subject and endeavored with all their might to agree; but with no better result than before. The case was a stubborn one, and would not yield to the unanimous desire for agreement.

The jury was at length permitted to return into court, whereupon, stating to the judge that it was utterly impossible for them to make up a verdict, his honor gave them a severe reprimand for their inability to think alike, and peremptorily sent them out again, declaring, with an awful shake of his wig, that they should neither eat nor drink until the case of the prisoner was decided.

"Alas!" said one, "we must agree upon a verdict or agree to starve."

"The latter we can never agree to," said another, "self-preservation is the first law of nature. What time of day is it, neighbor?"

"It wants half an hour of dinner time."

"Only half an hour? We have but little time to spare. We must agree before dinner time by some means or other. It's now twenty four hours since we have eaten a morsel, and to miss another meal would be absolute suicide."

"Heigho! that's a fact," said another, "suicide is an unpardonable sin. If a man commits murder he may have time to repent, but to commit suicide, he must go to purgatory at once, without the benefit of the clergy."

Those who are in favor of hanging are usually more fixed in their opinions than those on the other side—thus exactly reversing the only charitable maxim of criminal jurisprudence, viz: that it is better twenty guilty persons should escape than one innocent one should suffer. This was most unfortunately true in the case of poor David Dubois.

"It would be a thousand pities," said one of the friends, "to hang an innocent man."

"That is very true," replied one of the opposite side, "but then you know it is better that twenty innocent persons should be hung than one guilty one escape; so the maxim says."

"Why, as to the maxim," said Jonathan Standabout, "there may be something in that. But still, I have hitherto been in favor of the acquittal of poor David, because I had my doubts about his being guilty. However, all manner of doubts must yield to circumstances. So far as I can see, the evidence is by no means clear as to the fellow's guilt. But then, on the other hand, who is he, that twelve respectable men should starve for his life? A fellow, at least of doubtful reputation; a man who, if he is not guilty of this, or some other murder, may very well be spared from the world."

"There is much truth in what you say," said Ichabod Avery; "but then, consider, how shall we answer to our God and our consciences, for our verdict?"

"True," said Joseph Judgment, "there's the rub. I acknowledge the prisoner to be of little or no value to the community, and as likely to be guilty of murder as the best of us. But then we are bound to decide according to evidence."

"And what," said Obadiah Lankey, "is to become of our stomachs in the mean time? I am as conscientious as any other man, I don't care who he is, and I think I've proved it well, too, in standing out as long as I have. But all things must yield to circumstances, as neighbor Standabout says, and self-preservation is the first law of nature, as another gentleman observed; wherefore, for one, I'm for having some dinner."

"And I too," said Christopher Comeabout, "I pity the poor wretch of a prisoner, and you all know I have fought hard for this acquittal. But to go the length of starving on his account, I couldn't think of it."

"But have you no mercy, no bowels of compassion?" said Ichabod Avery.

"Bowels of compassion?" exclaimed Obadiah Lankey, pressing his hands upon the gastric region—there isn't a morsel of anything in this stomach. The idea is preposterous."

"You are exactly of my mind," said Jonathan Standabout. "Charity begins at home, and it is our bounden duty to take care of ourselves, whatever may become of other people. For my part, the evidence of David's guilt begins to look much clearer than it did a short time ago. At any rate, considering all things, I think we can't do better than hang him."

"I can't agree with you there," said Joseph Judgment. "I must still adhere to the poor fellow, tho' I am starving. I can't get over my oath my conscience and all that."

"Your conscience," exclaimed Comeabout, "What sort of a conscience is that which prefers the life of a poor wretch of doubtful reputation to the comforts of a good dinner, which no one among us is disposed to doubt? As to the prisoner, I'd stick to him till all was blue, if I wasn't so infernal hungry. But I am not bound to commit murder on my stomach; wherefore gentlemen, much as I regret the taking an innocent man's life, I must, in this case, agree to a verdict of guilty."

"Well, well," said Joseph Judgment, looking at his watch, "it's a hard case—a monstrous hard case. It wants but a quarter of an hour to dinner time—those fine canvass backs. The prisoner, as far as I can understand the evidence, is as likely to be innocent as guilty; I don't know what to think, indeed. One thing is certain, however—I must have some dinner—I can't think of starving, my conscience won't allow me. Gentlemen, I'll agree to anything that's reasonable."

"I'm very glad, sir," said one of the original seven who were in favor of hanging, "I'm glad you have finally concluded to listen to reason. We are all agreed now except one, and I think he'll come over in time to dine. What say you, friend Avery, shall we hang the prisoner and go to dinner or no?"

"Why, indeed, gentlemen, I don't know what to say—I see no satisfactory proof of the man's being guilty. It's a hard case, a confounded hard case. Our dinner must nearly be ready; and something must be determined on soon. Really, gentlemen, I think you had better agree to acquit him."

"Oh, we can't do that, positively," said another of the original seven. "A majority of us have been for hanging from the first; and now all the others have come over except you—eleven against one."

"It wants but ten minutes of the dinner hour," said Obadiah Lankey.

"Only ten minutes?" exclaimed Ichabod.

"I've done, gentlemen, I've done. O my stomach! Let the man be hung."

"We are all agreed, then," said the foreman. And a verdict of GUILTY was returned in time for dinner.

BASENESS OF SLANDER.

"Speak evil of no man."—TITUS, iii: 2.

This precept is a part of our religion, and the minister of the gospel is commanded to enjoin it on his flock. It is written on the golden pages which embody our faith in the Deity, and should be engraven on the hearts of His worshippers. But how few of the countless hosts who burn incense on His altars are free from the habitual violation of this important command! Alas, how very few!

If slander was an evil when the great apostle of the Gentiles travelled on his world-wide mission, it can scarcely be less so now; for we behold its gaunt form crouched wherever man holds intercourse with man. Nor are there any so great and good as not to feel the venom of its fangs; nor even so humble as to escape the poison of its pestilent breath. Even the laureled head which received our nation's warmest benedictions, was not free from its assaults, but he felt too well its rankling poison. But his vile calumniators heaped on their own heads a curse more bitter and more lasting than their own envenomed arrows, for they received, and shall ever receive, a nation's odium.

"From the loud roar of foaming calumny To the small whisper of the paltry feud,"

But it is not around the bright names, that this demon foe to human happiness has woven its darkest web, though there its darkness may appear most visible. It is on the head of him who walks a more humble path, that its attacks are most fatal; and by the cottage hearthstone that it works the greatest ruin, and the keenest misery.

The opulent and the great are surrounded by an army of sycophants, ever ready to parry blows aimed at them, and to avenge their wrongs; but when the humble poor, and the stranger is wronged, justice too often slumbers, and a single falsehood may deprive him of employment, and a hungry family of their daily food. And when suspicion is once excited, a life of rectitude may not at all, or efface the fancied stain it may have attached to his name.

The community does not seem to be aware of the extent of this evil, or conscious of the enormity of the crime; for while the unfortunate man who steals a loaf of bread to keep himself and family from starving, incurs the risk of being sent to the penitentiary; another "with burning lips and a wicked heart," by vague insinuations, and artful expressions, may excite suspicion in the minds of friends, and obtrude his baneful influence between father and son, mother and daughter, brother and sister, lacerating the tenderest affections of the human heart, and setting at variance those who else had lived in harmony and love. And while his victims are writhing beneath the cruel wounds, which may bleed and ache as long as life itself shall last, he may live on apparently with as much calmness and serenity as before, nay, is perhaps retained in the bosom of the church, and held aloft as a beacon light for other men to walk by. Yet justice declares the offence of the former to be light, but engraves falsehood and felony on the brow of the latter, for he has inflicted an agonising pang, as lasting as time, and is guilty of a crime, as deep as the pit, and as dark as hell's black drapery.

WHAT A SMASH!

A young fellow, residing in one of the tobacco growing counties of Virginia, recently made his first trip to the capital of the "Old Dominion" for the purpose of selling his crop, seeing the sights, and rubbing off the rust which his backwoods "fetching-up" had thrown upon his manners. He reached Richmond about the middle of the forenoon, and was fortunate in selling his crop at an advantageous rate and almost immediately. Meeting with an old school mate—one who had lived in the city long enough to know its ways—he was advised to take his lodgings at the crack house of the place, and thither he at once went with bag and baggage. Just before dinner, his city friend called upon him, and found him comfortably located in a room just at the head of the first stairs. It was close upon dinner time.

"Suppose we take something to start an appetite," said the chap who had just come down.

"Agreed," rejoined the city friend, "a glass of wine and butters for me."

"Let's go down to the bar and get it—dinner's almost ready," continued the tobacco grower.

"We might as well have it up here," was the rejoinder.

"Good luck—but how are we to call them?"

"Ring that bell there."

"What bell?"

"Pull that rope there."

The young fellow laid hold of the rope and gave it a jerk, and just at that moment the gong sounded for dinner. Never had he heard such a sound before and the rumbling crash came upon his ear with a report that stunned him. He staggered back from the rope, raised both hands with horror, and exclaimed:

"Great Jerusalem, what a smash! I've broken every piece of crock'ry in the house!—There ain't a whole piece left! You must stick by me old fellow, addressing his friend—'don't leave me in this scrape, for my whole crop won't half pay the breakage.'"

"What did you tell me to touch that cursed rope for?"

But before his friend, who was bursting with laughter, could answer, a servant entered the room with

"Did you ring that bell, sir?"

"Bell? no, d—n your bell—I never touched a bell in my life. What bell? I never saw your bell."

"Somebody rang the bell in this room that's certain," continued the servant.

"No, they didn't. There's nobody here that ever saw a bell." And then turning to his friend, he exclaimed, aside, "Let us lie him out of it—I shan't have a cent left to go home if I pay the entire damages. What do they set such rascally traps as that for, to take in folks from the country?"

After a violent fit of laughter, the friend explained that it was only the gong sounding for dinner—a simple summons to "walk down to supper," got up on the Chinese plan. They made their way to the dining room, but it was some time before the young tobacco-grower could get over the stunning and awful effects of that fatal gong.

"It was a god-send," he said, "that the crash did not turn his hair gray on the spot."

LOUNGERS.

One fine morning when Benjamin Franklin was busy preparing his newspaper for the press, a loaunter stepped into the store, and spent an hour or more looking over the books, &c., and finally taking one in his hand, asked the shop boy the price.

"One dollar," was the answer.

"One dollar," said the loaunter, "can't you take less than that?"

"No, indeed one dollar is the price."

Another hour had nearly passed, when the loaunter asked,

"Is Mr. Franklin at home?"

"Yes, he is in the printing office."

"I want to see him," said the loaunter.

The shop boy immediately informed Mr. Franklin that a gentleman was in the store waiting to see him. Franklin was soon behind the counter, when the loaunter, with book in hand addressed him thus:

"Mr. Franklin, what is the lowest you can take for this book?"

"One dollar and a quarter," was the ready answer.

"One dollar and a quarter," why your young man asked only a dollar."

"True," said Franklin—"and I could have better afforded to have taken a dollar than, than to have been taken out of the office."

The loaunter seemed surprised, and wishing to end the parley of his own making, said,

"Come, Mr. Franklin, tell me what is the lowest you can take for it."

"One dollar and a half."

"A dollar and a half!—why, you offered it yourself for a dollar and a quarter."

"Yes," said Franklin—"and I had better have taken that price then, than a dollar and a half now."

The loaunter paid down the price and went about his business—if he had any—and Franklin returned into the printing office.

PEOPLE OF MODERATE FORTUNE.

If you are about to furnish a house, do not spend all your money, be it much or little. Do not let the beauty of this thing, and the cheapness of that, tempt you to buy unnecessary articles. Dr. Franklin's maxim was a wise one—

"Nothing is cheap which you do not want."

Buy merely what is absolutely necessary, and let experience of your wants and your means dictate what shall be afterward obtained. If you spend all at first, you will find you have bought many things you do not want and omitted many you do want. Begin cautiously. As riches increase, increase in hospitality and splendor; but it is always painful and inconvenient to decrease.

After all, these things are viewed in their proper light by the judicious and respectable. Neatness, tastefulness, and good sense, may be shown in the management of a small household and the arrangement of a little furniture, as well as upon a large scale. The consideration gained by living beyond one's income is not actually worth the trouble it costs. The glare there is about such false, wicked parade is deceptive; it does not, in fact, procure valuable friends or extensive influence. More than that, it is wrong, morally wrong, so far as the individual is concerned; and injurious beyond calculation to the interests of our country. To what are the increasing beggary and discouraged exertions of the present day owing? A multitude of causes no doubt tend to increase the evils, but the root of the whole matter is the extravagance of all classes of people!

We never shall be prosperous till we have sufficient moral courage to make pride and vanity yield to the dictates of honesty and prudence. We never shall be free from embarrassment till we cease to be ashamed of industry and economy! Let woman aid in the reformation. Let their husbands and fathers see them happy with out finery; and if their friends have, as often the case, a foolish pride in seeing them decorated, let them silently and gradually check this feeling, by showing that they have better means of commanding respect. Let the exercise of ingenuity, economy, and neatness, prove that good taste and gentility are attainable without great expense. Mrs. L. M. Child.

HONESTY.

What is honesty? "To pay one's debts." Exactly so. No definition can be nearer correctness. Always minding, however, that there are other ledgers than the trader's, that a man's debts are not to be calculated in pounds, shillings and pence. It is not honest for a man to deteriorate his own nature, to blight his own heart, to enfeeble his mind, or even to neglect his physical culture. It is not honest in a woman to swear to love a man when she only loves his house and equipage; nor any honest for a man to purchase a woman as he would buy a beast; for every thing has its certain value; and to pay that which is fairly due, is the prerogative of honesty. It is not honest to preach one thing and practice another. It is not honest to impoverish one man to enrich another. For honesty is the utmost respect for the rights of all. It is not honest to say one thing and mean another. Alas! for our daily custom!—Do we not continually bribe by the hope of some paltry gain; or, fearful of offence giving, put on a pleasant smirk, and grasp with friendly zeal the hand we despise? Do we not lie daily for the sake of half pence, and so pick pockets; and look lies for the sake of smiles and empty compliments? This is not honesty. Do not some of us go about with cold, sneering lips, as if we were of custom's frost-work, when our hearts are burning within us; making conventional grimaces, repeating formal catechisms, when our inmost thoughts are struggling for utterance? But we should displease this friend, give advantage to some foe, be laughed at by some fool, be deemed rude by the world, and so we sell our hearts for the reward of worldliness, and live, not like true men in God's image, but rather like automata manufactured by custom's parent.

INDIAN SNAP JACKS.

A quart of yellow Indian meal.
Half a pint or more of boiling water.
Half a pint of wheat flour.

Three large tablespoonfuls of strong fresh yeast.

A heaping salt-spoon of salt.

A level teaspoonful of pearlash, soda, or saleratus, dissolved in warm water.

Lard for trying.

Sift the Indian meal into a pan, and add the salt. Then pour on the boiling water, and stir it well. When it has cooled a little, and becomes only lukewarm, stir in the wheat flour, and add the yeast. Stir it long and hard.

Cover the pan, and set it near the fire. When the mixture has risen quite light, and is covered with bubbles, add the dissolved pearlash to puff it more. Have ready a hot frying pan over the fire; grease it with a little lard, and put in a portion of the mixture, sufficient for one large cake nearly the size of the pan, or two small ones. Spread the mixture thin, and fry it brown. Send the cakes hot to table, and eat them with butter or molasses.

This is one of the plainest sorts of Indian cake but if properly made, and baked, will be found very good.

Liberty unseasonably obtained, is apt to be intemperately used.

Industrious wisdom often prevents what lazy folly thinks inevitable.

LATE FROM CALIFORNIA. Accounts to Dec. 10th, 1848, have been received from the gold country. The extent of the region as far as explored is three hundred miles in width, one thousand miles in length. Each digger averages three ounces a day.

The United States ship Lexington had not sailed but would in a short time. She has half a million on board for New York.

The value of the gold already gathered is estimated at three million dollars, and it is believed that it would take a hundred thousand diggers ten years to exhaust the gold.

Provisions are abundant at San Francisco and at the diggings. Flour has poured in in great quantities from Chili and Oregon.

Cinnabar, or the ore from which quicksilver is extracted, has been discovered in great abundance. There is a rich mine in the mountains, not more than three miles from San Francisco.

The Sacramento river is navigable for vessels drawing eight feet, from the ocean to Sutter's Fort, a distance of one hundred and fifty miles from San Francisco, and for one hundred miles further for vessels drawing less.

The cost of living at San Francisco had been quite as much exaggerated as some of the stories relating to the gold mines. Good board can be obtained at ten dollars a week. The population of the place was about one thousand. The fever and ague prevail, but there is generally not much sickness. About a dozen people had died.

The affairs of California were generally worse as regards order and government. Robberies and murders were of daily occurrence. Within six days over twenty murders had been perpetrated.

The people were preparing to organize a provisional government. Within five days three men had been hung by Lynch law.

CONGRESSIONAL. The fortification bill has passed, and appropriates six hundred and eleven thousand dollars for this important branch of public defence. The items for the New England States are as follows:—

Defensive works and barracks, narrows,	20,000
Penobscot river,	5,000
Fort Scammel, Portland harbor,	10,000
Fortifications, Governor's Island, Boston harbor,	10,000
Fort Warren, Boston harbor,	30,000
Fort Independence, "	10,000
Fort Adams, Newport harbor, (R. I.) and quarters and barracks thereat,	40,000
Fort Turnbull, New London, Conn.,	10,000

On Wednesday, the 14th inst., both branches met in the Hall of the House of Representatives, when the tellers counted the votes of the States for President and declared:—

Zachary Taylor of Louisiana,	163
Lewis Cass of Michigan,	127

The votes for the candidates for the Vice Presidency corresponded with the votes for President.

Taylor and Fillmore were declared elected President and Vice President, and a joint committee was appointed to wait upon them and inform them of their election.

The bill for the establishment of a new Cabinet Department, to be called the Department of the Interior, has passed to be engrossed by the House. This bill, as explained, takes from the State Department the Patent Office and Census; from the Treasury Department the Land Office and Coast Survey; from the War Department the Indian Bureau and Pension Office; from the Navy Department the Marine Pension Desk; from the Executive Department the Public Buildings, etc. The Secretary of the Interior to have a salary of six thousand dollars per annum, with a chief clerk at two thousand dollars, and two other additional Officers.

Robberies, amounting to millions of dollars, are being committed in California, upon the people and Government of the United States, while Congress, with idiotic stupidity, refrains from sanctioning the extension of government and laws over the blood-bought treasures of the country. The mines are plundered, and the revenue defrauded of impost duties, by citizens or subjects of other nations. Will the people long continue to be insulted by a majority of their Representatives?

The Library of Congress now comprises forty five thousand volumes, arranged in chapters, in which all branches of human learning are well represented. During the session of Congress it is open every week day from nine o'clock until the two Houses adjourn for the day, and when Congress is not in session three days in the week.

GENERAL COURT. In the Senate, the bill concerning Dogs, has been amended by the addition of new sections, and in some other particulars, the most important of which provides that no license shall be granted to a minor, when the bill was ordered to be engrossed.

The bill to incorporate the town of South Scituate, has passed to be enacted.

In the House, John P. Norton petitioned for leave to import one or two slaves to cultivate his farm, and a debate sprang up on motion to refer this petition to the Judiciary Committee. It was contended that it was an insult to the House, and that the petitioner should have leave to withdraw. The motion to commit was advocated by Mr. Marsh of Quincy, and others, and it prevailed.

The resolve appropriating one hundred thousand dollars for a second Insane Hospital, was read a third time, and then Mr. Marsh, of Quincy, moved to amend by providing for the location of the Hospital either in Plymouth or Bristol county, which was rejected.

TAYLOR FESTIVAL. The coming 23d of February is near upon us. The festival at Faneuil Hall, Boston, on that day, promises to be one of unusual interest—worthy of the place and of the interesting events connected with that day. Patriotic hearts will make the Old Cradle of Liberty resound with hilarity and warm congratulations. Many eminent orators will address the multitude there assembled, and among them, E. C. Cabell of Florida, David Paul Brown of Philadelphia, in addition to the number already announced. Secure your tickets, therefore, in season, as there remains but a few on hand. See the notice of the Rough and Ready Association in another column.

EXPENSES OF THE COUNTY. It has seemed rather singular, to us, that the annual statement of the receipts and expenditures of Norfolk County have not been published in a newspaper printed in this section. The Commissioners cannot be ignorant of the fact that one has now been printed for more than twelve years, in this part of the county; and the people in this vicinity are largely and equally interested in its pecuniary affairs, and would doubtless be glad to see a statement. We presume, however, that it was unintentionally overlooked by the Board, and that when apprized of the complaint they will apply the remedy.

OYSTER CHOWDER. One of these excellent delicacies will be prepared at the Hancock House this evening. With the rich New York oysters and the epicurean taste of the caterer, a bowl of his oyster chowder will be a feast to be courted and admired.

THE PRIZE FIGHT. This disgraceful fight for ten thousand dollars, between James, alias Yankee Sullivan, an Irishman, and Thomas Hyer, a New Yorker, for which both parties have been training for months, and which excited much interest in the sporting circles, took place on the seventh instant, at four o'clock in the afternoon, at Beach Point, (Md.) about ten miles below Pool's Island, the spot originally selected, and from which the parties were driven by the police and two companies of military. Sullivan was whipped in sixteen rounds, lasting twenty-one minutes. Hyer got a black eye and was otherwise bruised; Sullivan's head is said to have looked "like a butcher's block." They will both be tried in Maryland for violating the laws.

TEMPERANCE CONVENTION. The Massachusetts Temperance Convention, which assembled in Boston, on Wednesday last, was organized by electing Hon. Asahel Huntington of Salem, as President, assisted by fifteen Vice Presidents, and several Secretaries. The assembly was large and the speakers numerous, and as they were limited to ten minutes in the delivery of their remarks almost every one had an opportunity to state his views.

HOLDEN'S DOLLAR MAGAZINE. We can always speak in praise of this magazine, as we monthly find its pages richly stored with articles of interest and value. Its contributors are writers of deserved merit, and its illustrations generally equal higher-priced periodicals.

ALL FOR LOVE. It was a young man, named Hoxie, residing in the west part of South Abington, who committed suicide, a few weeks ago, by cutting his throat with his pocket knife. The cause of the desperate act is supposed to be disappointment in a love affair.

FOUND DEAD. A sailor, by the name of Eleazer Ewer, was found dead on board the schooner Emma, lying at a wharf in New York city. It appears that the deceased had been on shore and returned about eleven o'clock in the night, and was not again seen alive. The deceased resided at Hingham, (Mass.) where he has left a wife and family to mourn his loss.

SENTENCED. George Miller of Waltham, was arraigned a few days since, to receive the opinion of the Supreme Court, on the exceptions taken by his counsel. The Court overruled all the objections and proceeded to sentence him to three days solitary confinement, and nine years' hard labor in the State Prison. Individuals by the forgeries of the convicted have been swindled to the amount of sixty thousand dollars.

Kentucky has sent last year, to the single market of Cincinnati, (Ohio) over one hundred and twenty thousand hogs, which realized to the owners nearly eight hundred thousand dollars.

Forty thousand packages of game were delivered in London on the Saturday before Christmas.

WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY IN THE OLD DOMINION.

We extract an article from the New Era, published at Portsmouth, Virginia, and edited by A. F. Cunningham, Esq., who speaks of himself, and here is the extract:—(Dec. 24, 1846)

We have been, for some days, suffering under severe inflammation of the lungs, produced by cold, and irritated by speaking in public, so that throughout Saturday night, Sunday, Monday, till Tuesday, the frequency of the spasms and violent pains that the suffering was intense, without the least appetite for food. The cough was dry and hard, causing the most acute pains in the head and back. We had fairly given up all hope of relief, when we thought of this Balsam, and we went round to our friend Heinrich, the agent, for a bottle. We took the first dose according to the directions, and almost instantly felt a glow of healthy warmth through the system—this was two o'clock—at five, we took another dose, at nine another, and we soon after detected a perceptible relief in the frequency of the spasms and violent pains that had before attended them. At three in the morning we took another dose, and the phlegm, though tough, yellow andropy, was ejected from the lungs with comparative ease. We feel grateful for the relief afforded, and recommend a trial of it by all who are suffering as we suffered. We have deemed it due to the medicine, and to humanity, to give this unsought testimony to the virtues of the Balsam, in our case.

COSTIVENESS

Is often brought on by want of exercise, close confinement to business, etc. BROWN'S SARSAPARILLA and TOMATO BITTERS will give a tone and activity to the stomach and bowels, increase the circulation, and operate as a mild cathartic, and are not liable to leave the patient (as many medicines do after taking) more costive than he was before their use. By using them a short time, they will be satisfied of its virtues; the effect is almost immediately felt. It purifies and nourishes the whole debilitated system. ONE TRIAL will satisfy the most prejudiced mind.

This we know from experience of hundreds.

A sure cure for Dyspepsia and Costiveness.

HARRISON'S PERISTALTICS have had 12 years' trial by the Medical faculty and the public generally. This medicine is in Lozenges, pleasant to the taste, and may be given to children. The Peristaltics are gently laxative, and by their tonic qualities improve the digestive organs and invigorate the whole system. They cure Costiveness, Headache, Dizziness, Sleeplessness, Jaundice, Oppression after Eating, Liver Complaint, Diarrhoea, Piles, Dropsy, Debility, Fatigues, Weakness, Heartburn, Palpitation, Rheumatism, Pains in the Bones, Scrofula, Tic Douloureux, Worms, etc.

These Lozenges are excellent in all Nervous complaints and Dyspeptic symptoms, Female Suppression, and all irregularities in the young. This medicine contains no preparation of Mercury whatever, and no ingredient which may not safely be given to the most delicate female and under any circumstances.

This preparation is also put up in bottles for seafaring persons, who should always have a supply. An occasional use of the Peristaltics prevents Fevers, Bilious complaints, and chronic or East India Diarrhoea. They are admirably adapted to the complaints incident to the coast of Africa, Sumatra, West Indies and South America.

These Lozenges are recommended by some of the best Physicians in Boston, who use them in their families and general practice. All afflicted with oppression after eating, or rising of food will find great relief. They are the best medicine for children known.

Worms! Worms!!

PINK ROOT SYRUP

ARE safely, speedily and most effectually expelled from the system by the use of

WHITWELLS PINK ROOT SYRUP.

Spigelia, or Indian Pink,

has been in use for hundreds of years among the Indian tribes of North America, as a certain remedy

for Worms.

Almost every family in N. E., is acquainted with its use, "has been that it was necessary to pour half a teaspoon of the Syrup into the child's mouth, and expell the worms; but that objection exists no longer.

In the PINK ROOT SYRUP, you have the strongest possible preparation of the Pink root, united with Cathartics and Tonics, made into a pleasant and healthful Syrup, which children will take without any trouble. Indeed, they like it much, and will never refuse to take it. The dose of this agreeable medicine for an infant is only

Half a Teaspoon Full.

Full and ample directions accompany its use. The public are respectfully requested to give it a trial, and they will never use any other remedy.

POETRY.

[From the Christian Register.]

"Slight is the tale, and simple, that my soul
Hath woven from some memories deeply stored,
Which should not voiceless die."

"Round the dawn of earth
Were pleasing visions hung,
As first before my opening eyes
Came forms I early learned to prize;
Parents, whose love is quick and strong,
As if unknown were thought of wrong;
And brothers, who through earthly ill
Are yet to me as brothers still;
Then sisters four, with gentle sway
Along the stream that forth has flung
The mysteries of his birth."

As the swift shadows curled
Before the upward sun,
The landscape, widening to my view,
Showed vales with rivers running through;
Mountains, whose peaks thought hid from sight
To youthful fancy, shone with white,
And all about, was fresh and warm.
Unheeded was the gathering storm
Until it burst, and then I saw
But only three of sisters four;
Our circle was bereft, and one
Had joined the better world.

Now, though long years have passed,
And oceans rolled between
My manlier haunts and early home,
Yet, whoso'er I chance to roam,
Sleeping beneath the creaking mast,
Or where the Alps their shadows cast,
Waking or sleeping, in my dreams
Of sisterhood, there always seems
A fourth, more indistinct perhaps,
With lighter step, and dress that wraps
A form, too gentle and serene
To be with mortals classed.

Thus, in the evening hour,
When death's cool dews descend,
Reflected by the western sky,
Shall time's loved objects meet the eye,
To cheer or chill, as they shall blend
Best with life's noblest, truest end.
The high resolve, lasting and pure,
The ready action, firm and sure,
Fruits of the spirit's earnest strife,
Attend it in its after life.
Parted from earth, they know no end,
But gain a mightier power.

FRIENDS.

What care I for wind or weather?
What care I for storm or strife?
So that friends around me gather—
Calmly flows the tide of life.
If but one lov'd form be near me—
One fond heart to cheer my own,
Souls like mine are never dreary,
Never weary or alone.

Earth, they say, is naught but sadness,
Happy hours, I know, are few,
What, without our friends is gladness?
Friends should share our sorrows too.
If our joys they make the dearer,
Then our ills, their truth should prove,
Sorrow's gloom should be the clearer
By the sunshine of their love.

Glorious, power, and so-called pleasure—
Fame and Honor, all are vain—
He who once has grasped the treasure
Scarce would seek for it again.
Though they perish, still are breathing
Round us, Friendship, Love, and Truth,
Age's brow with garland's wreathing,
Blooming as the flowers of youth.

Then while friends are round us ever,
And the grasp of grasp is met—
Warm as ours, the soul's endeavor
Its reward shall gather yet.
And while here our hearts are clinging,
Be the world to us unknown,
Trusting more and closer clinging
To the world that's all our own.

ANECDOTES.

Two interesting negro lads were standing in the streets of Charleston, gazing into the market.
"Jim," said one, "spose you had your choice now of all the good things in that market—what you take?"
"What I take! why, I'd take all de possum fat and all de hominy—of course I would—now what you take, hey?"
"Hum! how you 'spect me to choose, when, you's took every ting as nice?"

"Mrs. Sprigs, will you be helped to a small piece of the turkey?" "Yes, my dear Mr. Wilkins, I will."
"What part would you prefer, my dear Mrs. Sprigs?" "I will have a couple of the wings—a couple of the legs—some of the breast—the side bone—some filling, and a few dumplings, as I feel very unwell to-day!" Wilkins faints!

A domestic, newly engaged, presented to his master, one morning, a pair of boots, the leg of one of which was much longer than the other. "How comes it, you rascal, that these boots are not of the same length?" "I really don't know, sir—but what bothers me the most is, that the pair down stairs are in the same fix."

A rogue asked charity, on pretence of being dumb. A lady having asked him with equal simplicity and humanity, how long he had been dumb, he was thrown off his guard and answered, "From birth, madam." "Poor fellow," said the lady, and gave him a dollar.

"Have you seen the opera of Lucresse Borgia?" "No, I haven't yet." "Well, it's real beautiful. All the heroes has mustaches." "Bless me! I must go, it's only to see the mustaches. I do doat on fire-works and mustaches!"

"Why are we led to infer that David and Joshua were interperate men?" "Because David, when he went out to meet Goliath on the 'field of honor,' took a sling; and Joshua, previous to his attack on the walls of Jericho, 'took a horn,' and gave 'a regular blow out!'"

Encourage your Own.

To the People of Quincy—
THE following is a well known motto, and strictly true:
"That County or Town that gives the most liberal encouragement to its own manufactures of every kind is well known to thrive, and increase in wealth and population."

There are a few interesting facts, of which we wish to remind you, and which we are inclined to think have slipped from the memory of some, and which it will be for your advantage as well as ours to remember.
1st. That at the QUINCY BOOKSTORE you will find all the

SCHOOL BOOKS

in use in this and the neighboring towns.
2d. That at the same place you will find every kind of

Blank Account Book,

RECORD or MEMORANDUM BOOK.

3d. That there you will find a great assortment of

Miscellaneous, Juvenile and Toy Books.

4th. That there you will find all kinds of

STATIONERY.

5th. That there you will find an innumerable variety of

FANCY GOODS.

6th. That all the above will be sold at the very

Lowest Market Prices.

7th. That we are entirely disinterested when we say that you will be much better satisfied with your selves and your bargains if you trade at home, in preference to "out of town."
8th. That there you will find a GOOD LIBRARY where you can procure reading on reasonable terms.
9th. That the Proprietors are agents for all the popular MAGAZINES, receiving the subscriptions themselves and furnishing the numbers on their own responsibility, free of any expense. Many have forgotten this of late, preferring to subscribe of some travelling agent, to one in their own town.
10th. That they RE-BIND old Books, Pamphlets, Periodicals, Music, etc., as cheap as they can afford to and as quick as anybody.

These things we wish to call to your memory, because while we have been moving on in a quiet kind of way, you seem partly to have forgotten the old place, thinking perhaps that we did not keep up with the times in the variety of our goods and also in prices. Our rule, like that of many others, is, "quick sales and small profits," therefore call in and we will supply you most satisfactorily.

NORFOLK SS. At a meeting of the County Commissioners, begun and held at Dedham, within and for said County of Norfolk, on the eighth day of January, A. D. 1849, by adjournment of the December meeting, the Petition above referred to, was read, Ordered that the County Commissioners meet at the house of John J. May, in Dorchester, on said County, on WEDNESDAY, the fourth day of April next, at ten of the clock A. M., and thence proceed to view the route described in said petition and hear and act thereon.

And that an attested copy of said petition with this order thereon be served upon the Clerk of the Town of Dorchester, thirty days at least before the time appointed for said view, and also that a like copy be published three weeks successively in the Quincy Patriot, a newspaper printed in Quincy, the last publication to be fourteen days at least before said view, and that like copies be posted up in two or more public places, in said town of Dorchester, fourteen days at least before said view, that all persons and corporations interested for or against said petition may then and there appear and be heard if they see fit.

Attest, EZRA W. SAMPSON, Clerk.

A true Copy of the original Petition on file and order thereon.

NORFOLK SS.—At a meeting of the County Commissioners at Dedham, December term, A. D. 1848:

ON the Petition of John M. Newhall and others, inhabitants of Dorchester, in said County, presented at the June term of said Commissioners, A. D. 1848, representing that they had petitioned the Selectmen of the town of Dorchester within one year for the construction of a road from the Neponset Turnpike to Washington Street, in said Dorchester, and that they had been denied said petition, and therefore praying said Commissioners to lay out a part or the whole of said road, commencing on Neponset Turnpike opposite Teanean Road, and terminating in Washington Street, in said Dorchester, near the dwelling house belonging to the heirs of Arnold W. Wadsworth, deceased; it was Ordered, that the County Commissioners meet at the Neponset Hotel, in Dorchester, in said County, on Monday, the seventh day of August, then next, at nine of the clock A. M. and thence proceed to view the route described in said petition and hear and act thereon. And that an attested copy of said petition with this order thereon be served upon the Clerk of the town of Dorchester, thirty days at least before the time appointed for said view, and also that a like copy be published three weeks successively in the Quincy Patriot, a newspaper published in Quincy, the last publication to be fourteen days at least before said view; and that like copies be posted up in two or more public places in said town of Dorchester, fourteen days at least before said view, that all persons and corporations interested for or against said petition might then and there appear and be heard if they should see fit.

This notice was served agreeably to said order as by the Officer's return upon file appears, and the Commissioners afterwards met at the time and place by them designated, at which time and place, the Petitioners, a part of the Land owners, and the Selectmen of Dorchester appeared; they then viewed the proposed road, heard each and all said parties concerning the matter of said petition, do adjudge that common convenience and necessity does require that said road be laid out and widened as prayed for.

It is therefore ordered that the said Commissioners meet at the Neponset Hotel, in Dorchester, on TUESDAY, the third day of April next, at 10 o'clock A. M., and thence proceed to locate said widening and new highway, and that an attested copy of this adjudication and order, be served upon the Clerk of the town of Dorchester thirty days at least before said day of meeting, and that a copy be published three weeks successively in the Quincy Patriot, a newspaper printed in Quincy, in said County, the last publication to be fourteen days at least before said day of meeting; and that like copies be posted up in two or more public places in said Dorchester, that all persons and corporations interested for or against said petition may then and there appear and be heard if they shall see fit.

EZRA W. SAMPSON, Clerk.

Pince, Thomas Restieux, N. Surtevant, Simeon P. Taylor, Charles H. White, D. W. Wiswell, Dan. Leverett, Charlestown. J. L. Lord, New York.

President and Treasurer—JAMES CLARK.

Secretary—SAMUEL H. JENKS.

Consulting Physicians—D. Humphrey Storer, M. D., 14 Winter St.; Augustus A. Gould, M. D., 15 West St.

Superintendent of Agencies—Simeon P. Taylor.

THIS Institution insures both males and females against disease or accident, according to the rates specified in their tables. The former, by depositing a given sum yearly, may insure a return of four-fifths of that deposit, for each and every week within that year, during which he may be so disabled by illness as to be prevented from pursuing his usual occupation, such allowance not to exceed four hundred dollars in any one year. Females, insured against all maladies common to both sexes, are entitled to return allowances equal to three-fourths of their yearly payments, for every week's sickness. Thus, an investment of $5 a year by the former, or of $5.33 by the latter, will, if deprived of health, secure to the party insured, a compensation of $ per week.

An advance payment of not less than one dollar will be required of each applicant at the time of making the proposal; which sum, in case of rejection, will be refunded, or allowed in case of acceptance. The application is thrice inspected, if the proposal be approved, for the term of thirty days, and no longer, unless the policy be taken, and the balance of premium paid within that time.

Persons insured by this Company become members thereof, so far as to entitle them to a proportion of all dividends of its annual profits, in the ratio of their respective premiums, and according to the duration of their policies.

The renewal of any policy may be secured, on no condition given to the Secretary within three months of its expiration, and on furnishing proof of sound health at the date of such notice.

For rates of insurance and other information, apply to the Agents in this town.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

CUNNING CRAFTINESS.—A FABLE.

When quadrupeds and birds could talk,
The fox went out to take a walk,
With no intention to deceive,
As he would make his friends believe
Though, doubtless, in his wily heart,
Fraud, treachery, deception, art,
Were lurking, when his way he wended
Over to see his dear intended.
A cock whom Raynard, every morning,
Had heard to crow, when day was dawning,
In a contiguous neighborhood,
He knew would make delicious food,
So coming near to Chanticleer,
He bade the gentleman good cheer;
Who to his courteous compliment
Raised up his head and bowed assent,
Then placed himself above his reach,
And stopped to hear the stranger preach.
Don't be afraid, said Raynard then,
I did not come to catch a hen;
My object, if you will believe,
Is not your honor to deceive;
I came to open, sir, a source
To hold commercial intercourse;
I deal with men and dogs you've heard,
Now can't I trade with you my bird?
That, said the cock, is something strange!
Sure there has been a wondrous change!
For men and dogs have eager been,
To kill and strip you of your skin.
True, said the fox, that was the case,
But they have given up the chase;
And now believe me, honest friend,
We buy, we borrow, or we lend.
At present I have corn enough,
And quantities of other stuff,
Which you would like exceeding well,
Which I should also like to sell.
Ah! said the cock, that would be good,
Though money's scarce I'll buy your food;
When you come over here again,
Bring me a portion of your grain.
My loving friend, rejoined the brag,
"Don't buy a pig that's in a bag;"
I would not, for my eyes or ears,
Take an advantage of your fears;
To-morrow, should it rain or shine,
I must be off from six till nine
Adjusting business with the hound
Who claims a portion of my ground;
And as you seem to be suspicious
That I am rather avocative,
Call at my burrow when I'm gone,
To see before you buy my corn.
Although I can subsist without it,
Said Chanticleer, I'll think about it.
This last remark the fox commended,
And so their conversation ended.
Then Chanticleer flew off the block
And called around him all his flock
To get advice, and hear their views
About the interesting news.
All thought the project very good
Because they wanted better food,
Especially his younger brother,
Who seemed more pleased than any other;
He played so brisk among the fowl
It made his elder brother scowl.
But Chanticleer's aged mother
No longer would her feelings smother,
As, with authority invested,
Against the movement she protested.
A vote by yeas and nays was taken
And madam partlet was forsaken.
Night came and all retired it seems,
Next morning early told their dreams;
Then from his roost, on terra-firma
The cock alighted where 'twas wormy;
Scatched up his breakfast from a furrow
Then took his leave for Raynard's burrow.
Nothing occurred upon the road,
Except a snake who'd caught a toad,
To frighten the traveller that morning,
And that he thought might be a warning;
But then, again, thought he, 'tis said,
"Nothing ventured nothing gained,"
So on he trudged, alarmed withal—
Reached and entered Raynard's hall.
Truly, said he, the fox is gone,
But he has lied about his corn.
The fox in ambush lay awake,
A breakfast of his guest to make,
And seeing Chanticleer's tail feather
Stick out,—he smacked his chops together,—
Went in. "The cock held up his claw
In order to shake Raynard's paw,
The fox, unnoticed the beck,
Seized Chanticleer by the neck;
A groan was heard, and flutter, flutter,
But not a word did Raynard utter.

ANECDOTES.

"Is Mr. ——— abstemious in his living?" asked a physician of a rather obese attendant upon a patient laboring under an inflammatory complaint. "Well, he's abstemious enough in the eating part, but I tell you he's stomachous when you come to the drinking!"

A gentleman playing whist with an intimate friend, who seemed, as far as hands were concerned, to hold the Mahometan doctrine of abstinence in supreme contempt, said to him with a countenance more in sorrow than anger, "My good fellow, if dirt were trumps, what a hand you would have!"

A Yankee tailor was dunning a man for the amount of his bill. The man said he was sorry, very sorry indeed, that he couldn't pay it. "Well," said the other, "I took you for a man that would be sorry, but if you are sorryer than I am, then I'll quit."

"Has my client paid your client any money?" "Not that I know of; but why do you ask?" "Because," replied the first lawyer, "I'm afraid they will settle the case between themselves, and we shall get no fees."

Dobbs, on being questioned by the Court as to whether he had ever been extensively engaged in the hotel business, answered that he rather thought he had, as he once boarded a frigate and two sloops-of-war.

Encourage your Own.

To the People of Quincy—
THE following is a well known motto, and strictly true:

"That County or Town that gives the most liberal encouragement to its own manufactures of every kind is well known to thrive, and increase in wealth and population."

There are a few interesting facts, of which we wish to remind you, and which we are inclined to think have slipped from the memory of some, and which it will be for your advantage as well as ours to remember.

1st. That at the QUINCY BOOKSTORE you will find all the

SCHOOL BOOKS

in use in this and the neighboring towns.

2d. That at the same place you will find every kind of

Blank Account Book,

RECORD or MEMORANDUM BOOK.

3d. That there you will find a great assortment of Miscellaneous, Juvenile and Toy Books.

4th. That there you will find all kinds of
STATIONERY.

5th. That there you will find an innumerable variety
of

FANCY GOODS.

6th. That all the above will be sold at the very Lowest Market Prices.

7th. That we are entirely disinterested when we say that you will be much better satisfied with yourselves and your bargains if you trade at home, in preference to "out of town."

8th. That there you will find a GOOD LIBRARY
where you can procure reading on reasonable terms.

9th. That the Proprietors are agents for all the popular MAGAZINES, receiving the subscriptions
themselves and furnishing the numbers on their own responsibility, free of any expense. Many have forgotten this of late, preferring to subscribe of some travelling agent, to one in their own town.

10th. That they RE-BIND old Books, Pamphlets,
Periodicals, Music, etc., "as cheap as they can afford to do and as quick as anybody."

These things we wish to call to your memory, because while we have been moving on in a quiet kind of a way, you seem partly to have forgotten the old place, thinking perhaps that we did not keep up with the times in the variety of our goods and also in price.
Our rule, like that of many others, is, "quick sales and small profits," therefore call in and we will supply you most satisfactorily.

Fall and Winter Campaign COMMENCED IN REALITY!

OAK HALL ROTUNDA OPENED!!

There are a few interesting facts, of which we wish to remind you, and which we are inclined to think have slipped from the memory of some, and which it will be for your advantage as well as ours to remember.

1st. That at the QUINCY BOOKSTORE you will find all the

SCHOOL BOOKS

in use in this and the neighboring towns.

2d. That at the same place you will find every kind of

Blank Account Book,

RECORD or MEMORANDUM BOOK.

3d. That there you will find a great assortment of Miscellaneous, Juvenile and Toy Books.

4th. That there you will find all kinds of
STATIONERY.

5th. That there you will find an innumerable variety
of

FANCY GOODS.

6th. That all the above will be sold at the very Lowest Market Prices.

7th. That we are entirely disinterested when we say that you will be much better satisfied with yourselves and your bargains if you trade at home, in preference to "out of town."

8th. That there you will find a GOOD LIBRARY
where you can procure reading on reasonable terms.

9th. That the Proprietors are agents for all the popular MAGAZINES, receiving the subscriptions
themselves and furnishing the numbers on their own responsibility, free of any expense. Many have forgotten this of late, preferring to subscribe of some travelling agent, to one in their own town.

10th. That they RE-BIND old Books, Pamphlets,
Periodicals, Music, etc., "as cheap as they can afford
to do and as quick as anybody."

These things we wish to call to your memory, because while we have been moving on in a quiet kind of a way, you seem partly to have forgotten the old place, thinking perhaps that we did not keep up with the times in the variety of our goods and also in price.
Our rule, like that of many others, is, "quick sales and small profits," therefore call in and we will supply you most satisfactorily.

No. 57.

SATURDAY, MARCH 3, 1849.

John A. Green, Editor.

FREE SOIL NOMINATIONS. The following gentlemen have been selected by the Free Soil party of this town, at their meeting last Thursday evening, to be supported for town officers, viz:—

Town Clerk—George L. Gill.
Town Treasurer—John Briesler.
Selectmen and Assessors—George Marsh, George Newcomb and Lewis Bass.

School Committee—Rev. William Allen, Charles Francis Adams, George White, Jonathan Baxter, and George Marsh.

Constables—Seth Adams and Abel Wright.

BEWARE OF A ROGUE. A stranger, who gave as his name James Colman, hired of Sylvanus Rowe of this town, on Wednesday last, a buggy chaise and horse to go to Roxbury and return that evening. The rogue, however, went to Boston, raised twenty five dollars on the vehicle, which was to have been sold at auction. The horse was placed in a stable, and would probably have been disposed of in the same way. As it happened the property was recovered, but the rogue escaped and has doubtless made tracks for California.

TO LOVERS OF GOOD LIVING. Attention is directed to the advertisement of the Messrs. Marden who have commenced business in this town. We are informed that it is their intention to keep of the best quality, at all times, the usual assortment connected with a first rate Meat and Provision Store. Call and see for yourselves.

INAUGURATION BALL. The friends of the President elect in this town, contemplate a rich time at the hall on the evening of the inauguration of "Rough and Ready" to the Presidency. The hall at the Hancock House is to be appropriately decorated, excellent music provided for the enchanting pleasures of the dance, while the supper prepared by an acknowledged hand, all combined, will make the festival one of interest, mirth and gratification. A joyous time there will be, and none other could be expected; as, with the gentlemanly managers, they celebrate the election of a good man to preside over their dear bought liberties and highly prized Union.

HINGHAM SAVINGS BANK. At the annual meeting of the Hingham Institution for Savings, held on the eight of January last, the following gentlemen were chosen its officers.

President—David Fearing.
Vice President—Royal Whiton.
Treasurer—David Harding.
Trustees—Zadock Hersey, George Lincoln, Caleb Bailey, Rufus Lane, Charles Lane, Atherton Tilden, Martin Fearing, Isaac Barnes, David Lincoln, Caleb B. Marsh, John Baker, David Bassett.
Board of Investment—The President and Treasurer, together with Messrs. Royal Whiton, Atherton Tilden, and David Lincoln.

THE GOLD DOLLAR. Congress has consented at last to give the people a gold dollar. The amendment to the bill requires the Eagle to be omitted on the reverse of the dollar coin, and authorizes the issue of twenty dollar pieces, or double eagles.

FIRE IN HINGHAM. An old and unoccupied dwelling house, in the vicinity of Fort Hill, in Hingham, was destroyed by fire on Monday evening last. The light was quite visible in this town, and caused an alarm of fire.

RAILROAD NOTICE. An alteration has been made during this week in the running of the cars. See the advertisement.

UNITED STATES SENATORS. Hon Salmon P. Chase has been chosen a United States Senator for six years from Ohio, to succeed the Hon William Allen, (dem.) whose term expires on the fourth of March ensuing. Mr. Chase has been a democrat, but now belongs to the free soil party.

The Legislature of Delaware has chosen John Wales, Esq. (whig) to succeed the Hon John M. Clayton, who has been selected by the President elect for one of his cabinet.

JUSTICE. Among the acts passed by the present Congress, is one giving five years' half pay to the widows and orphans of every officer and private, who served during the late war with Mexico, and was honorably discharged, or continued in service to the time of his death, and whose death was in consequence of wounds received, or "disease contracted within the line of duty."

THE MODEL MAGAZINE. The February number of the American Metropolitan Magazine, is indeed well entitled to all the praise it so lavishly receives from the press. Its publisher, Israel Post, seems happily to possess the requirements so important to render a periodical worthy of success and which the public appreciate by the ready and generous support bestowed. The issue now before us contains an engraving of 'Mrs. Richardson and the British Officers,' in illustration of the times of the revolution—'The meeting of Arnold and Andre'—Washington leaving his mother to join the British Navy—'The residence of Lamartine'—with various wood cuts illustrative of the reading matter, which is of the highest order and from the most eminent writers of the country. If you wish to subscribe to a three dollar magazine, select the Metropolitan, the model periodical of the country.

RECOVERED. A store in the south part of Abington was entered last week and dry goods stolen. A part of them have been recovered in Boston, through the police. The female thief was not found.

 JOSEPH G. BRACKETT,
 ELISHA PACKARD, } Auditors.

Iowa, it now seems, is the only free state that has not passed Wilmot Proviso resolutions. The Senate passed them by a vote of eleven to five but the House did not act on them.

A remarkable decrease has occurred in the number of births in Ireland. In one county the falling off in 1848 was ninety per cent. An article in the London Daily News attributes it to the utter physical prostration of the people.

In Liverpool, (Eng.) on one day, one hundred and two persons were convicted and fined for using false weights, scales, etc. In many cases the parties fined had been previously convicted.

The Hon. Timothy Farrar, who was the oldest surviving graduate of Harvard University, died at his residence in Hollis, (N. H.) on the 20th inst. He was one hundred and one years, seven months and ten days old.

William Willis Smith Bliss, otherwise Maj Bliss, the son-in-law of Maj. Gen. Taylor, was born in the village of Whitehall, County of Washington, State of New York.

A steam plough has been tried on a farm near Stratford, in England, by stationary engines at the extremities of the field, and the experiment is said to have been satisfactory. The engine is ten feet by six in bulk, portable with a pair of horses, and may be used for ploughing, thrashing, or for any purposes where power of the kind is required.

It has been suggested by a wag, says the Salem Observer, that it would be well for some of those who talk of making a settlement in California to commence by making a settlement at home, before they go.

The Rev. Charles K. True, of Charlestown, has been appointed a member of the Board of Education, in place of the Rev. Dr. Sears, who was chosen Secretary of the Board.

Thirty of the railroad companies in this country do not permit their trains of cars to run on Sunday.

Lynn has a population of twelve thousand, eight thousand of whom of both sexes are engaged in making boots and shoes. Three million pairs were "created" last year.

Three hundred and seven Irish orphan girls, all under twenty years of age, under the care of a matron, have left Plymouth (Eng.) for Sydney, (Cape Breton).

A woman living with her third husband has just had a call from her first spouse, who left her twenty one years ago, for South America, and whom she supposed to be dead. During his absence she has been twice married, her second husband being dead.

A mining company has been incorporated in Missouri, with a capital of four million dollars to work some of the great lead mines of that State.

Of the one hundred and forty two female teachers taken from New England to the west in the last year, by the Board of Popular Education, only eight have got married.

No work was done in the Charleston Navy Yard, on the forenoon of the 16th inst., on account of the cold. The orders were, not to commence work if the mercury was down to zero.

The people of Massachusetts paid one million of dollars last year for the support of common schools. This is the true source of her greatness and prosperity.

The Legislature of Wisconsin has passed a general law authorizing any inhabitant to change his name, with the approbation of the town authorities.

The Savannah (Ga.) Republican says of the late snow storm in that region, that it is the first since March, 1837—nearly twelve years.

Among the recent importations into Great Britain from the United States, have been American partridges in considerable number.

M. Vatterne of France, agent for the international exchange of books, medals, etc., receives the countenance of twenty-one States, they having passed laws, and regularly engaged in this enterprise by providing a yearly appropriation to meet his expenses.

Sir Henry Lyton Bulwer, who succeeds Mr. Parkinham as British Envoy at Washington, is a brother of the distinguished historian and novelist.

All men are allowed to think and act freely, and all women are amiable and accomplished ladies—except those who work for a living.

All men are sinners—except those who belong to the church.

All men are endowed with inalienable rights—except poor men.

To keep horses' feet from collecting snow-balls, rub soft soap in their hoofs. Soft soap sometimes prevents the collection of balls.

The women in San Francisco are said to use gold flat-irons, iron being too expensive.

Forty-five miles were recently run in forty minutes, over the York and Darlington railroad in England.

A community of socialists exists in Wisconsin, consisting of one hundred and twenty members, occupying seven hundred and seventy three acres of land. Their property amounts to $33,527 77, and their profits the past year were $2077 02.

The Government of England has ordered a census of the whole British empire to be taken in 1851. Arrangements have thus early been taken for the purpose, so that the work of numbering her vast population in all quarters of the globe may be executed in an uniform and thorough manner. This is the first time such a census has been ordered.

GENERAL COURT. The bill to establish the office of State Auditor has passed the House without a syllable of opposition. It was reported by the Finance Committee, composed of members of all parties, and received their unanimous assent.

A petition has been presented for a branch from the Old Colony Railroad, in Halifax, to Jones River Pond.

The resolves against slavery and its extension were ordered to a third reading in the House, there being only one voting in the negative, Mr. Hallock of Plainfield.

FOREIGN NEWS. By the arrival of the steamer Europa, at New York last Saturday, the annexed intelligence is obtained.

England—Trade appears to be reviving, cotton, corn, and other American articles are in fair demand at remunerating prices. The Queen's speech at the opening of Parliament indicates that the government will adhere to the policy of free trade. Many vessels and companies are starting for California.

Ireland—All the news from this ill-fated country represent the population as endeavoring to flee, by any means, to the United States, leaving their rents unpaid, and the sick and helpless upon their parishes.

France—Some dissatisfaction is said to exist in Paris on the part of the guard mobile, on account of a proposition to reduce its numbers one half, and its pay to the level of the line. Some apprehensions were felt of a rising, and on the 25th of January eighty thousand regular troops were in Paris. Napoleon appears, however, to be popular with the people.

Spain—This government has sent a squadron of seven vessels and three thousand troops with a view to aid the Pope.

FROM WASHINGTON. The President and Vice President elect have arrived in Washington. Gen. Taylor was somewhat fatigued but quietness has nearly restored him to health. He was warmly received by the citizens and the officers of government. President Polk and Gen. Taylor have exchanged civilities. The cabinet officers are not all appointed, but Hon. Abbot Lawrence of this State is to be one.

Congress, with the exception of appropriation bills, has not legislated much during the past week.

The Berkshire County Whig, which has been published for eight years in Pittsfield (Mass.) has been discontinued. The paper was conducted with much ability, and should have been sustained.

POETRY.

THE CHOLERA.

Again the awful scourge has come,
From Asia's distant shore,
O'er India, Persia, Russia, Rome,
To frighten us once more.

In vain the Atlantic rolls between
The old world and the new,
In vain the vessel's quarantine,
And all that art can do.

For swifter than the winged wind
Death's angel, Cholera, flies;
He leaves his loathsome dead behind
And all he touches dies.

Low in the dust, Great God, we lie,
Beneath thy chastening rod;
Oh! hear our feeble supplicant cry,
Oh! spare us mighty God!

Then shall our lips speak forth thy praise,
Our hearts to thee be given,
And hymns of gratitude we'll raise
To Thee our Friend in Heaven.

Detroit, Feb. 7, 1849. W. A. Bacon.

CRADLE SONG.

Weary of the mother's part?
My sweet baby, never!
I will rock thee on my heart
Ever, yes, forever!

Loveliest of lovely things,
Pure as the angel—
Oh, in everything but wings
Is my babe an angel!

Blue as heaven is, are the eyes,
"Neath the lids so waxen,
And the gold of morning lies
In the ringlet flaxen.

Fragrant shrub, or tropic tree,
Never yielded blossom
Half so lovely, sweet, as these,
Sleeping on my bosom!

When thy little dimpled cheek
Mine is softly pressing,
Not a wish have I to seek
Any other blessing.

Art thou, little baby, mine?
Earlier love effacing
One whose smile is like to thine,
Chides this long embracing.

No! as drops of light and dew
Glorify each other,
So shall we, life's journey through,
Father, child and mother.

ADVICE TO WIVES.

Love is fickle, sages say,
Beauty cannot hold him;
Love will steal himself away,
Maidens, if you could him,
Love, he will not live with strife—
Even turns from beauty,
If the lady plays his life
With her household duty.

You can have him in your power,
Ladies, if you try it;
Use him as you won him first—
Love—he can't deny it.
Do not fret, and scold, and pout—
Aggravating trouble;
Beauty, kicking up a rout,
Makes misfortune double.

HOURS OF SLEEP.

Nature requires five,
Custom gives seven!
Laziness takes nine,
And wickedness eleven.

ANECDOTES.

Judge Burnet, son of the famous Bishop of Salisbury, when young, is said to have been of a wild and dissipated turn. Being one day found by his father in a very serious humor, "What is the matter with you, Tom," said the Bishop, "what are you ruminating on?" "A greater work than your lordship's History of the Reformation," answered the son. "Aye," what is that?" asked the father. "The reformation of myself, my lord," replied the son.

A singular scheme for raising funds was hit upon and put in practice at a donation party. Some of the kissable ladies present actually allowed their sweet lips to be tasted at the rate of fifty cents a kiss—this being considered a suitable price for the privilege! One gentleman, it is said, took five dollars' worth!

An Irish knight was once disputing with a French courtier as to the age and standing of their families, when the latter, as a finisher to the argument, said that his ancestors were in the ark with Noah. "That is nothing," says the Hibernian, "for at the deluge my forefathers were cruising about in a boat of their own."

A pedlar in Chicago fell in a fit in the street. Attached to his clothes was a card, upon which was written, "If I fall in a fit, light my pipe—it is the only thing that will relieve me." This was done and the man was relieved in the manner prescribed.

A man was found mounted on a ladder, with his lips pressed to the telegraph wires. He was kissing his wife in Philadelphia "by telegraph."

"I am afraid that I shall come to want," said an old lady to a young gentleman. "I have come to want already," was the reply. "I want your daughter!" The old lady opened her eyes.

A passenger on the mail-boat from Louisville, not in the habit of indulging, found himself somewhat under the influence of "Old King Al." Being asked how he came to drink so much, replied, "Why, the fact is, gentle, (sic) the river has got so low (sic) the Captain has forbid the use of water as a beverage—there is none to spare."

Worms! Worms!!

PINK ROOT SYRUP.

ARE safely, speedily and most effectually expelled from the system by the use of

WHITWELLS PINK ROOT SYRUP.
Spigelia, or Indian Pink.
has been in use for hundreds of years among the Indian tribes of North America, as a certain remedy for Worms.

Almost every family in N. E. is acquainted with its use. The great and only objection heretofore to its use, has been that it was necessary to pour half a pint down a child's throat in order to destroy and expell the worms; but that objection exists no longer. In the PINK ROOT SYRUP, you have the strongest possible preparation of the Pink root, united with Castor Oil, and Symplics, made into a pleasant and healthful Syrup, which children will take without any trouble. Indeed, they like it much, and will never refuse to take it. The dose of this agreeable medicine for an infant is only

Half a Teaspoon Full.
Full and ample directions accompany its use. The public are respectfully requested to give it a trial, and they will never use any other remedy.

—ALSO FOR SALE—
Whitwells Syrup of Blackberry.
(Made of the Root.)
For Dysentery, Diarrhoea, Cholera Morbus.

Encourage your Own.

To the People of Quincy—
THE following is a well known motto, and strictly true!

"That Country or Town that gives the most liberal encouragement to its own manufactures of every kind is well known to thrive, and increase in wealth and population."

There are a few interesting facts, of which we wish to remind you, and which we are inclined to think have slipped from the memory of some, and which it will be for your advantage as well as ours to remember.

1st. That at the QUINCY BOOKSTORE you will find all the

SCHOOL BOOKS

in use in this and the neighboring towns.
2d. That at the same place you will find every kind of

Blank Account Book,
RECORD or MEMORANDUM BOOK.
3d. That there you will find a great assortment of Miscellaneous, Juvenile and Toy Books.

4th. That there you will find all kinds of STATIONERY.

5th. That there you will find an innumerable variety of

FANCY GOODS.
6th. That all the above will be sold at the very Lowest Market Prices.

7th. That we are entirely disinterested when we say that you will be much better satisfied with yourselves and your bargains if you trade at home, in preference to "out of town."

8th. That there you will find a GOOD LIBRARY where you can procure reading on reasonable terms.

9th. That the Proprietors are agents for all the popular MAGAZINES, receiving the subscriptions themselves and furnishing the numbers on all pre-payment, and as quick as any publisher.

Our rule, like that of many others, is, "quick sales and small profits," therefore call in and we will supply you most satisfactorily.

MISCELLANY.

SPRING BUDDING OF FRUIT-TREES. It may not be generally known that fruit trees can be budded in the spring as soon as the bark will slip with ease, with equally as good success as those done in the usual season.

Spring budding possesses some advantages, inasmuch as one year's growth of the bud is obtained in advance of those budded in summer or fall. Scions cut the previous fall or winter may be preserved in moss or saw-dust so as to perform this operation as late in the season, with safety, as can be with the present year's growth of scions. This is quite a convenience when scions are wanted from a distance, as there is not so much trouble in preserving them perfectly fresh as when cut in the leaf.

The only difference necessary to make between spring and fall budding is, the stock of the former should be cut off at the time of budding, three or four inches above the insertion of the bud, and a coat of shellac or other cement applied to the stock to prevent decay, and for the health of the tree. I think this should be done in all cases.—N. E. Farmer.

CAUGHT IN THE ACT. A dozen omnibuses, with their live freight, were about starting on a "pic nic," when a young woman ran hastily up and said to a gentleman of the party, who had just seated himself cosily by the side of a pretty girl.

"Here, sir, I want to know what right you have to go on pic nics, and your wife and children at home."

"Hush, Sophia," whispered the gentleman hastily getting out the omnibus, "hush, the people will hear you."

"Who cares if they do? why didn't you think of the people, or of me, or of your child, instead of running off to pic nics with other women?"

"Well—there—now—don't—"

"But I will, though! and as for you, miss, if you ever dare look at my husband again, I'll—"

"I didn't look at him, ma'am," tremblingly replied the poor girl; "I thought he was a single man when he asked me to go on a pic nic with him."

"So you have begun your didoes, have you my lady?" exclaimed the wife to the husband; "you've begun your didoes have you? So—so I'll give you a lesson which you will remember—(taking him by the ear,) now walk with me."

The poor fellow writhed and implored, but his better half kept her hold, and walked him off home, with the laughter and jeers of the whole party ringing in his ears every step.

LADIES' BLACKING. Take one drachm of isinglass, half a drachm of indigo, half an ounce of soft soap, two ounces of glue, and a small handful of logwood raspings. Boil these together slowly in one pint of vinegar, until the quantity is reduced to one half. The shoes are to be entirely cleaned from dirt or dust; and if any blacking remain on them, it must be washed off with cold water and the shoes dried. Then the blacking is to be applied with a bit of sponge; it is merely rubbed on; when a perfect jet is produced, needing no brush, and making no dirt; nor will it soil the dress.

PRAYER. Prayer is the key to open the day, and the bolt to shut in the night. But as the skies drop the early dew, and the latter dew upon the grass, yet it would not spring and grow green by the constant and double falling of dew unless some great shower, at a certain season, did supply the rest; so the customary devotion of prayer twice a day, is the falling of the early and latter dew; but if you will increase and flourish in works of grace, empty the great clouds sometimes, and let them fall into a full shower of prayer; close out the seasons when prayer shall overflow, like Jordan in time of harvest.—Bishop Taylor.

RAILROADS TO BOSTON. The following railroads and sections of railroads leading towards Boston, or connecting with Boston lines, were opened during the year ending Jan. 31, 1849:

Cape Cod Railroad, length about	27 1/2
South Shore,	11 1/2
Norfolk County Railroad,	26
Milford Branch,	12
Vermont and Massachusetts Railroad,	35
Connecticut River,	11
Cheshire,	37
Sullivan,	28
Vermont Central	65
Bristol	4
Northern	11
Boston, Concord and Montreal	36
Passumpsic Railroad	40
Worcester and Nashua	45
Portland to Lewiston	27
New York and New Haven Railroad to
Harlem Railroad	60
Section of Ogdensburg Railroad	12
Stony Branch	14
Lowell and Lawrence	12

Total Miles, 615

The cost of these lines may be safely estimated at fifteen millions of dollars, and their annual dividends promise to exceed one million.

A BEAUTIFUL EXTRACT. Labor! Why man of idleness, labor rocked you in the cradle, and has nourished your pampered life; without it, the woven silks and wool upon your back would be in the silkworm's nest and the fleeces in the shepherd's fold. For the meanness that ministers to human want, save the air of heaven, man is indebted to toil; and even the air, by God's wise ordination, is breathed with labor. It is only the drones who toil not, who infest the hive of activity like masses of corruption and decay. The lords of the earth are the working men, who can build or cast down at their will, and who retort the sneer of the "soft handed," by pointing to the trophies, wherever art, science, civilization, and humanity are known. Work on, man of toil! thy royalty is yet to be acknowledged as labor rises onward to the highest throne of power. Work on, and in the language of a true poet be "A glorious man! and thy renown shall be Born by the winds and waters thro' all time,

While there's a keel to carve it on the sea
From clime to clime,
Or God ordains that idleness is a crime."

NATURE'S ALPHABET. Nature's alphabet is made up of only four letters, wood, water, rock, and soil, and yet with these four letters she forms such wondrous composition, such infinite combination, as no language of twenty-four letters can describe. Nature never grows old; she speaks now as ever, she has no provincialisms. The lark carols the same song, in the same key, as when Adam turned his delighted ear to catch the strain; the owl still howls in his flat, yet loves the note, and screams through no other octave; the petrel as much delighted to sport among the first waves the Indian Ocean ever raised, as it does now. Birds that lived on flies, laid bluish eggs, when Isaac went out into the fields to meditate at eventide, as they will two thousand years hence if the world does not break her harness from the orb of day. The sun is as bright as when Lot entered the little city of Zoar. The diamond, the onyx, and the topaz of Ethiopia, are still as splendid, and the vulpine's eye as fierce, as when Job took up his parable. In short, nature's pendulum has never altered its strokes.—Bayles.

THE LAWS OF HEALTH. In the regimen that prize fighters submit themselves to, we may see the secrets of acquiring the greatest strength and power of endurance. It is to be strictly temperate in all things to avoid all debilitating stimulants, such as alcoholic drinks, tea and coffee, tobacco, &c.—to rise early, to take abundance of exercise in the open air, to bathe often, and observe the most rigid system of cleanliness, and abstain from all licentious practices. Those noted for pedestrian feats submit themselves to the same kind of regimen. If it may be done from such ignoble motives, how much easier should it be to practice the same system for the greatest of all blessings—health!

ERROR IN TEACHING READING. In the exercise of reading, some teachers have the habit of anticipating the words which the reader was unable to pronounce correctly, and of pronouncing them for him, thus depriving the scholar of that exercise of his faculties by which alone he can obtain proficiency. This is a great error on the part of the teacher. When would a child learn to go alone, if it were to be carried in the arms of the nurse until it could walk without tottering? How could its feeble and awkward limbs, without trial and exercise, acquire the strength and agility which are required to bear up the weight of the body with the most perfect ease, and to enable the child to walk and run without stumbling.

NATURAL HABITS OF DOMESTIC ANIMALS. The natural habits of different domestic animals differ very considerably. In small and thorough bred horses, the pulsations of the heart are about forty to forty-two in a minute. In farm horses they do not amount to more than thirty-six. When they are treated ill, or even when spoken roughly to, their circulation is increased, say ten pulsations per minute. Cold has great effect on the pig. It is found that pigs whose sties have a southern aspect, thrive much better than those placed in a colder declivity; they can hardly, perhaps, be kept too warm or too clean.

NORFOLK AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.
PREAMBLE.

Impressed with the importance of the advantages to be derived, by associated effort, in carrying forward successfully every great enterprise having for its object the improvement of the community, the Farmers, Horticulturists, and Manufacturers, of the county of Norfolk, have resolved to establish a Society, and be governed by the following

CONSTITUTION.

Article I.—The association shall be known by the name of "The Norfolk Agricultural Society."

Article II.—There shall be a President, six Vice Presidents, a Recording Secretary, Corresponding Secretary, Treasurer, Executive and Finance Committee, who shall be Trustees, ex officio. Besides these, one additional Trustee shall be chosen from each town in the county—excepting the city of Roxbury and the town of Dorchester, which shall be entitled to two Trustees each. There shall also be appointed, by the Board of Trustees, a Committee of two persons from each town. All of whom shall be continued in office until others shall be elected in their stead.

Article III.—All officers of the Society shall be chosen by ballot. The election shall be determined by a majority of votes.

Article IV.—The names of persons to be balloted for at the annual election, shall be contained on one ballot; and the offices for which they are respectively nominated shall be distinctly designated.

Article V.—There shall be two stated meetings of the Society, annually, viz: On the last Wednesday in March and September; the same to be held at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at such place as the Trustees shall appoint; of which they shall give notice—in two of the Boston newspapers and the County papers—at least three weeks previous to the meeting.

Article VI.—There shall be, after the year 1849, annual choice of officers—viz: At the stated meeting in March; in the choice of whom thirteen members shall make a quorum; in the transaction of other business, seven may make a quorum.

Article VII.—If, at any meeting of the Society, or of the Trustees, the President and Vice Presidents shall be absent, the members present may appoint one from among them to preside at such meeting.

Article VIII.—The President—or, in case of his absence, either of the Vice Presidents—with the advice of the Trustees, may call a special meeting of the Society; or whenever written application, with reasons assigned therefore, shall be made by any twelve members of the Society to the President and Trustees, they shall call such meeting.

Article IX.—The meeting of the Trustees shall be held at such time and place as they shall, from time to time agree upon; seven of whom, including the presiding member, shall make a quorum for doing business.

Article X.—The Executive Committee shall recommend, and, in conjunction with the Trustees, shall regulate all the concerns of the Society, during the intervals of its meetings; propose such objects of improvement to the attention of the public, appoint such committees, publish such communications, and offer such premiums, in such form and value as they shall think proper—provided the premiums offered do not exceed the funds of the Society—and shall lay before the Society, at each of its meetings, a statement of their proceedings, and of the communications made to them.

Article XI.—No transfer, by the Treasurer, of any stock, evidence of debt, or security, shall be deemed valid, unless made by the order of the Finance Committee.

Article XII.—Any person, by paying into the treasury the sum of five dollars, and signing the rules adopted by the Society, shall be entitled to all the privileges of membership.

Article XIII. The Recording Secretary shall take minutes of all votes and proceedings of the Society and of the Trustees, and enter them in separate books; and shall record all such communications as the Trustees may direct.

Article XIV.—The Corresponding Secretary shall write all letters relating to the business of the Society, and answer all letters to the Society as the Trustees shall direct.

Article XV.—The Treasurer shall receive all monies due or payable to the Society, and all donations that may be made to it; for which he shall give duplicate receipts—one of which shall be lodged with the Recording Secretary—and make a fair record thereof; and, from time to time, pay out such monies as he shall have orders from the Trustees; and shall, annually, and whenever thereto required, render a fair account of all his receipts and payments to the Society, or Committee thereof.

Article XVI.—A Committee shall be chosen, annually, to audit the Treasurer's accounts—viz: At the September meeting; and the same being accepted, shall be entered by the Recording Secretary on his books.

Article XVII.—In case of the death, resignation, incapacity, or removal out of the county, of either of the Secretaries or the Treasurer, the Trustees shall take charge of the official books, papers, and effects, belonging to the office that may be vacated, and give receipts for the same; which books, papers, &c. they may deliver to some person whom they may appoint to fill the office until the next meeting of the Society; at which time there shall be a choice.

Article XVIII.—A Committee shall be appointed, from time to time, severally to solicit and receive subscriptions for raising a fund for encouraging the objects for which the Society has been founded—the improvement of the Agriculture, the Horticulture, and the Manufactures of the county—the same to be sacredly appropriated to those objects only.

Article XIX.—All donations made to the Society shall be permanently invested; the income only to be applied to premiums and gratuities, unless specially directed otherwise by the donor.

For the Quincy Patriot.

TOKEN ATLAS.

MR. EDITOR—Will you permit me through the columns of the Patriot, to express a sentiment, the failure to express which would be the greatest violence to my feelings? I refer to the sentiment of affection and gratitude, which I shall cherish forever towards the MAKERS OF THE TOKEN ATLAS.

But I ought to give you some idea of the nature of this Atlas, and of its manufacture. To those who are familiar with Fowle's Grand Outline Map of Massachusetts, my remarks on this point will be most readily appreciated. That Map is made upon a canvas of more than thirty square feet, and upon a scale of but little over two miles to the inch. It gives the SHAPE and relative SIZE of every town in the State. The Meridians and Parallels indicate distance in miles from Boston. A number stands in each town, denoting its rank of population in the County to which it belongs. The location and size of all the villages in each town are indicated by clusters of black blocks. Hills, rivers, brooks, ponds, etc. are marked very minutely. All the Railroads, and their branches, are distinctly traced. An Alphabetical List of all the towns is given, with the corresponding Rank Number of each. I have frequently said, and do not hesitate to repeat here, that Fowle's Outline Map is richly worth ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS to every School District in the State.

Some eight or ten months since, I conceived the idea of having this splendid and most valuable Map wrought into an Atlas, for my own study. Four months ago, I marked off the fourteen Counties into thirty two parts—that being the number requisite for the size of each part, to suit the Atlas. Having called for "volunteers" to engage in this mammoth work, twenty-five of the map drawers in my school offered to undertake it. Poor souls! they little knew the arduousness of the task which was then before them. They had never drawn a perfectly correct map, and were yet to learn the vast difference between a map measured by the eye, and one measured by instruments. My school has, during the past year, produced nearly two thousand specimens of sight maps; but the "TOKEN ATLAS" is the first appearance of instrumental maps.

Of the twenty-five drawers who volunteered to make this Atlas, SEVENTEEN GIRLS persevered to the end. You can form some idea of the amount of labor imposed upon these seventeen girls, when I tell you that, to fix any important point in a town, two measurements were necessary; one from a Parallel, and one from a Meridian. Every boundary line, every village, every pond, every stream, every hill, every road, required this double measurement. If a drawer became impatient, negligent, or forgetful of this principle, taking some other standard of measurement, the consequence was, that the map proved "wrong"—"wrong"—"wrong"—when subjected to the ordeal of examination, by the teacher, or by an experienced monitor. There is scarcely a map in the Atlas whose original pencilling did not require more or less erasure. Every map passed through three different operations—namely, the pencilling, the inking, the painting, and the bordering; the last being even more difficult than either of the others. Very many of the maps passed the first and second stages of operation, when, from some unradicable error, they were thrown aside. Several even passed the painting and bordering stages, and then had to be rejected. This was "too bad"—wasn't it, sir? You would have thought so, if you had seen the tears of mingled vexation, disappointment, sorrow, and determination, which I so frequently witnessed on those occasions. Two little girls had their work rejected three times, after having been nearly finished. One of these, on being told that she must give up her part to an experienced drawer, burst into a most piteous flood of tears, saying she knew she could get it right next time. She was allowed to "try again"—and she succeeded to admiration. The other little girl also succeeded in the fourth trial.

I should like to convince you that the Token Atlas is valuable to me, not merely as a keepsake, but as a reliable source of information; a kind of information which every body feels the need of, but which almost nobody can get. I admit, if you have Fowle's Outline Map suspended in a convenient place, you can get this information. But a Map is not an Atlas. You cannot carry it where you may choose, and use it when you may require its aid. The TOKEN ATLAS is the only work in existence which completely answers these objects. It is therefore to me altogether above value. Money cannot buy it of me—because I could not, with money, purchase its duplicate. It is an article not to be found in the markets. Nor do I know who could reproduce it, unless it be some enterprising school children, guided and encouraged by a sympathizing teacher.

A single example must suffice to show the manner of using the Token Atlas, and to demonstrate all I have said of its great value. Let it be supposed that I read, in some periodical, an interesting piece of intelligence, relating to the town of Westford. Suppose also—what is very apt to be not mere supposition—that I am totally ignorant as to whether there is any such town as Westford in Massachusetts. The facts, then, which are furnished to me from my Atlas, are these:

1. Westford is in Massachusetts—ascertained by one glance at the Index.

2. Westford is in Middlesex County; marked in the Index 'M.'

3. It is less populous than twenty four other towns in the County; its Rank Number, in the Index, being 25.

4. The Index refers me to page 51 of the Atlas, where I find its exact shape and position. It has seven sides.

5. By a paste-board scale of miles, which I constructed, I ascertain, in about one minute, that it is 21 1/4 miles around Westford.

6. The town has quite a level surface; at least, it has no hills of any importance.

7. It has a part of one large pond, and the whole of four small ponds.

8. It has two small rivers; one of which is a tributary to the Merrimack, and the other to Concord River. The waters of the four small ponds are also conveyed to the tributary of the Merrimack, by two little streams.

9. It has two villages; one in the western part, by the large pond, the other near the centre of the town.

10. By the Parallels and Meridians, I find that the centre of this town is nineteen miles west, and fifteen miles north, of Boston. By a single calculation in figures, I discover that it is 24 1/5 miles from Boston, in a straight line. Making allowance for the crookedness of roads I can approximate the traveled distance very nearly.

11. By a process similar to the last, but a little more difficult, I can tell the distance, in a straight line, from Westford to Quincy, or to any other town in the State.

12. By a direct application of the paste-board scale, I find that the centre of Westford is seven miles south west from the centre of Lowell.

13. By a similar application, I learn that its north eastern corner is one mile from the Lowell and Concord (N. H.) Rail Road; and that its south western corner is three and one-half miles from the Fitchburg Rail Road.

14. By an easy reference to a Table explanatory of the Rank Number in each town, I find that Westford is bounded by the following towns: Tyngsboro', Chelmsford, Carlisle, Acton, Littleton and Groton.

15. By reference to the same Table, (this Table is a combination of two, taken from Fowle's Geography and Fowle's Outline Map,) I see that Westford is marked 6th Class, among the towns of the State. This makes the population of Westford between one thousand and fifteen hundred.

16. By dividing this town into seven triangles I can survey it, or get its area, with an accuracy equal to that of the Outline Map from which the Atlas is made. This is the most laborious task of the whole, but it is one which has been frequently performed by some twenty scholars in my school. [A schedule of the operations was furnished for insertion here, but we are obliged to omit it,—not having the requisite algebraic characters.]

I ought not to omit an allusion to the TITLE PAGE of the Token Atlas. It is a rich and splendidly variegated specimen of PRINTING, executed by BENJAMIN F. BASS, aged fourteen years. It gives the names of the SEVENTEEN GIRLS who are the courageous AUTHORESSES of the Token Atlas. They are here transcribed, with the number of maps drawn by each:

Ellen M. Bartlett 3. Anne M. Turner 2. Josephine Arnold 1. Lucy A. Dwelle 1. Mary F. Joseph 3. Caroline E. Bartlett 3. Mary A. Dodge 4. Hannah A. H. Bent 1. Martha S. Adams 1. Angeline Delle 4. Frances A. Dodge 1. Harriet A. Kellogg 2. Jerusha H. Bartlett 1. Mary E. Chubbuck 1. Lucretia A. Pierce 1. Julia E. Underwood 2. Caroline L. P. Torrey 1.

It is taking nothing from the just praise due to other pupils in my school, to say that the MAKERS OF MY ATLAS have merited the warmest expression of my regard. Their names, from the familiar association of them with that work, will be forever fresh in my memory. I shall a thousand times look over the pages which their young hands have wrought, and a thousand times admire the zeal, the patience, the perseverance, the affection, which urged them on to the completion of this great undertaking. Some of them are above any praise I can bestow; for they not only performed their own work admirably, but acted the part of monitors to encourage, guide, and assist those less experienced in the business. So thoroughly engrossed have they been in this work, that, though they were enabled by extraordinary exertion to maintain a reputable standing in their other studies, they were obliged to sacrifice something of the rank to which their industry would have raised them, but for the heavy draught upon their energies in a different direction. For these sacrifices—these toils—these successful efforts—my most cordial thanks are due. If I could hope to have rendered them a service equivalent to that which I have received, it would be in the superior skill at map drawing which I have helped them to acquire; in the great lesson of self-reliance, in overcoming difficulties; and in the still more important lesson of patience and self-government, under severe trials;—for all of these were but the natural results from the work of making the Token Atlas.

INAUGURAL ADDRESS.

Elected by the American people to the highest office known to our laws, I appear here to take the oath prescribed by the Constitution.

The confidence and respect shown by my countrymen in calling me to the Chief Magistracy of a Republic holding high rank among the nations of the earth, has inspired me with feelings of the most profound gratitude; but when I reflect that the acceptance of the office which their partiality has bestowed imposes the discharge of the most arduous duties, involves the weightiest obligations, I am conscious that the position which I have been called to fill, though sufficient to satisfy the loftiest ambition, is surrounded by fearful responsibilities.

Happily, however, in the performance of my new duties, I shall not be without able co-operation. The legislative and judicial branches of the government present prominent examples of distinguished and civil attainments and matured experience; and it shall be my endeavor to call to my assistance in the Executive Department, individuals whose talent, integrity, and sagacity of character, will furnish ample guarantee for the faithful and honorable performance of the trust to be committed to their charge. With such aids, and an honest purpose, to do whatever is right, I hope to execute diligently, impartially, and for the best interests of the country, the manifold duties devolved upon me.

In the discharge of these duties, my guide will be the Constitution I this day swear to preserve, protect and defend. For the interpretation of that instrument, I shall look to the decision of the judicial tribunals, established by its authority, and to the practice of government under the earliest Presidents, who had so large a share in its formation.

To the example of these illustrious patriots I shall always refer with reverence, and especially to his example who was by so many titled the Father of his country.

To command the army and navy of the United States; with the advice and consent of the Senate to make treaties, and to appoint ambassadors and other officers; to give to Congress information of the State of the Union, and to recommend such measures as he shall judge to be necessary; and to take care that the laws shall be faithfully executed. These are the most important functions intrusted to the President by the constitution; and it may be expected that I shall briefly indicate the principles which will control me in their execution.

Chosen by the body of the people, under the assurance that my administration would be devoted to the welfare of the whole country, and not to the support of any particular section or merely local interest, I have heretofore made, and proclaim my fixed determination to maintain, to the extent of my ability, the Government, in its original purity, and to adopt as the basis of my public policy those great republican doctrines which constitute the strength of our national existence.

In reference to the Army and Navy, lately employed with so much distinction in active service, care shall be taken to insure the highest condition of efficiency; and in furtherance of that object the military and naval schools sustained by the liberality of Congress, shall receive the special attention of the Executive.

As American freemen we cannot but sympathize with all efforts to extend the blessings of civil and political liberty, but at the same time we are warned by the admonitions of history and the voice of our beloved Washington, to abstain from entangling alliances with foreign nations, on all disputes between conflicting Governments.

It is our interest not less than our duty to remain strictly neutral. While our geographical position, the genius of our institutions and our people, the advancing spirit of civilization, and above all the dictates of religion, direct us to the cultivation of peaceful and friendly relations with all other powers, it is to be hoped that no international question can now arise which a Government, confident in its own strength, and resolved to protect its own just rights, may not settle by wise negotiation. And it eminently becomes a government like our own, founded on the morality and intelligence of its citizens, and upheld by their affections, to exhaust every resort of honorable diplomacy before appealing to arms. In the conduct of our foreign relations I shall conform to these views, as I believe them essential to the best interests and honor of the country.

The appointing power vested in the President, imposes delicate and onerous duties. So far as it is possible to be informed, I shall make honesty, capability and fidelity, indispensable prerequisites to the bestowal of office, and absence of either of these qualities shall be deemed sufficient cause for removal.

It shall be my study to recommend such constitutional measures to Congress, as may be necessary and proper to secure encouragement and protection to the great interest of agriculture, commerce and manufactures, to improve our rivers and harbors, to provide for the speedy extinguishment of the public debt, to enforce the strict accountability on the part of all officers of the Government, and the utmost economy in all public expenditures; but it is for the wisdom of Congress itself in which all legislative powers are vested by the Constitution to regulate these and other matters of domestic policy.

I shall look with confidence to the enlightened patriotism of that body, to adopt such measures of conciliation as may harmonize conflicting interests, and tend to perpetuate that Union which should be the paramount object of our hopes and affections. On any action calculated to promote an object so near the heart of every one who truly loves his country, I will zealously unite with the co-ordinate branches of the government.

In conclusion I congratulate you my fellow citizens upon the high state of prosperity to which the goodness of Divine Providence has conducted the common country. Let us invoke a continuance of the same protecting care which has led from small beginnings to the eminence to which we have this day arrived, and let us seek to deserve that by prudence and moderation in our counsels, by such directed attempts to assuage the bitterness which too often marks differences of opinion, the promulgation and practice of just and liberal principles, and by enlarged patriotism which shall acknowledge no limits but those of our own wide republic.

Messrs. Ensign S. Fellows and Lewis Bass were then chosen Constables, by a hand vote.

On the Fifth Balloting, Messrs. William B. Duggan and Lysander Richards were elected members of the School Committee.

Pence Voters.—George Baxter, Joseph G. Brackett, and Seth Adams.
Surveyors of Land.—Seth Adams, Isaiah G. Whitton, Schuchard, Wade, Josiah Adams, Richard Newcomb, Ebenezer Bent, Joseph G. Brackett, Alden French and George Vezzie, 3d.
Surveyors of Wood and Bark.—George B. Nightingale, Seth Adams, Henry A. Gay, John A. Billings, Harvey Field, George L. Baxter, Thomas H. Plummer, James Lovell, George H. Locke, Ebenezer Adams, and Obed Allen.

Field Drivers.—Calvin W. Perry, Samuel S. Pickering, Thomas Brooks, Henry A. C. Adams, Horace Faxon, George W. Barrett, Harvey Hayden, Thomas Kannon, Joel Lucas, Thaddeus Churchill, Leonard S. Perry, Samuel Higgins and Amos A. Mears.
Overseers of the Poor and Surveyors of Highways.—George Marsh, Joseph W. Robertson and Bryant B. Newcomb.

Auditors of Accounts.—Lewis Bass, Daniel Baxter, G. H. Locke, Geo. Baxter, and Nantman B. Holmes. The Foremen of the several Engine Companies were chosen a Committee to nominate a list of Firewards from each District and report at the adjournment.

The choice of Collector and Pound Keeper was also deferred till that time.

The Auditors' Report was corrected and accepted.

The fifth and sixth articles of the warrant, relating to the sums of money to be raised for Town expenses and for Schooling were referred to Messrs. John Southern, Ebenezer Bent, William B. Duggan, George H. Locke, Jacob F. Eaton, Lysander Richards, and Nathaniel White.

Voted.—To repair the Highways and improve the Town's Land in the same manner as last year.

Voted.—To allow the Town Clerk thirty five dollars and the Town Treasurer forty dollars for their services.

Voted.—To indefinitely postpone the article authorizing the several School Districts to choose their Prudential Committees, and that they select and contract with teachers.

The Report of the School Committee was read, accepted, and ordered to be published in the Quincy Patriot. [For want of room the publication is deferred until next week.]

Voted.—To allow the Stewards of the several Engines thirty dollars each, and the members the amount of their County and Town Poll Tax.

Voted.—To grant the use of the Town Hall and Lecture Room for Temperance meetings when not previously engaged, free of all expense; also, to instruct the Selectmen to prosecute all violations of the License law that may come to their knowledge.

Voted.—That the Firewards furnish the Engine companies, on the occasion of a fire, and all that may come from other places at such a time, with hot coffee, chocolate, and other refreshments, with the exception of intoxicating liquors.

The article in relation to restraining dogs was "laid on the table," and there it rests.

Voted.—To pay the funeral expenses of the late Hon. John Q. Adams incurred by a committee of citizens, amounting to two hundred and twenty-one dollars. Yeas, 116—nays, 50.

Voted.—That an opportunity be given to all legal voters to record their names on the above matter, at any time previous to the dissolution of the meeting. [By this vote, a chance is certainly open until the first Monday in April.]

Voted.—To refer the balloting for a County Treasurer to the adjournment.

Voted.—To accept the report of the Selectmen on a road in the East District. [It appears that a part of the now travelled road to Germantown was a private way, but this vote makes it a public road.]

Voted.—To adjourn to the first Monday in April next, at one o'clock in the afternoon.

ANOTHER GREAT PICTORIAL PAPER. Wilson & Co. of New York, have issued a most magnificent pictorial Inauguration sheet. Double Brother Jonathan, in commemoration of General Taylor's taking his seat in the Presidential Chair of the Nation. It is filled with fine large and beautifully printed engravings characteristic of the great event, among which are portraits of Taylor and Fillmore the size of life. The principal picture is an exact representation of "Old Zack," delivering his Inaugural Address surrounded by the great men of both political parties. The Doleful Doings of a Disappointed Patriot in search of an office—the rich Adventures in California—the Inauguration Ball—the Battle of Buena Vista, and other subjects, are also amply illustrated with spirited and well executed engravings. The price of the sheet is twelve and a half cents only, or ten for one dollar.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT. Our thanks are due to Hon. M. P. Wilder for a copy of an interesting pamphlet containing the proceedings of the National Convention of Fruit Growers, held in the city of New York on the 15th of October, 1848.

ALL SETTLED. The postal treaty between the United States and the English government is now the law in both countries. The treaty comprises twenty-three articles. The rate of a single letter from New York to London will, in future, be twentyfour cents, made up as follows:

United States inland postage 5 cents.
Sea postage 16 cents.
British inland postage 3 cents.

Total. 24 cents

Newspapers two cents each, in advance.

STATE COUNSEL FEES. During the last four years, the State of Massachusetts has paid $6,146 to lawyers for preparing and arguing cases before the United States Supreme Court at Washington, in which the State was interested. To Daniel Webster $2,000, Rufus Choate $1800, Asahel Huntington $1056, Charles Sumner $620, George Ashman $500 and Levi Lincoln $170.

RECOVERY FROM INSANITY. A man who for forty years has been confined, as a raving maniac, in the Poor House at Newton, has been suddenly restored to his reason. He has been regarded as incurable; and for a great part of the time during his confinement, he has been so violent as to render it necessary to chain him. Now he is clothed and in his right mind—appearing like one awakened from a long sleep, and remembering distinctly events which occurred previous to the loss of his reason, but nothing that has transpired during the long years of his confinement.

CABINET APPOINTMENTS. President Taylor has selected the following gentlemen as the members of his cabinet, and they have accepted.

Secretary of State.—John M. Clayton of Delaware. He has been for several years a distinguished United States Senator.

Secretary of the Treasury.—William M. Meredith of Pennsylvania. He is an eminent lawyer, and was one of the framers of the State constitution.

Secretary of War.—George W. Crawford of Georgia. He has been Governor of the State.

Secretary of the Navy.—William B. Preston of South Carolina. He has been in Congress, and is now President of the University of the State.

Secretary of the Home Department.—Thomas Ewing of Ohio. He has been a United States Senator, and was Secretary of the Treasury under President Harrison.

Postmaster General.—Jacob Collamer of Vermont. He has been a Representative to Congress. This is the first time Vermont has been represented in the cabinet.

Attorney General.—Reverdy Johnson of Maryland. He has been several times United States Senator.

CONGRESS. The closing scenes in the Senate and in the House were distinguished by fights. The principal measures passed just at its close were acts extending the revenue laws to California, leaving that province without any civil government for another year; erecting Minnesota into a territory; providing for the issue of gold dollars and double eagles, and erecting a House Department. The law for taking the census of 1850 was also passed, as were the various Appropriation Bills.

GENERAL COURT. There has not been much business of interest transacted in either branch the past week. The Quincy Stone Bank has petitioned for a renewal of its charter.

Thomas J. Bagley of Dedham has been appointed by the Governor and Council a Justice of the Peace within and for the County of Norfolk.

The subject of granting licenses for the sale of liquor, in Boston, has been decided by the Board of Aldermen, in the negative, the Mayor voting in favor of licensing, and all of the Aldermen in opposition.

The enterprising and deserving proprietors of the New York Sun announce that they have closed negotiations for the immediate construction of new and substantial Electric Telegraph lines between New York, Boston, Washington, and all the intermediate places, designed solely for the transmission of news for that flourishing establishment.

Teams cross over from the city of Detroit (Mi.) to the Canada shore, on the ice, with safety. Such has not been the case for a number of years.

Seventy-four passenger cars were employed to convey passengers from Baltimore to Washington, on Saturday and Sunday last.

The New York Sun offers prizes amounting to two hundred and fifty dollars for the four best original local stories which may be sent in to that paper before the first of April next—one hundred dollars for the first best, seventy five dollars for the second, fifty dollars for the third, and twenty five dollars for the fourth.

Profane language is to conversation what ten inch spikes would be to veneering—splitting, shivering and defacing it. It is bad taste, offensive to a majority, and gratifying to none.

It is said that the Pennsylvania courts have decided that marriage is a civil contract, and that they have also decided that no contract made on Sunday is valid.

Inquisitive people are the funnels of conversation: they do not take in anything for their own use, but merely to pass it to another.

A New York jury have given J. G. Bennett, editor of the Herald, six cents damages against M. M. Noah, editor of the Sunday Times, for a libel concerning the black mail family.

Twenty six boxes of eggs, and thirty-three boxes of shad were received at New York by the steamer which arrived the other day from Savannah. The eggs were brought to Savannah by railroad from the interior of Georgia!

The New Season's Teas.

No. 193 Washington Street, Boston.
WE have just received from China, per ships T. W. Sears, Chicora, and Samuel Russell, our fresh supplies of BLACK TEAS, which include Ningyong, super,
Ningyong, extra fine,
Oolong, super,
Oolong, extra fine,
Orange Pekoe, super,
Souchong and Congoo.

These Teas we shall sell at 1 cent per pound profit to the trade, for cash, in lots and quantities to suit the most extensive demands. The exports from China will show a considerable falling off as compared with the exports of former years; and the new Teas coming, as they do upon a bare market, tend to keep up the prices for every description of Fancy Teas—yet we are of opinion that the prices ruling now will not be maintained for the following reason: the stock of Souchong and Congoo in this country, is large, and will check the prices of Ningyong to a certain extent, while the impending arrival of ships from Canton will act as a caution to holders who are getting more than remunerating rates.

Important to All—The present retail price at 193 Washington Street, the principal Warehouse, and Branch Store, 78 Hanover Street, for strong substantial Black Teas, is 25 cents the pound, of the true old fashioned sort. It is seven cents less than it was one year ago. From the information above given, we are of opinion that we shall be enabled to keep up the quality of our Ningyong and Oolong Teas without increasing the prices, and should any favorable turn take place in the market, all may rest assured that we shall be the first, as we have ever been, to afford them the full benefit of it, and thereby show to the country that the very highest class Teas are sold at the low rates by the China Tea Company, 193 Washington Street, and 78 Hanover Street.
Boston, March 10.

To the Travelling Public.

VISIT HEAD QUARTERS For Your Outfits.

AS many of our citizens and New Englanders in neighboring towns, are about starting for the NEW EL DORADO, OR California Gold Diggings, and having had no experience as to what they will require for convenience and comfort, or in purchasing at LOW PRICES, or, in short, in getting a Good, Suitable Outfit for a LITTLE MONEY, They should go to Head Quarters, OAK HALL, BOSTON!

Having made the Outfitting Business our study, (three-fourths of my entire force, numbering some fifty clerks, being all engaged in this new branch of our trade) and having fitted out a number of extensive companies, we are prepared to furnish patrons with a PRINTED LIST of all suitable articles required, and also information concerning the various routes to the Gold Regions. It is amusing to see OAK HALL! daily thronged with various groups—old men, young men, boys,—rich and poor,—very few admitting where they are bound, but the outfit selected from the following useful

POETRY.

THE FOOT-PRINTS.

Lines on beholding the foot-prints of a sister, long since dead, made on a pine board, when a child, now visible on the ceiling of the old kitchen where I resided when young. By W. A. Bacon.

And were the foot-prints I behold,
Made by those little feet of thine,
When thou wert young, in days of old,
My long departed Caroline?

Didst thou in childish gambols play,
Around the bench where workmen stood,
And place thy footsteps, where they stay,
Upon the white and shining wood?

Yes, yes, those tracks I know full well,
I saw thee, when thou left them there,
And faint would I the story tell,
And how thou scampered off with fear.

For that old man, who shaved the pine,
Though kind, was of a surly mood,
And much he feared that steps like thine
Would mar the beauty of his wood.

"Be off, be off," he rudely cried,
"Or else your ears I'll surely crop,
And after that my knife I've tried
I'll take a stick and make you hop."

How throng the scenes of early life
Along the path of memory back,
Since first upon the stage of strife,
In childhood's hour thou madest that track.

No blither was the lark at morn,
No merrier was the lamb at play,
No nimbler was the woodland fawn,
Than thou wert at that early day.

I see thee round that old man still,
His shavings round thy temples coil,
Thy bonnet thou wert wont to fill
With blocks,—poor childish little girl.

I see thee as the orb of day,
Was sinking in the glorious west,
I see thee still at work, at play,
Until the hour of peaceful rest.

I see thee as in beauty's prime,
With rosy cheeks upon thy face,
I see thee still in later time,
When ripen years had added grace.

I see thee as thou hadst adieu,
To one who left for foreign land,
How heaved that bosom pure and true,
How clung she to that brother's hand.

And when long years had passed away,
And that dead friend again returned,
Thy smiling face did well betray
The joy that in thy bosom burned.

In after years I saw thee laid
Upon a wretched feverish bed,
And short as was the time I staid
I mourned thee living as the dead.

For I did mark the hectic flush,
The sunken eye, the languid form,
The marble brow, consumption's blush,
The sure portent of coming storm.

It came, it burst upon thy head,
That awful storm that none can brave,
With angry frown and dreadful tread,
Death called her to an early grave.

Yet in that last, that trying hour,
Patient and calm, she boldly stood,
Submitting to death's conquering power,
See yielded up her soul to God.

Years have rolled round, but still the pine
Returns the mark where once she trod,
That sister dear, kind Caroline,
Who slumbers now beneath the sod.
Detroit, Feb. 7, 1849.

MARRIAGE.

There's a bliss beyond all that the minstrel has told,
When two that are linked in one heavenly tie,
With hearts never changing and brow never cold,
Love on through all ills, and love on till they die.

One hour of a passion so sacred, is worth
Whole ages of heartless and wandering bliss;
And oh, if there be an elysium on earth,
It is this—it is this—it is this.

ANECDOTES.

A western judge, having sentenced a fellow to be hanged, added the usual expression of "May the Lord have mercy on your soul." "Amen," says the judge. "Amen, Judge!" and may the Lord eternally curse or mend your old soul, for I never knew anybody to live long after you had prayed for them!

A fellow who desired to make love to a young girl, went to ask her father's permission. "You have a daughter," said he, "whose fair fame enchants me." "She is as Heaven made her," replied the fathered father. "What does the girl go naked?" enquired the suitor.

"Well Pat, Jim didn't quite kill you with that brickbat, did he?"
"No; but I wish he had."
"What for?"
"So I could see him hung, the villain."

In St. Giles's, the following notice was lately posted in the window of a lodging house—Hay, sack and flour to let, chickens and eggs. The purport of the notice was, "A second floor to let, kitchen and garret."

"Conscience!" said Mrs. Hopkins, indignantly, "do you suppose nobody has got any conscience but yourself? My conscience is as good as yours—ay, and better too—for it has never been used in the course of my life—while yours must be nearly worn out!"

Secretary—SAMUEL H. JENKS.
Consulting Physicians—D. Humphrey Storer, M. D., 14 Winter St.; Augustus A. Gould, M. D., 15 West St.

Superintendent of Agencies—Simeon P. Taylor.

THIS Institution insures both males and females against disease or accident, according to the rates specified in their tables. The former, by depositing a given sum yearly, may insure a return of four-fifths of that deposit, for each and every week within that year, during which he may be so disabled by illness as to be prevented from pursuing his usual occupation,—such allowance not to exceed four hundred dollars in any one year. Females, insured against all maladies common to both sexes, are entitled to return allowances equal to three-fourths of their yearly payments, for every week's sickness. Thus, an investment of $5 a year by the former, or of $3 33 by the latter, will, if deprived of health, secure to the party insured, a repayment of $4 per week.

An advance payment of not less than one dollar will be required of each applicant at the time of making the proposal; which sum, in case of rejection, will be refunded, or allowed in case of acceptance. The applicant is thereby insured, if the proposal be approved, for the term of thirty days, and no longer, unless the policy be taken, and the balance of premium paid within that time.

Persons insured by this Company become members thereof, so far as to entitle them to a proportion of all dividends or profits, in the ratio of the respective premiums, and according to the duration of their policies.

The renewal of any policy may be secured, on notice given to the Secretary within three months of its expiration, and on furnishing proof of sound health at the date of such notice.

For rates of insurance and other information, apply to the Agents in this town.

Encourage your Own.

To the People of Quincy—
THE following is a well known motto, and strictly true!

"That County or Town that manufactures the most liberal encouragement to its own manufactures of every kind is well known to thrive, and increase in wealth and population."

There are a few interesting facts, of which we wish to remind you, and which we are inclined to think have slipped from the memory of some, and which it will be for your advantage as well as ours to remember.

1st. That at the QUINCY BOOKSTORE you will find all the
in use in this and the neighboring towns.

2d. That at the same place you will find every kind of
Blank Account Book,
RECORD or MEMORANDUM BOOK.

3d. That there you will find a great assortment of Miscellaneous, Juvenile and Toy Books.

4th. That there you will find all kinds of
STATIONERY.

5th. That there you will find an innumerable variety of
FANCY GOODS.

6th. That all the above will be sold at the very Lowest Market Prices.

7th. That we are entirely disinterested when we say that you will be much better satisfied with yourselves and your bargains if you trade at home, in preference to "out of town."

8th. That there you will find a GOOD LIBRARY where you can procure reading on reasonable terms.

9th. That the Proprietors are agents for all the popular MAGAZINES, receiving the subscriptions themselves and furnishing the numbers on their own responsibility, free of any expense. Many have forgotten this of late, preferring to subscribe of some traveling agent, to one in their own town.

10th. That they RE-BIND old Books, Pamphlets, Periodicals, Music, etc., "as cheap as they can afford to and as quick as anybody."

These things we wish to call to your memory, because while we have been moving on in a quiet kind of way, you seem partly to have forgotten the old place, thinking perhaps that we did not keep up with the times in the variety of our goods and also in prices. Our rule, like that of many others, is, "quick sales and small profits," therefore call in and we will supply you most satisfactorily.

MISCELLANY.

MISTAKES OF THE RICH.

The Egyptian King, who, swollen with grandeur, ordered a colossal staircase built to his new palace, discovered to his chagrin, when it was completed, that he required a ladder to get from one step to the other. He had forgotten that a King's legs, after all, were as short as a beggar's. Aggrandize as we may, the limits of our senses check us miserably at every moment. You call yourself proprietor! Houses and pictures, unlike you, and after taking your will of them for a short time you are carried out of your own door, feet foremost, never again to enter it. "Proprietors" you were, perhaps, of farms and castles, estates and mountains—but now you own nothing but a hole in the ground six feet by two!

The artist who visits your gallery while you live and own it, enjoys it more than you. You are rich enough to dine twenty-four times a day, but you must eat sparingly to enjoy dining even once. Your cellar is full of exquisite wines, but you can only drink one bottle yourself, and, to help you use your store, you are obliged to call around you friends, relatives, parasites—a little world who live upon your substance, and who, instead of gratitude, are likely to make you a return in envy. You have thirty horses in your stable; you cannot mount but one—ride after but two to four. To be truly rich, one should have stomachs in proportion to the number of dinners he could afford. Senses excluded, according to stock in bank, sexuple vigor and sensibility to concentrate and return all the love he could prostitute with gifts. At the close of his life the richest man has hardly spent more upon his own enjoyment than the poor man. He has eaten twice a day, slept in a bed alone or with one wife, and the poor man can do as much and the proprietor scarcely more.

Rothschild is forced to content himself with the same sky as the poor newspaper writer and the great banker cannot order a private sunset nor add one ray to the magnificence of the night. The same air swells all lungs. The same kind of blood fills all veins. Each one possesses, really only his own thoughts and his own senses. Soul and body—these are all the property which a man completely owns.

All that is valuable in this world is to be had for nothing. Genius, beauty and love, are not bought and sold. You may buy a rich bracelet, but not a well turned arm on which to wear it—a pearl necklace, but not a pearly throat with which it shall vie. The richest banker on earth would vainly offer his fortune to be able to write a verse like Byron. One comes into the world naked. The difference in the fineness of a bit of linen for a shroud is not much. Man is compelled nightly to relapse into the nothingness of sleep, to get strength to commence life again on the morrow.

In this life, so partaken by annihilation, what is there that is real? Is it our sleeping or our waking—our dreaming or our thought? Do we arise (to the more valuable life) when we go to bed, or go to bed when we arise? No!—man is no proprietor! Or he owns but the breath as it traverses his lips, and the idea as it flits across his mind. And even the idea often belongs to another.—Home Journal.

GEORGE WASHINGTON.

No matter what may be the birth-place of such a man as Washington. No climate can claim, no country can appropriate him—the boon of Providence to the human race—his fame is eternity, and his residence creation. Though it was the defeat of our arms, and the disgrace of our policy, we almost bless the convulsion in which he had his origin—if the heavens thundered and the earth rocked, yet, when the storm passed, how pure was the climate that it cleared—how bright in the brow of the firmament was the planet it revealed to us! In the production of Washington, it does really appear as if nature was endeavoring to improve upon herself, and that all studies of the ancient world were but so many studies preparatory to the patriot of the new. As a General, he marshalled the peasant into a veteran, and supplied by discipline the absence of experience. As a statesman, he enlarged the policy of the cabinet into the most comprehensive system of general advantage; and such was the wisdom of his views, and the philosophy of his councils that to the soldier and the statesman he almost added the character of the sage. A conqueror, he was untainted with the crime of blood—a revolutionist, he was free from any stain of treason, for aggression commenced the contest, and a country called him to command—liberty unshed his sword—necessity stained—victory returned it. If he had paused here, history might doubt what station to assign him; whether at the head of her citizens or her soldiers—her heroes or her patriots. But the glorious act crowned his career, and banished hesitation. Who, like Washington, after having freed a country resigned her crown, and retired to a cottage rather than remain in a capital? Immortal man! He took from the battle its crime, and from the conquest its chains—he left the victorious glory of his self-denial, and turned upon the vanquished only the retribution of his mercy. Happy, proud America! The lightning of Heaven could not resist your sage—the temptations of earth could not corrupt your soldier—English paper.

FAMILY SECRETS.

In a neighboring State, there lived a man named Isaac Dobson, and his wife who were both firm believers in the prophecy of Miller; and not doubting for a moment the correctness of their prophet's calculations, they set about making active preparations for the eventful day that was to terminate the existence of all sub-lunary things.

After having "set their house in order," the following conversation took place:

Husband—My dear wife, I believe I have made every preparation for tomorrow. I have forgiven all my enemies, and prayed for the forgiveness of all my sins, and I feel perfectly calm and resigned.

Wife—Well, husband, I believe I am ready for the sound of the trumpet.

Husband—I am rejoiced to hear it. But my dear wife, I have no doubt there are many little domestic secrets which we have kept hidden from each other, which, had they been known at the time of their occurrence, might have produced unpleasant feelings, but as we have but one day more to live, let us unbosom ourselves to each other.

Wife—Well, husband, you are right; there are some little things that I never told you, and which I intended should remain between me and my God; but as we have but one day left, I reckon it's right to make a clean breast to each other. I am ready—you begin, husband.

Husband—No, dear, you begin.

Wife—No, husband, you begin—I can't.

Husband—No; you know, my love, Paul says husbands have a right to command their wives. It is your duty as a Christian woman to obey your husband, and the father of your children. So begin, love.

Wife—In the sight of God, I reckon it's right; so I will tell you dear husband, our eldest son, William, is not your child.

Husband—Great God! Mary! I never dreamed of your being untrue to me! Is that so?

Wife (in tears)—Yes, God forgive me, it is true. I know that I did very wrong, but am sorry for it; but in an evil hour I fell, and there's no help for it now.

Husband—William not mine! whose child is he?

Wife—He's Mr. Graham's, the Constable.

The Lord be near your poor wife!

Husband—So William ain't my child! Go on.

Wife—Well, our daughter Mary, named after me, ain't yours neither.

Husband—Salvation! Talk on, Mary—come right out. Who's Mary's father?

Wife—Mr. Grider, the man that built the meeting house, and went into the lower country.

Husband (resignedly)—Well, as there is but one day more, I'll bear it; so, go on, if you have anything else.

Wife—Well, there's our youngest—

Husband—I suppose Jenny ain't mine!

Wife—No, dear husband, Jenny, that we both love so well, ain't your'n neither.

Husband—Merciful Lord! is that so? In the name of the Savior, whose is he?

Wife—He is the one-eyed shoemaker's that lives at the forks of the road.

Husband—Well, by—, Gabriel, blow your horn! I WANT TO GO NOW!

HUGE INDIVIDUALITIES.

The giant exhibited in Rouen, in 1745, measured over eighteen feet.

Gorapius saw a girl, who was ten feet high.

The body of Grestus was eleven feet and a half high!

The giant Galbara, brought from Arabia to Rome, under Claudius Caesar, was near ten feet.

Funman, who lived in the time of Eugene II., measured eleven and a half feet.

The Chevalier Scrog, in his voyage to the peaks of the Teneriffe found in one of the caverns of that mountain the head of Gnanoe which had eighty teeth, and it was supposed that his body was not less than fifteen feet long.

The giant Ferragus, slain by Arlando, nephew to Charlemagne, was eighteen feet high!

In 1614, near St. Germain, was found the tomb of giant Isoret, who was twenty feet high.

In 1590 near Rouen, was found a skeleton whose skull held a bushel of corn, and whose body must have been eighteen feet long.

Platerus saw at Lucerne, the human bones of a subject, nineteen feet long.

The giant Buart was twenty two and a half feet high; his bones were found in 1705, near the banks of the river Modori.

In 1513, near a castle in Dauphine, a tomb was found thirty feet long, twelve wide, and eight high, on which was cut on a gray stone the words, "Keutolochus Rex." The skeleton was found entire twenty and a half feet long and ten feet across the shoulders, and five feet deep from the breast bone to the back.

Near Mazarine, in Sicily, in 1516, was found the skeleton of a giant thirty feet high! His head was the size of a hog's head, and each of his teeth weighed five ounces.

Near Palermo, in Sicily, in 1518, was found the skeleton of a giant thirty feet long, and another thirty three feet high, in 1550.

MAIDEN SPEECHES.

The renowned and eloquent Thomas Corwin of Ohio, was a member of the United States House of Representatives four whole years, before he opened his mouth. He was exceedingly diffident, and thought he could not "speak acceptably." At last, the "Wagon Boy" got the floor accidentally and surprised the House, himself, and the world, with his eloquence. He is certainly the most eloquent man of the age.

The Hon. Abbott Lawrence of Boston, was a member of the House an entire year, before he spoke. He used to say, "I talk well enough, I suppose, in my plain, mercantile way, to make myself acceptable to plain ordinary men; but as for my making a speech to Congress, why the very idea is preposterous!" At last Mr. Lawrence was drawn to the floor by the force of circumstances, and made a speech that was not excelled by any made that session in Congress.

Edward Ramsey of Kentucky, was one of the most eloquent men his state ever produced. He entered Congress in 1837, and quit in disgust in 1839. The session closed on the fourth of March of that year, and Mr. Ramsey was silent till within a very few days of its end. He made up his mind to speak, on a bill providing for a gold medal for the heirs of the late James Ramsey, the original inventor of the steamboat. He addressed the House, and his eloquence electrified and amazed it. Never did man produce a more decided and wonderful effect. He was congratulated by all the stagers from J. Q. Adams downward. His effort was no effort at all; but he returned to his home at the end of the session, to take to his couch and lie down and die.

A CHILD'S FAITH.

A beloved minister of the gospel was one day speaking of that active, living faith, which should at all times cheer the sincere follower of Jesus, and related to me a beautiful illustration that had just occurred in his family.

He had gone into a cellar which in winter was quite dark, and entered by a trap-door. A little daughter only three years old was trying to find him, and came to the trap-door, but on looking down, all was dark, and she called—

"Are you down cellar, papa?"

"Yes; would you like to come, Mary?"

"I wish I could; I can't come down, papa."

"Well, my daughter, I am right below you, and I can see you, though you cannot see me, and if you will drop yourself, I will catch you."

"Oh, I shall fall; I can't see you, papa."

"I know it," he answered, "but I am really here, and you shall not fall and hurt yourself. If you will jump, I will catch you safely."

Little Mary strained her eye to the utmost; but could catch no glimpse of her father. She hesitated, then advanced a little, then summoning all her resolution, she threw herself forward, and was received safely in her father's arms. A few days after she discovered the cellar door open, and supposing her father to be there, she called:

"Shall I come again, papa?"

"Yes, my dear in a minute," he replied, and had just time to reach his arms towards her, when in her childish glee, she fell shouting into his arms, and clasping his neck, said:

"I knew, dear papa, I should not fall."

POLISH FOR BRASS AND SILVER. Ladies are very fond of keeping the door knobs, spoons, plates, &c., in brilliant order. Now, if, instead of water and chalk and such preparations, ladies will use camphine and rotten stone, a far brighter, quicker, and more durable polish can be obtained than in any other way. Camphine is the article used for producing the exquisite polish of daguerreotype plates; and nothing has yet been found to equal it.

ERRING BROTHER. Would you throw a brickbat at a friend who had fallen over-board? Would you gather stones and pile them on a bank that had fallen on a brother? Would you throw a keg of powder to a friend who had fallen in the fire? Then why heap words of reproach upon him who has erred from duty? Why denounce him and spurn him? Can you be a stranger to the human heart—you who have so often fallen?

SCHOOL COMMITTEE'S REPORT.

The School Committee of Quincy on surrendering to their fellow citizens the important trust committed to their charge, herewith present to the Town their annual Report for the year ending February, 1849.

In the discharge of their duties, the Committee have visited and examined all the schools, as required by law, and they now proceed to lay before you an impartial statement of their condition and improvement.

The Grammar Schools.

The Grammar Schools, at the last examination, were found in a satisfactory condition. That in the South District is well conducted, and falls not behind any other school in town. The present teacher has been very successful, and is, we believe, very thorough in the course of instruction which he pursues. The exercises in English Grammar, Arithmetic, and Geography, have not been surpassed in any school that we have examined.

The Grammar School in the Centre District has also sustained itself well the past year. The faithful and untiring efforts of the teacher were fully evinced in the number as well as in the general accuracy of the recitations at the last examination. This school exhibited some very fine specimens of penmanship, map-drawing, and composition. It appears also to understand well the practical application of the principles contained in the various branches there taught.

The Grammar School in the Quincy Point District has fully sustained its former reputation. Some of the pupils have made very respectable progress the past year in Algebra, History, and Composition. The effect of an intermediate school during the winter season would be very favorable upon the character of this school, which is much crowded with scholars whose progress and attainments present a great degree of inequality. The present teacher has, however, done much for the improvement of this school, and his faithful efforts continue to merit the approbation of the Committee. The exercises at the last examination evinced a degree of diligence and improvement which was, we believe, satisfactory to all present.

The Grammar School in the West District, at the first and second examinations, did not appear so well as it had in former years. It was not well attended, and presented an appearance of great dullness and want of interest in the exercises in which the school was examined. But at the last examination it gave evidence of improvement very gratifying to the Committee. And they believe that the present teacher has labored as faithfully, if not as successfully as those in the other schools. The examination of this school in Arithmetic was very thorough and very satisfactory.

The school in the North District, which embraces children from four to sixteen years of age, has been unfortunate for two years past in changing teachers. A female teacher was employed at the commencement of the last year, who, though apparently well qualified, did not succeed well in the school, and resigned her place about the first of January. The present teacher has therefore been in the school but a few weeks. He has, however, done much for its improvement in a short time; and he gave the Committee a very gratifying examination. The order was remarkably good, and the relation between the teacher and his pupils was evidently what it should be.

The school in the East District, is a similar school to that in the North District; and during the summer term was in like unfortunate circumstances with an unsuccessful teacher. The present teacher has during the winter term succeeded in effecting an entire change in the character of this school. The contrast between its present and former appearance is very striking, and the improvement so strongly marked as not to be mistaken. In some of our schools, where every thing has looked well through the year, improvement is not so readily observed; but here it could not be overlooked. This improvement for the last three months must be very gratifying to the teacher, whose management and instruction entitle him to great credit.

The Intermediate Schools.

There are but three schools of this grade in town. That in the South District is the best. The present teacher entered upon her labors in the school without any former experience in the work, and has succeeded to the entire satisfaction of the Committee. A beginning so successful, we think, should encourage her to persevere. The order of the school, and the exercises in Reading, Writing, Arithmetic, and Geography, at the closing examination were much commended.

The Intermediate School in the Centre District, at the closing examination, did not exhibit the gratifying appearance which it has formerly done under the management of its present teacher. It contains some good scholars, but as a whole the appearance of the school did not compare favorably with the condition in which the Committee found it during the summer term.

The Intermediate School in the West District has been backward during the year. Some improvement was exhibited at the last examination, but not that degree of advancement which we desired to see. The Committee cannot report this school in a very promising condition.

The Primary Schools.

There are four Primary Schools in this town, two of which are in a fine state of progress. That in the South District is well conducted and going on with a sure, steady step in the right direction. A good foundation for scholarship is here laid in the first elements of learning. And the great success of the present teacher, who has continued at her post year after year, cannot fail to be appreciated by the inhabitants of the District. The recitations at the last examination were all good.

The Primary School in the Quincy Point District, continues to maintain the high character and reputation which it had the last year. Marks of improvement were visible in all the exercises at the closing examination. This school has been very regularly attended by the pupils, and devotedly served by the teacher, whose happy method of imparting her instructions is visible in their improvement.

The Primary School in the Centre District has advanced but little during the year, and the present winter does not appear so well as it has formerly; partly owing to the circumstance of several of the most advanced pupils having lately left the school.

The Primary School in the West District is in a very low condition, and needs a great deal of fostering care and attention to enable it to take more equal rank among the Primary Schools of this town. With the exception of one or two pupils, it was difficult for the Committee to mark any improvement for the year. The school was closed in the month of January. The Committee hope that it will be reopened under auspices more favorable for its future success.

In thus briefly laying before the town the condition of our schools, the Committee have endeavored to avoid all exaggeration, and to give to each the commendation which it has justly merited. We would not willingly do injustice to any of our teachers, all of whom we highly respect. But we have felt it to be our duty thus to show the relative rank and standing of the schools. The present teachers have, with a few exceptions, been successful, and they have labored for the moral, as well as mental, culture of those intrusted to their charge. We have noticed with pleasure their efforts to correct in their pupils the habit of evil speech, which prevails to a fearful extent among the youth of this town. These efforts have been attended with a good degree of success, especially where the relation between the teacher and pupils has been (as it always should be) one of mutual confidence. The Committee have reason to believe, that the conduct of the pupils has been better the past year, than in former years. Very few cases of disobedience or misdemeanor have come to their knowledge. In some of the schools a very satisfactory report on this subject was given in by the teachers.

The whole number of children in this town between four and sixteen years of age, was ascertained by the census taken last May to be 1135. The number in all the public schools is 1082. There are several private schools in town where some between the ages of four and sixteen are in attendance. A few in each District below and above those ages are in attendance at the public schools. Thus it appears that there are but few children in this town, who do not share, during a part of the year at least, the advantages of education.

Of the regularity of their attendance, the Committee regret that they cannot speak in any flattering terms. The greatest average attendance during the past year has been found in the Quincy Point and East Districts. In all the other Districts it has fallen far below what it should have been. The inconsideration or indifference of some parents on this subject is truly astonishing. Nor can they be aware of the unspeakable mischiefs of absence and tardiness in the school, where, of necessity, it interrupts the classes and destroys all uniformity of movement. At the same time the term of the school is wasting away, and their children are deriving no benefit from it. The irregular attendance of such children may be always determined by their slow progress and being behind their respective classes. For this the teacher is often unjustly blamed. Let the conduct of parents become right in relation to this matter, and we shall soon have fewer complaints against teachers, and better schools.

During the past year, it appears that there has been placed to the credit of the school department the following sums, viz:

The Town's Appropriation,	$3400.00
Income of the Coddington Fund,	75.00
Income of the State School Fund,	174.20

3649.20

Comparing this with former years, it will be seen that the town has gradually increased the appropriation for schools with the growing numbers of our children. We have now thirteen public schools, some of them very large, which should be supported through the year. But the expense of doing this, has the past year exceeded the appropriation, and several of the School Districts are driven to the alternative of closing their schools, or of involving themselves in debt, to continue them.

Under these circumstances the Committee would recommend a small addition to last year's appropriation, say $350.00. They are not in favor of increasing unnecessarily the expenses of the town, knowing its present liabilities and the desire of many of our citizens to have the expenses reduced. But if a reduction of expense is called for let it fall somewhere else, and let there be no retrenchment in the expenses of the school department. Good teachers are in demand and can obtain high salaries. A single glance at the condition of

Overseers of the Poor—Samuel Tolman, E. T. Fogg, Loring Jacobs, Samuel A. Turner, Abiel Turner.

GENERAL COURT. The Hingham Bank, and the Union Bank of Weymouth and Braintree, have severally petitioned for a renewal of their charters. The Committee on the Militia have reported that there is no money in the Treasury appropriated to militia bounties, that no branch of education is so deplorably deficient as that of the military, and that it is expedient to keep up a military force in the State.

The petition of Nahum Stetson and others has been presented for further legislation concerning pilotage, and for the appointment of a branch pilot for the harbors of Quincy, Weymouth and Hingham.

The petition has been received of Hannah Pierce and others, women of Weymouth, for secession from the Union.

IMPORTANT WILL CASE. At the recent term of the Supreme Court of this State, held at Dedham, the case on the will of Miss Elizabeth Glover, of this town, has been decided. From the Boston Herald we glean the following statement:—

It will be remembered that Captain Russell Glover died in New York in 1840, leaving property amounting to more than two hundred thousand dollars, to Elizabeth Glover, Ezra Glover, Stephen Glover, and the heirs of Mrs. M. Spurr, each one quarter of this large estate. In 1847, Elizabeth Glover died at the advanced age of 86 years. In 1843, four years previous to her death, she made her will in favor of Dr. Lewis J. Glover, of Boston, and named him as the executor of the same. Immediately after her death it was ascertained that, previous to her making her will, she had disposed, by deed or otherwise, of nearly all her property, and there was but a small amount remaining to be divided.

Stephen E. Glover, one of the heirs at law, brings this action vs. Lewis J. Glover, executor and legatee, that the will be set aside and that the said Lewis J. disclose the property of Elizabeth Glover, nearly all of which it was supposed he was in possession of. The appellant, Stephen E. Glover, avers that Elizabeth, at the time of making her will and for a long time before, was not of "sound and disposing mind and memory," and was not therefore capable of making her will, and deeding and disposing of her property, or managing the same. Some five or six witnesses testified in favor of this side of the case; some of whom swore positively and remembered strange things. On the other side, the appellee, Doctor Glover, produced the will and the witnesses, three in number, each of which swore that Elizabeth Glover, at the time of making her will was of sound mind, and quite competent to make a will, and to transact business. The property, left by Russell Glover, consisting of bank stocks, personal property, and two large ships each of about eight or nine hundred tons. At the time of the death of Russell Glover, and for two years afterwards, freights were high and the parties in interest concluded to sell the ships on joint account, and Stephen E. Glover, of New York, the appellant in this case, was the managing owner or agent for said ships for about two years, and it was proved that he managed them successfully. About this time some division of the property in the vessels was made and others had the control of them; about this time, one of the ships was unfortunate and finally sold; and about three years afterwards, the other ship was wrecked on Key West, afterwards repaired, taken to New Orleans and sold at auction. Still after the loss of these ships, both of which were insured, a large amount of property yet remained, and hence this suit. But the appellee, in addition to the subscribers to the will, produced a large number of witnesses from among the neighbors of Elizabeth Glover, who had known her for the last twenty years, each of which testified that she was of sound mind, and a woman of more than common powers of mind. After the examination of some ten witnesses on this side, the counsel for the appellant, finding it impossible to sustain the allegation, concluded to withdraw the matter, and the jury, under instruction from the court, gave a verdict in favor of the appellee, Dr. L. J. Glover, and confirming to him the property.

HENRY CLAY ON EMANCIPATION. A letter from Hon. Henry Clay to Richard Pindell has been published on the subject of the emancipation of the slaves of Kentucky. The plan he suggests, proposes the annual transportation of all slaves born after a specified day, upon their arrival at the prescribed age, to the Colony which may be selected for their destination, and that this process of transportation is to be continued until the separation of the two races is effected. Similar views were expressed by this distinguished statesman as far back as 1790, upon the occasion of the formation of the present constitution of Kentucky. He is, also, of opinion that the immediate liberation of all the slaves in the state, comprehending both sexes and all ages, would lead to the most frightful and fatal consequences. He thinks that a period should be fixed when all born after it should be free at a specified age, all born before it remaining slaves for life. That period he would suggest should be 1855 or even 1860.

THE OMNIBUS CASE. The decision of the Supreme Judicial Court has been given, in the case of the City of Boston vs. Horace King of Roxbury, involving the right of the latter to drive his vehicles through Washington Street. The Court decide that the city authorities have the right to prescribe the routes, stands, etc, for the omnibus; but that they have no right to demand money for a license from an inhabitant from another town, although such inhabitant must conform to the city resolutions relative to routes, stands, etc.

FAST DAY. Thursday, the twelfth day of April, has been appointed, by the Executive authority of this Commonwealth, as the day of public Fasting, Humiliation and Prayer.

NEW TAILORING SHOP. It will be noticed by our advertising columns, that Mr. John A. Holden has commenced the clothing and tailoring business in this town. He has worked in this place several years as a journeyman, and we believe in that capacity gave satisfaction. As he has now entered the list of competitors for public patronage, he will doubtless devote his whole time and abilities to suit the wants of customers; and from his taste, urbanity and sobriety, patrons may rest assured that their orders will be executed in fashionable style and with promptness.

BLACKING. We have tried Stockbridge & Richards's Croton Oil Paste Blacking and found it worthy of notice. It imparts a shining lustre to the boots as well as softens the leather. Besides, the materials of which it is composed, unlike blacking of most other manufacturers, does not injure but benefits; therefore, all who use such an article should purchase this kind of blacking of Briesler & Co., who are the agents for this town. See advertisement.

WONDERFUL INVENTION. The projectors of an aerial contrivance have advertised to leave soon for California and expect to arrive there in five days. This air-ship, about three hundred feet long, is calculated to carry a good number of passengers besides freight for fifty dollars a piece. The winds, it is said, will not much impede its progress; and it is thought to be safe.

NEW HAMPSHIRE. The radical democrats have elected their Governor, and chosen a majority of the Legislature, at the recent State election in New Hampshire. The delegation in Congress will remain unchanged—two democrats, one whig, and one free soil.

CURIOUS CIRCUMSTANCE. We see it stated that Mr. C. Stetson, of South Scituate, a young man recently married, and who had been missing for two days, has been found hidden amongst a quantity of old oakum, in a loft at the ship yard in that place. He was clothed in a cloak and India rubbers, but was very cold and weak. He is said to be an industrious and worthy man, owns a comfortable amount of property, and it is difficult to attribute his singularity to any but physical causes.

THE NEW PROVISION STORE. The Messrs. Mardens, to whom we directed attention a short time since, seem determined to keep a first-rate place in their line of business. They have recently added, besides their excellent assortment of meats and variety of vegetables, the nice preparations of W. K. Lewis & Sons, of Boston, such as pickled cucumbers, horse radish, and other preparations. To judge of their intentions, a call will be your best evidence.

The Supreme Court of the United States have adopted a rule limiting the arguments of counsel to two hours. The rule goes into effect at the next term.

Attention is claimed in Wisconsin for roads formed of charcoal, which are asserted to be more durable and costing two-thirds less than plank roads. The five million Treasury Note Bill, in the hurry of business between the two Houses of Congress, was lost; and consequently, the Government is left without resources, except the ordinary revenue, and the balance of the last loan, until December next.

Oysters, which have been selling at three dollars a gallon, in Boston, can now be obtained at sixty cents. This fluctuation can be accounted for in the fact that sixteen vessels, loaded with oysters, arrived at Boston, on Tuesday last, from Tangier, Virginia.

A servant girl, in Boston, was recently found dead in her bed. She was lying with her handkerchief, impregnated with chloroform, pressed against her mouth and nostrils; and a bottle partially filled with the drug, was found in her bed. Physicians were called who made a post mortem examination, and their opinion was, that a free use of chloroform had caused congestion of the brain and terminated her life.

Among the papers of Gen. George Washington which Congress has voted to purchase, is a private diary of twenty-six volumes.

The New Orleans Delta gives an account of a dreadful murder perpetrated by Capt. Joseph Bradley, of the schooner Friendship, on his paramour, Fanny Daley, a native of St. Louis. He gave her five stabs in the throat, two of them mortal wounds, and then cut his own throat. He is not expected to recover. He leaves a wife and family in Massachusetts.

The town of Blackstone, (Mass.) with three thousand population has voted a school tax of two thousand five hundred dollars.

The Hon. W. B. Preston, the present Secretary of the Navy, is a grandson of Patrick Henry.

The new fire bell on the City Hall at New York weighs ten thousand pounds, and is one of the largest, if not the largest, in the United States.

The Banks in Boston are now opened at nine o'clock in the morning.

One of the last acts of the late Postmaster General was the appointment of Mrs. Maria J. Hornbeck to be Postmistress of Allentown, (Pa.)

NOTICES.

WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY IN THE OLD DOMINION.

We extract an article from the New Era, published at Portsmouth, Virginia, and edited by A. E. Nims, Esq. He speaks of himself, and here is the extract—(Dec. 21, 1846)

"We have been, for some days, suffering under severe inflammation of the lungs, produced by cold, and irritated by speaking in public, so that throughout the night, Sunday, Monday, till Tuesday, the symptoms of the disease seemed to increase, and the suffering was intense, without the least appetite for food. The cough was dry and hard, causing the most acute pains in the head and back. We had fairly given up all hope of relief, when we thought of this Balsam, and we sent round to our friend Hemish, the agent, for a bottle. We took the first dose according to the directions, and almost instantly felt a glow of healthy warmth through the system—this was two o'clock at five, we took another dose, at nine another, and we soon after detected a perceptible relief in the frequency of the spasms and violent pains that had before attended them. At three in the morning we took another dose, and the phlegm, though tough, yellow and ropy, was ejected from the lungs with comparative ease. We feel grateful for the relief afforded, and recommended a trial of it by all who are suffering as we suffered. We have deemed it due to the medicine and to humanity, to give this unsought testimony to the virtues of the Balsam, in our case."

COSTIVENESS Is often brought on by want of exercise, close confinement to business, etc. BROWN'S SARSAPARILLA and TOMATO BITTERS will give a tone and activity to the stomach and bowels, increase the circulation, and operate as a mild cathartic, and are not liable to leave the patient (as many medicines do after taking) more costive than he was before they were given. By using them a short time, they will be satisfactory of the effect. It is almost immediately felt. It purifies and nourishes the whole debilitated system. ONE TRIAL will satisfy the most prejudiced mind.

We saw from experience of hundreds. For sale in Quincy by Mrs. E. HAYDEN and CHARLES CLAPP; Braintree, Oliver Perkins; South Braintree, J. Stoddard & Co. Sold also by agents generally. 2w Feb. 17.

A sure cure for Dyspepsia and Costiveness. HARRISON'S PERISTALTICS have had 12 years' trial by the Medical faculty and the public generally. This medicine is in Lozenges, pleasant to the taste, and may be given to children. The Peristaltics are gently laxative, and by their tonic qualities improve the digestive organs and invigorate the whole system. They cure Costiveness, Headache, Dizziness, Sleeplessness, Jaundice, Oppression after Eating, Liver Complaint, Diarrhoea, Piles, Dropsy, Debility, Rheumatism, Weak Stomach, Heartburn, Palpitation, Faintness, Pains in the Bones, Sciatica, Tic Douloureux, Worms, etc., etc.

These Lozenges are excellent in all Nervous complaints and Dyspeptic symptoms. Female Suppression and Irregularities, especially in the young. This medicine contains no preparation of Mercury whatever, and no ingredient which may not safely be given to the most delicate female and under any circumstances.

This preparation is also put up in bottles for seafaring persons, who should always have a supply. An occasional use of the Peristaltics prevents Fevers, Bilious complaints, and chronic or East India Diarrhoea. They are admirably adapted to the complaints incident to the coast of Africa, Sumatra, West Indies and South America.

These Lozenges are recommended by some of the best Physicians in Boston, who use them in their families and general practice. All affected with oppression after eating, or rising of food will find great relief. They are the best medicine for children known. For sale in Quincy by Mrs. E. HAYDEN, Seth W. Fowle, 138 Washington street, Boston, General Agent. 2w Dec. 16.

our schools will show the importance of having such and such only employed. To have good schools we must have good teachers. Let us secure this blessing to our children, and reduce our expenses in matters of less importance. We cannot yet offer to strangers who might wish to reside among us, equal advantages for education with some of our neighboring towns. Until we can do this, we cannot hold out a sufficient inducement for people to settle here.

To improve the condition of our schools, the Committee would further recommend, a change in our present school system.

By a Statute of this Commonwealth it is provided that the School Committees shall select and contract with the teachers for the town and district schools, unless the town shall otherwise determine. The Committee are unanimously of opinion that this power of selecting and contracting with the teachers of all the schools, should be invested in the School Committee, believing it would be more efficient, harmonious, and beneficial than by the present system. The old practice of selecting and contracting with the teachers by Prudential Committees, has been abolished for some years past in the adjoining towns of Dorchester, Milton, and some others in the State, with the most satisfactory results. School government to be efficient and salutary, must be decisive and direct. The duty of contracting with the teachers, and adjudicating as to moral character and fitness should devolve on one Committee only. The chances would be decidedly in favor of securing the services of better teachers, and on more advantageous terms by a School Committee of five or seven chosen by the town at large; who as a natural inference, are supposed to be more disinterested in a local point of view, than by the nominating system of the Prudential Committees of the several School Districts, who, we believe, too often select from favoritism rather than a regard to fitness. The Hon. Horace Mann, in his eighth annual Report as Secretary of the Board of Education, in speaking of the school district organization, says, "I consider this beyond comparison the most pernicious law ever passed in this Commonwealth on the subject of schools. Other things being equal, or making due allowance for inequality in other things, the schools are now invariably best in those towns which are not divided into School Districts, but in which the school system is administered by the town in its corporate capacity." The Committee earnestly invite the friends of education in this town to consider the importance of this subject, believing as they do that our schools cannot advance beyond their present standing under the old system.

With these statements and recommendations the Committee close their report, trusting that the great interest of education will be well sustained among us through the coming year.

Respectfully submitted,
J. T. BURRILL,
WILLIAM B. DUGGAN,
WILLIAM S. PATTEE,
JONATHAN BAXTER,
WILLIAM D. GRAY.

BIRDS. It is proved that a pair of sparrows, during the time they have their young to feed, destroy, on an average, every week, three thousand three hundred and sixty caterpillars. This calculation is founded upon actual observation. Two parents have been known to carry to their nest forty caterpillars in an hour; and, supposing the sparrows to enter the nest only twelve times during each day, they would cause a consumption of four hundred and eighty caterpillars: this sum gives thirty-three hundred and sixty caterpillars extirpated weekly from a garden. But the utility of the birds is not limited to this circumstance alone, for they likewise feed their young with butterflies and other winged insects, each of which, if not destroyed in this manner, would become the parents of hundreds of caterpillars.

WARNING TO SMOKERS. A singular case of asphyxia is related in one of the French journals. A youth paid a visit to an uncle, who occupied a small and ill-ventilated apartment. The nephew, at eight o'clock in the evening, went to bed in the room. Soon after, the uncle and two companions entered the room, and all fell to smoking. The youth was asleep. At midnight the visitors withdrew and the uncle went to bed. Laying his hand upon his nephew, he found him unusually cold, and endeavored to wake him but without effect. Help was called; some faint indications of life appeared, and a physician directed operations for the recovery of the patient. All proved vain, the next day he expired. A post mortem examination was made, and the physician pronounced that he had died of congestion of the brain, caused by the respiration of tobacco smoke during sleep.

JOKING. A joke may change the most resolute will of the most ferocious tyrant. All knew how despotic and ferocious was Henry VIII. of England. He, having some motives of discontent with Francis I. of France, sent to him, as Ambassador, an English Bishop, whom he wished to charge with a message full of gall, pride and menace. This prelate perceiving all the perils of his mission, sought to excuse himself. Fear nothing, said Henry to him, since if the King of France should take your life, I will cut off the heads of as many Frenchmen as I can lay my hands on. True, replied the Bishop, but among those heads there would not be one that would fit my bust, as well as the one which is there now! This jest made Henry laugh and ended in causing him to change his resolution. Without this, perhaps England and France would have written the history of another war.

The doctors are at work to cure up a man in South Carolina that he may be executed according to law.

Ningyong, super.
Ningyong, extra fine.
Oolong, superior.
Oolong, extra fine.
Orange Pekoe, superior.
Souchong and Congo.

Those Teas we shall sell at 1 cent per pound for cash, in lots and quantities most extensive demand. These goods from show a considerable falling off as compared with former years; and the new ones as they do upon a bare market, tend to prices for every description of Fancy Teas are of opinion that the present rates, notwithstanding the following reasons: Souchong and Congo in this country, will check the prices of Ningyong to a considerable extent, and the pending arrival of ships from such a caution to holders who are getting a remunerating rate.

Important to All.—The present retailing of Washington Street, the principal Washington Street, 78 Hanover Street, for street Black Tea, 25 cents the pound, of fashionable sort. It is very low, and the year ago. From the information above for that we shall be enabled to keep up of our Ningyong and Oolong Teas within the market, and should any favorable turn in the market, the prices will be raised, and the first, as we have ever been, to afford full benefit of it, and thereby show to the very highest class Teas are sold at the very lowest rates by the China Tea Company, 130 Street, and 78 Hanover Street.

The New Season's Teas.
No. 193 Washington Street, Boston.
WE have just received from China, per ships T.
W. Sears, Chienora, and Samuel Russell, our fresh supplies of BLACK TEAS, which include:
Ningyong, super,
Ningyong, extra fine,
Oolong, superior,
Oolong, extra fine,
Orange Pekoe, superior,
Souchong and Congo.

These Teas we shall sell at 1 cent per pound profit to the trade, for cash, in lots and quantities to suit the most extensive demands. These exports from China will show a considerable falling off as compared with the exports of former years; and the new Teas coming, as they do upon a new market, tend to keep up the prices for every description of Fancy Teas—yet we are of opinion that the prices ruling now—will not be maintained, for the following reason: the stock of Souchong and Congo in this country is large, and will check the prices of Ningyong to a certain extent, while the impending arrival of ships from Canton will act as a caution to holders who are getting more than remunerating rates.

Important to All.—The present retail price at 193
Washington Street, the principal Warehouse, and Branch Store, 75 Hanover Street, for strong substantial Black Teas, is 25 cents the pound, of the true old fashioned sort. It is seven cents less than it was one year ago. From the information above given, we infer that we shall be enabled to keep up the qualities of our Ningyong and Oolong Teas without increasing the prices, and should any favorable turn take place in the market, all may rest assured that we shall be the first, as we have ever been, to afford them the full benefit of it, and thereby show to the country that the very highest class Teas are sold at the lowest rates by the China Tea Company, 193 Washington Street, and 75 Hanover Street.

Hurrah for Town Hall
CLOTH AND CLOTHING STORE, QUINCY.
KEPT BY RUSSELL & COMPANY.

ALL bound to have NEW CLOTHES the coming Spring and Summer had better call on RUSSELL & Co., at Town Hall, Quincy, who have received and are now opening Cases of Rich Piece Goods fitting for Gentlemen and Boys' wear, Consisting of a choice variety of Black, Blue and Madley colored CLOTHS of French, German, English, and American Manufacture;
Doeskins, Scotch Cassimeres and fine Plaids, a Beautiful Assortment,
FOR TASTY PANTALOONS.
ENTIRELY NEW IN THE MARKET.
All of which they will sell by the piece or MAKE UP TO ORDER as CHEAP AS THE CHEAPEST, our motto being—Not yet done out in trade.
N. B. The Best Assortment of Ready Made Clothes, Caps, and Gentlemen's FURNISHING GOODS to be found in this neighborhood, and at a Little Less Price.
Quincy, March 17. 1w

J. A. Holden, Tailor,
SCHOOL STREET, QUINCY.
INFORMS his friends and the public generally, that he has just received a small but CHOICE assortment of Goods, among which are to be found
German, English, and American BROADCLOTHS, fine and medium; TWEEDS AND CASHMERES, for Sacks;
For Pantaloons,
German Black DOESKINS and Fancy CASSIMERES.
VESTINGS,
RICH FANCY SILKS AND SATINS, BLACK DO., BOMBAZINES, VALENCIAS, AND MARCELLINES.
He invites the attention of such as expect PUNCTUALITY and GOOD WORKMANSHIP, for CASH only; such being his rule of business, the reduced rates at which he sells rendering any other mode of doing business impracticable.
His Clothes will always be made with all his care and skill, of which he boasts not, leaving the garments made by his hands to advertise themselves. Those studious to combine ELEGANCE with ECON-OMY, will do well (and wisely) to favor him with a call.
Also, an assortment of Caps, Stocks, Bosoms, Collars, and Suspenders.
Quincy, March 17. 1w

Of every new and desirable style and such as has not been in this market before.
Also—A fresh supply of VESTINGS, of the VERY RICHEST DESCRIPTION, all of which must be seen to be appreciated.
J. D. would return his sincere thanks for past favors, more especially since he moved to his new Store, as his business has increased far beyond his expectation. He would notify his friends and the public in general, that his NEW ESTABLISHMENT will be known hereafter as the Quincy Hall Clothing Depot, where he intends to carry on his business, as usual, on the CASH SYSTEM, AND ASK BUT ONE PRICE.

To the Travelling Public.

VISIT HEAD QUARTERS
For Your Outfits.

As many of our citizens and New Englanders in neighboring towns, are about starting for the NEW EL DORADO, OR California Gold Diggings, and having had no experience as to what they will require for convenience and comfort, or in purchasing at LOW PRICES, or, in short, in getting a Good, Suitable Outfit for a LITTLE MONEY,
They should go to Head Quarters,
OAK HALL, BOSTON!

Having made the Outfitting Business our study, (three-fourths of my entire force, numbering some fifty clerks, being all engaged in this new branch of our trade) and having fitted out a number of extensive companies, we are prepared to furnish patrons with a PRINTED LIST of all suitable articles required, and also information concerning the various routes to the Gold Regions. It is amusing to see OAK HALL daily thronged with various groups—old men, young men, boys, rich and poor—very few admitting where they are bound, but the outfit selected from the following useful MINING ARTICLES.

generally tells the story: Feather River Overcoats; Spanish or California Cloaks, adapted to the double purpose of Cloak by day and Blanket by night; Sutter's Long Mining Waistcoats; Linen Sacks; Time Pants; Light Vests; Oil or India Rubber Suits; Life Preservers; Ishmus Bags, for pack mules; Canteens; Travelling Bags; Boots; Gold Bags; Tents, one of which can be seen pitched in Oak Hall Rotunda; Hammocks; Mattresses; Blankets; Mosquito Bars;
fancy striped Travelling Shirts; Red Flannel Shirts and Drawers; Knit Under Shirts and Drawers; Crapes or Stockings; Pocket Hides; fine Shirts; El Dorado Caps; California Hats; Bowie Knives; Pocket Knives; Dinks; Pistols; Travelling Trunks; Carpet Bags; Umbrellas; Money Belts; Hair and Tooth Brushes; fancy Soaps; Pocket Combs and Mirrors.

Also—A large lot of
READY MADE CLOTHING,
Cheap, for Shipping,
MINING CLOTHES
FOR LABORING CLASSES, JACKETS, OVERALLS, Stout Pants, SACKS
COATS, &c.

We hope that all who are going will succeed to their anticipations, but they won't unless they lay in a good supply of the above-named articles. If newcomers from California are correct, it will require the outfit to purchase any of the above useful articles there. A printed list (for the patrons of this establishment) of nearly every article of clothing, and the cost, or three years' outfit, together with prospectus explanatory of various routes, can be had, by post paid application addressed to OAK HALL.

When a large company or club desire it, one of my Travelling Agents will be dispatched to their orders.
Together with the above, we have an Extensive Stock
OF EVERY GRADE OF CLOTHING
adapted to those who have not caught the 'Gold Fever' and prefer to stay at home.

POETRY.

THE PURIFICATION OF THE BAR.

BY ALLEN C. SPOONER.

[Read at the late Bar Supper at the Revere House.]

The Bar of the State had grown wretchedly sick,
It must plainly be cured, or "step out" very quick;
So there gathered together, from near and from far,
A jury of lawyers to sit on the Bar.

Sage Counsellor Greave commenced the debate;
Says he, "Matters have got in a terrible state;
The Bar is as bad as the Devil could wish;
Whom can tell how to cook such a kettle of fish?"

"There never was a time, that the oldest remembers,
When disease so infected the head, heart or members;
To discover its seat we are here now assembled;
Our purpose is good—let it not be diseased."

"I have pondered it well, and I speak with deference,
When disease so infected the head, heart or members;
To discover its seat we are here now assembled;
Our purpose is good—let it not be diseased."

"When I was a student, I swallowed Coke whole;
Special pleading was dear to my innermost soul;
To a Counsellor's place was then a long journey,
And it took me seven years to become an Attorney."

Next Counsellor Squibb jumps up on his legs;
Flowing low, the indulgence of all men he begs;
Says he, "I submit that the crying disease
Of the Bar of our State is the lawlessness of fees."

"You may say what you will about 'voids in the head,'
If your pocket is empty, you'd better be dead;
I therefore most humbly ask leave to suggest,
That the Bar's chief disease is a void in the head."

Next Counsellor Bilious got up and suggested,
That the Bar was not duly and truly respected;
He mixed up the Bible with every day's reading,
And morals enforced in the whole of his pleading.

Yet he, even he, had been widely blasphemed;
When he said it, he almost believed that he dreamed;
Yet he, as he sat in his office so snug,
Had been called by a client an arrant II—bug!

He therefore proposed, and thought it not visionary,
To send out at once a pure, legal missionary,
To enlighten the public, and show them how far
They were wanting in proper respect for the Bar.

Next rose Counsellor Fly, with a plausible air,
As disposed to do every thing honest and fair—
Though yesterday caught in a false affidavit—
Said he, "Our loved Bar, from disgrace I would save it—"

"I have heard what 'Squire Grave and 'Squire Squibb have said
That the Bar was diseased in the chest and the head;
But I roundly appeal to each member's sagacity,
The main fault of the Bar is the want of veracity."

After him, lawyer Spurge rose up, much elated;
"The Bar's insult," said he, "cannot be overstated;
I think they are wanting in proper reverence
To gain the respect of the folks in the country."

"You men in the city and populous towns
Do not know the importance of putting on gloves;
But unless we're disposed to be treated like pigs,
Our salvation depends on the wearing of gloves."

Then Counsellor Snaker rose up, and said he,
"Nothing does us such harm as disorder of speech;
The trust account of our troubles far
Is, that lawyers too often attend the wrong Bar."

Next rose lawyer Lovelough, well known in the city,
Although not a member of any Committee,
And having proposed the subject of revolutions,
Which broke up the sitting in utter confusion—

Resolved, "That the Bar, here gathered together,
A motley assemblage of birds of a feather—
Recommend to the public, as wisest by far,
Baron Bradwardine's motto—Dawson of the Bar."

ANECDOTES.

The foreman of a jury who was dazzled by the beauty of a lady who appeared as a witness, became a little confused, and after administering the oath as usual, instead of presenting the book, drew up his face in the most fascinating manner, and said, "Now kiss me, ma'am." He never discovered his error until the whole jury burst out into a roar of laughter.

A long-legged Yankee, on a visit to a managerie for the first time, while strolling round the pavilion, suddenly came upon the elephant; whereupon he turned to the keeper, and said, with surprise: "A thunder and lightning mister, what d'arned critter have you got here, with a tail on both ends?"

"I thought Mr. Clay never drank anything," said Jones to Walker, the other day, as the person alluded to joined some friends in a social glass at the hotel. "Well, you can't exactly say he drinks," responded W., "the only moisture his Clay Jones passed his beaver."

The Marshal de Mouchy maintained that the flesh of pigeons possessed a consoling virtue. Whenever he lost a friend or relation, he said to his cook, "Let me have roast pigeons for dinner to-day. I always remark," he added, "that after having eaten two pigeons, I rose from the table much less sorrowful."

"John, you are forgetting me," said a bright-eyed girl to her lover. "Yes, Sue, I've been for getting you these two years."

Worms! Worms!!

PINK ROOT SYRUP

ARE safely, speedily and most effectually expelled from the system by the use of

WHITWELLS PINK ROOT SYRUP.
Spigelia, or Indian Pink.

has been in use for hundreds of years among the Indian tribes of North America, as a certain remedy for Worms.

Almost every family in N. E., is acquainted with its use. The great and only objection heretofore to its use, has been that it was necessary to pour half a pint down a child's throat in order to destroy and expel the worms; but that objection exists no longer. In the Pink Root Syrup, you have the strongest possible preparation of the Pink root, united with CATARACTICS and TONICS, made into a pleasant and healthful Syrup, which children will take without any trouble. Indeed, they like it much, and will never refuse to take it. The dose of this agreeable medicine for an infant is only

Half a Teaspoon Full.

Full and ample directions accompany its use. The public are respectfully requested to give it a trial, and they will never use any other remedy.

Encourage your Own.

To the People of Quincy—

THE following is a well known motto, and strictly true:

"That Country or Town that gives the most liberal encouragement to its own manufactures of every kind is well known to thrive, and increase in wealth and population."

There are a few interesting facts, of which we wish to remind you, and which we are inclined to think have slipped from the memory of some, and which it will be for your advantage as well as ours to remember.

1st. That at the QUINCY BOOKSTORE you will find all the SCHOOL BOOKS in use in this and the neighboring towns

2d. That at the same place you will find every kind of

Blank Account Book, RECORD or MEMORANDUM BOOK.

3d. That there you will find a great assortment of Miscellaneous, Juvenile and Toy Books.

4th. That there you will find all kinds of STATIONERY.

5th. That there you will find an innumerable variety of

FANCY GOODS.

6th. That all the above will be sold at the very Lowest Market Prices.

7th. That we are entirely disinterested when we say that you will be much better satisfied with your purchases and your bargains if you trade at home, in preference to "out of town."

8th. That there you will find a GOOD LIBRARY where you can procure reading on reasonable terms. 9th. That the Proprietors are agents for all the popular MAGAZINES, receiving the subscriptions themselves and furnishing the numbers on their own responsibility, free of any expense. Many have forgotten this of late, preferring to subscribe of some traveling agent, to one in their own town.

10th. That they RE-BIND old Books, Pamphlets, Periodicals, Music, etc., "as cheap as they can afford to and as quick as anybody."

These things we wish to call to your memory, because while we have been moving on in a quiet kind of way, you seem partly to have forgotten the old place, thinking perhaps that we did not keep up with the times in the variety of our goods and also in prices. Our rule, like that of many others, is, "quick sales and small profits," therefore call in and we will supply you most satisfactorily.

MISCELLANY.

JOHN JONES;

Or the man of Independence.

"Just look here, pa, just look here. See what a naughty boy we've got here," said Mrs. Jones to her husband, when their son Johnny, our hero, was four years old. "He has got hold of your watch, and I can't get it away from him, for the life of me. Can't you coax it from him? He screams like murder, if I touch him, and I'm really afraid he'll break it." And then added Mrs. J., looking up wisely and smilingly to the father. "Did you ever see the like—such an independent fellow for one only four years old?—He's got the regular Jones blood in him—clear father, right over again! I'll venture him. He'll hoe his row in the world, I'll warrant."

"Have you got any boys so punky as that in your school?" said she to old Master Wisehead, who happened to be boarding at Mr. J.'s that winter. "We are going to send him to your school one of these days, and I hope you will make him mind. He is too independent for me to manage."

Now Mrs. Jones did not mean what she said, when she called Johnny a naughty boy; she meant "independent," but she wished to show proper deference to what she feared might be Master Wisehead's opinion. Nor did she mean to say she could not manage him herself; for she thought her training the most perfect in the world. She only wished to pay a delicate compliment to the old master in hopes of getting a compliment in return for the independence of her son Johnny. Johnny still held on to the watch, screaming like a fury, while his flattered parents coaxed him to surrender, half hoping that he would be so independent as to conquer them both. Johnny gains his point, and both parties retire from the contest perfectly satisfied with the condition, that the little conqueror shall keep the guard of the watch round his neck, and be careful not to let it fall.

"Now," says Mrs. Jones to Master Wisehead, with a complacent smile, "you are used to boys—what do you do with such independent little fellows?"

"Well," replied the old master, "in the first place, I do not call such boys independent. My notion is, that they are willful and obstinate; so I would just tell Johnny, once for all, to give me the watch, and if he persisted in refusing, I would give him a whipping."

"That's just the way I thought you'd talk," retorted Mrs. Jones. "Strange that school keeping makes a man so heartless. For my part, I like to see boys show some independence. But it takes a perfect 'numbhead,' to suit you school masters. I have half a mind never to send Johnny to school at all—the schoolmasters would put out every spark of independence a boy possesses. I don't believe in such treatment."

Poor Master Wisehead had committed an unpardonable sin; he had raised a storm which he could never quell, and henceforth Mr. Jones' was no place for him.

The scene now changes to the time when Johnny is about ten years old, and the independent little fellow has entered the village school. Old Master Wisehead has passed away, and a new teacher has assumed the "delightful task" of instructing some fifty roguish boys. But a few days go by, and John Jones incurs the displeasure of the new instructor. His father has bought for him a jack-knife, and being of very independent turn of mind, he uses it ad libitum, in the school room, to whittle, cut apples, and even to deface the bench at which he sits. Johnny's conduct can be endured no longer, and his precious new knife must be surrendered to the custody of his master. The demand is made, but Johnny plants himself upon his rights. The knife is his, and he wants it, and his father gave it to him, and he won't give it up. But, as might often makes right, the master, unfeeling tyrant, is the strongest party, and the poor boy gets a cruel whipping for thus nobly asserting his right to possess the property which was really his own. Well was it for the new master that he was not boarding with Mrs. Jones that day, when Johnny returned from school.

"Well, Mr. Jones," says Mrs. J., as her husband enters the house at the supper hour, "what do you think has happened in school to-day? A queer sort of a master we've got, this winter, to keep our school. Don't you think, he has whipped Johnny, to-day, almost to death, just for nothing at all; and the poor boy isn't done crying yet. Tell your pa how 'twas, Johnny; you shan't go to school another day to such a mean, cruel man as the master is. You shall go to a private school, where you shall be treated decently, and shan't be whipped to death because you know enough to assert your rights. I suppose the master would have you like Mr. Smith's boys, who are good scholars enough, perhaps, but they have been spoiled in bringing up; for they'll do anything which anybody a little older happens to bid them—they have not a spark of independence in them and never will have, brought up as they are."

After hearing Johnny and his mamma through, Mr. J.'s paternal heart begins to bleed for his poor, injured boy, and off he posts to see the master. In a few minutes the aggrieved parent, seated in the master's study, begins the conversation of the evening by observing that he has learned that a little affair had happened out in school, and he had come to speak about it. "I must confess," added he with some feeling, "that I think it rather hard that a little boy cannot have the privilege of looking at a knife which his father has just given him, without being forced to lose it, or take a flogging. I see no hurt in looking at a knife. You charged him too with cutting his bench; now he never cut the bench; it was another boy. Now if it has got to be the case that my boy must have every spark of independence whipped out of him because he dares to assert his rights, why, then I won't send him to school at all. I would rather have the independence without the learning, than the learning without the independence."

The master explains the circumstances, and assures Mr. J. that his son, denying having cut the bench had told a falsehood, and richly deserves a second punishment. This was too much for the father.

"What Johnny accused of lying! I will never believe that story," retorted Mr. J. "I don't believe my son would lie to me about it. He was always a boy of the truth. He is too independent to lie. I am fully aware that he is peculiar, and unlike other boys. He has too much independence in him to suit some folks, but I think none the worse of him for that. Above all things, he wouldn't lie."

Mr. J. leaves the master, and the result is that the Jones family are all arrayed against the school for that winter. All the social circles for several weeks are regularly edified with Mrs. Jones' complaints, and the injured, but independent little Johnny is removed to a private school, where the early budding spirit of independence is allowed to unfold and develop itself in all its strength and beauty. In this manner pass the school boy days of our hero. But we hasten to complete his history. Shielded by parental tenderness during his youthful years, no unfeeling schoolmaster was allowed to check the growth and development of that manly independence which had thus early attracted the attention of a fond and happy mother. He is now sixteen, his education is finished, and he is already a man. He steps boldly forth upon the stage of life. His parents would still advise him, but he soon shows them that he is his own adviser.

"Away with the idle prejudices of society, I shall have the independence to do as I please," thinks John, as he walks up to the bar and takes a glass of brandy. "I am not going to sign away my independence or my right to drink what I please." John swears, and drinks, and gambles for several years, and by this time has convinced his fond mother that, with a witness, her son was about to be an independent man.

But we pass to the time when Johnny enters upon the duties of a man of business. He marries, dashes out, scorns the humble way of starting in life with which his old schoolmates the Smiths, set out—is too independent for that—spends more than he earns, borrows money, and becomes a bankrupt. But misfortune cannot crush his independence. He borrows again, and is again a bankrupt. But still John Jones and his wife keep the first society, and live in the first style. The better class, begin to withdraw, but he is too independent to let them go!

"Ah," says his fond mother with a sigh. "John was always too independent to go in anything short of the first society; misfortune will never crush him. He'll be first or nobody."

But John Jones' career is almost run. He cannot be trusted longer—he is turned forth upon the world a disappointed, yet independent man. His habits are fixed—it is too late to change—it is too much to yield. He distrusts and hates both God and man. He dies a drunkard and an infidel, bequeathing to his children nothing but his independence of character.

Such was the life of John Jones, and such the life of many an "independent man." But let us analyze this independence, as exhibited in the various stages of the life of the subject of our story. When he refused the watch and the knife, he was already on his road to ruin, he knew the right, but his passions had the mastery, and his fond mother, instead of smiling that he was so independent, should have sighed that he was such a slave. When a young man at the rum-seller's bar, he was again a groveling slave to his appetite. Such young men should be taught that they have not the first element of an independent character; for that element is the power of controlling one's own appetite and passions. As a man of business, he was the slave to pride. In his domestic relations he was a slave to fashion. If there is a man on earth who is contemptible for his meanness, it is not the man whom extravagance and pride have made a bankrupt, and who, while living upon the just dues and hard earned pittance of his fellow man, has the effrontery to assume that he is too independent to change the habits of his life!

Dear, precious independence! Admirable elastic principle, which forbids a man to sign a pledge, yet allows him to lie in the gutter; forbids him to associate with an honest laborer, yet allows him to cheat him of the just rewards of his toil; which forbids him to rank himself with any but the elite of society, yet allows him to fawn, and cringe, and creep to secure that position; which forbids him to stoop to the humbling duties of a Christian man, but allows selfishly to grasp a tenfold share of those blessings of society which such duties alone have secured.

This is no creation of the fancy. Such men of independence are all around us. Pride, sycophancy, profanity, passion, anger, and even meanness itself—all sail under the flag of independence!

But the saddest aspect of such independence of character is, that it unfits the heart for the reception of the truths of the gospel and the unhappy man, while he dreams of independence of thought, is a cringing slave of a vicious pride, a supple tool and servant of the devil.

Let parents beware how they smile upon the stubbornness of a child, as though it were the promise of an independent man. Let not teachers forget their duty to inculcate that self control, self denial, and obedience, form the only basis of true independence of character, and that no greater wrong can be done to a child than to let him have his own way.

There are two kinds of independence; the angels that fell possessed the one, the meek and lowly Saviour has given a perfect exhibition of the other; and let no man boast of his independence of character until he has ascertained whether his is the independence of Christ or the independence of Satan.

SINS OF OMISSION.

To leave undone what it is our known duty to do is as obviously a sin as the doing of what we are forbidden to do. The injunctions of our religion are not restricted to negative duties merely, that is, to the abstaining from things prohibited; but they are laid upon the doing of things commanded. It will be a vain plea for us to say, that we have done no actual evil, that we have kept ourselves from outright offences, that we have thus "washed our hands in innocence, and kept our garments lily-white, if we have not, according to our ability, done good, and made, as we have had opportunity, positive acquisitions in Christian worthiness. We should aim not only to be pure, but holy; we should not only "wait for," but "seek the Lord." "Break up," says the Prophet, "the fallow ground." It will be of little avail that we root out the noxious weeds from the soil, if we suffer it to be sterile. It were better, perhaps, that some tares should mingle in with the wheat, than that at the time of the harvest there should be no grain. Be it remembered, therefore, to do no good is in itself a great evil, and simple unprofitableness is a decided sin.

The Gospel speaks everywhere of efforts, toil, and struggle. There is a spirit-stirring tone in all its precepts, which, while it calls to generous rivalry every true follower of the cross, should ring in the ears of the halting, slothful, non-doing man, like "a voice of doom." The stream of life is not one whose onward flow alone will bear us to our destined haven without our care, but it is one that is disturbed by many cross eddies, lurking quick-sands, and dangerous reefs, and it is one, therefore, which requires us to study carefully the chart of duty, to labor earnestly at the helm and oar, to keep our eye fixed on the sure lights of the firmament, and to take advantage of every teasing wave, fickle wind, and devious current. The Gospel emblems are all quickening ones. It likens duty to a warfare; to a race; to a striving for entrance at a narrow gate; to a labor in a vineyard, where, at the third, and the sixth, and the eleventh hour, the Lord is calling on the loiterers. "Why stand ye here all the day idle?" The way of duty which the Gospel points is an ever-onward, ever-upward way. It scales acclivities, it plunges into caverns, and has not, from the cradle to the grave's brink, a single resting place for the foot of the idler.—Braser.

SCANDAL. Dr. Johnson being once in company with some scandal-monger, one of them having accused an absent friend of resorting to rouge, he observed:—"It is perhaps, after all, much better for a lady to redder her own cheeks, than to blacken other people's character."

THE DEPTH OF THE OCEAN. The greatest depth reached by sounding was in the Atlantic, 900 miles west of St. Helena, where Sir James Ross found no bottom, with a fathom line of six miles and a quarter in length.

CULTURE OF FRUIT TREES.

At one of the series of Legislative Agricultural meetings, the Hon. M. P. Wilder of Dorchester, Executive Councilor for Norfolk District, made the following interesting remarks, as we find them reported in a Boston paper.

The Culture of Fruit Trees, or, in modern language, the science of Pomology, occupies a field of research so wide, that a thorough discussion of the subject would engross more time than is allotted to our meetings during any one session of the Legislature. The grain and vegetables of the earth may be considered as the necessary and more substantial blessings of Providence, but I have ever viewed the delicious fruits of the orchard and garden as the overflowings of his bounty, and whether as a luxury, contributing to health, and the gratification of the appetite, or as a profitable crop for the farmer, the subject has quite too often been esteemed only as of secondary importance.

Formerly the cultivation of the finer fruits was limited to the gardens of the opulent, or to the immediate proximity of a market, but the multiplied facilities of intercourse and transportation, the emulation excited by Horticultural exhibitions and conventions, and the increasing importance of this product in a commercial point of view, has awakened an interest which has spread as with magnetic speed, throughout our land. Thousands of trees are planted instead of dozens; orchards and gardens on the most extensive scale have been commenced, and so generally has this taste been diffused in our vicinity, that the cottage even of the most humble laborer, without its fruit tree or grape vine, would almost be considered an anomaly. Amateurs and nurserymen have congregated into their collections hundreds of varieties for trial; and so great is this enthusiasm or mania, that the cry is not simply "who will show us any good," but who will show us anything new. Fears have been expressed that this fruit growing mania would overstock the market, but thus far it has tended to foster a taste for better quality, better specimens, and to augment rather than diminish the price.

In no part of the world is this enterprise crowned with better success than in our own. The fame of American fruit is already proverbial in foreign markets, and the day is not distant, when, in addition to the enormous consumption at home, we shall supply England with the finest pears, as we now do the finest apples that appear in her markets.

A gentleman, (P. Barry, Esq., of Rochester, N. Y.) who has just returned from Europe, remarks that in the English market there will be "an unfeeling demand for the products of our orchards," that apples such as would scarcely sell at home, were there cried up as "nice American apples," "beautiful American apples," and brought from three to six cents each. Mr. B. says he examined in the fruit rooms of the London Horticultural Society, "two to three hundred varieties of fruit, and that there was not a single large, clear, well colored specimen among them." The same gentleman took out with him specimens of the Northern Spy apple, (which we now have before us) and some other varieties; they elicited the admiration of all, and indeed, says he, "there are no such apples in England."

With the zeal so generally manifested on this subject, it becomes a matter of importance to ascertain the best mode of cultivation; but so much has already been published on the soil, management and selection of fruit trees, that I can hardly expect to add anything new. There are, however, some considerations "that lie at the root of the matter," and which it is believed must be adopted as a sine qua non, to ensure success, viz:

1. The selection of such sorts, and only such, as by uniformity of character, in various localities, particularly our own, have, after a trial of years, been proved to be hardy, productive, and of excellent quality.

2. The right soil, and the proper preparation of it.

3. The appropriate manure. Much disappointment has been experienced by selecting varieties from their high sounding names and novelty, rather than from any known superiority of character. To avoid this prevalent error, and in compliance with frequent requests, I submit a list in the various classes of fruits, which from the united experience of cultivators seem well adapted to our region, and to possess generally the characteristics alluded to; and to make this as useful as possible I have graduated it to limited selections for small gardens.

APPLES.

For three varieties—Large Early Bough, Gravenstein, Baldwin.

For six varieties, add—Red Astrachan, Porter, Rhode Island Greening.

For twelve varieties, add—Early Harvest, Williams, Fall Harvey, Minister, Hubbardston Nonsuch, Roxbury Russet.

For Winter Sweet Apples—Danvers Winter Sweet, Seaver Sweet, Tolman Sweet.

Our country abounds with native varieties of apples, and there are no doubt many others equal or superior to the foreign sorts, but which have not been so generally tested. Among those of high reputation, are the Northern Spy, Melon, Mother, Magnolia, Foundling, Jewett's Red, Twenty Ounce, and the Ladies' Sweetening, which last, now before us, should it prosper in our soils, will take high rank as a very late keeper and superb fruit.

PEARS.

For three varieties—Williams Bon Chretien, or Bartlett, Vicar of Wakefield, Beurre d'Aremberg.

For six varieties, add—Bloodgood, Louise bonne de Jersey, Flemish Beauty.

For twelve varieties, add—Seckel, Fondante d'Automne, Urbaniste, Golden Beurre of Bilbao, Beurre Bosc, Winter Nellis.

For eighteen varieties, add—Dearborn's Seedling, Andrews, Tyson, Heathcot, Long Green, Buffum.

For new foreign varieties, of good promise and partially proved—Beurre d'Anjou, Paradise d'Automne, Doyenne Boussois, Duchesse d'Orleans, Jalouse de Fontenay Vender, St. Andre.

For new varieties, of high reputation—Pratt, Westcott, Abbott, Ous Seedling, Brandywine, Leech's Kingessing, Howell.

PEACHES.

For three varieties—Early York (serrated leaf), Crawford's Early, Old Mixon Freestone.

For six varieties, add—George Fourth, Grosse Mignonne, Crawford's Late.

For twelve varieties, add—Walter's Early, Nivette, Bergen's Yellow, Late Admirable, Jacques, Old Mixon Clingstone.

CHERRIES.

For three varieties—May Duke, Black Tartarian, Downer's Late.

For six varieties, add—Black Eagle, Elton, Downton.

For twelve varieties, add—Knight's Early Black, Graffion or B'gareau, Sweet Montmorency, Sparhawk's Honey, Couleur de Chair, Late Duke.

PLUMS.

For three varieties—Green Gage, Jefferson, Washington.

For six varieties, add—Lawrence's Favorite, Purple Gage, Imperial Gage.

For twelve varieties, add—Bingham, Bleeker's Gage, Yellow Gage, Red Gage, Smith's Orleans, Royale Hative.

The President closed by saying, that having occupied his share of the time, the other points alluded to would be deferred to another opportunity.

NEW YORK STATE PRISON. The analysis of the place of nativity of the one hundred and fifty seven convicts at Auburn is curious:—Ireland twelve, New York ninety four, Scotland two, Vermont ten, England nine, West Indies one, France two, Canada four, Connecticut two, Maryland one, Ohio one, New Hampshire one, Virginia two, New Jersey one, Massachusetts one, Pennsylvania one, Mississippi one, Sweden one, Delaware one, Kentucky two, Germany one.

The physician of the prison reports that, from a careful investigation of convicts under a long term of imprisonment, he has been irresistibly led to the conclusion, that five years is the longest term which a convict can pass in confinement and be restored to the world with "a sound mind and in a sound body. The mind, like the body, in the absence of proper exercise, loses its tone and strength. Convicts despair of seeing out a long sentence. He thinks that after long terms it would be more merciful to retain them for life than to return them to the world, incapable of self-control.

The cutter shop sent most to the hospital, the tailor shop least.

Among the "occupations" of those sentenced to Auburn, are sixteen sportsmen, and ten speculators; one in three are unable to read; one in two left or were deprived of a home before they were sixteen years of age.

THE IMPORTANT EVENTS IN PRESIDENT TAYLOR'S PUBLIC LIFE. Zachary Taylor, born in Orange County, Virginia, November 24, 1784, is now in the sixty fifth year of his age. Commissioned by Jefferson, May 3, 1808. Victorious at Fort Hamilton, Sept. 6, 1812. Member of the Militia Board, 1826. Victorious at the Bad Axe, Aug. 2, 1832. Victorious at Okeechobee, Dec. 25, 1837. Victorious at Palo Alto, May 8, 1846. Victorious at Resaca de la Palma, May 9, 1846. Capitulation of Monterey, Sept. 24, 1846. Victorious at Buena Vista, Feb. 22, 1847. Inaugurated President of the United States on the 5th of March, 1849.

ONE MISSING. The Rev. F. Coyle in a lecture on memory, instanced stage-drivers whose memory of the orders and directions given them is remarkable. He once rode outside with the owner and driver of a stage from Troy to the land of the Knickerbocker; the driver could not have had less than fifty parcels and messages to deliver by the way; but he was at loss, he knew he had forgotten one parcel, but "dang him, if he could remember what it was." At length the stage arrived at his own door, when his children came running out with a "welcome home, Pa; but, oh, where did you leave Ma?" "Ma is teetotally scorched (said he) if I hadn't forgot Sall." That was the missing parcel.

UMBRELLA ETIQUETTE. The Court Journal lays down the following rules: If you meet a lady, without an umbrella in the rain, it is not proper to lend an umbrella to her, but you ought to escort her home; but if you meet two ladies then you should give them your umbrella. This is proper whether the ladies are your acquaintance or not.

OLD COLONY RAILROAD.

We noticed a communication in the Boston Post of the 16th inst., written by S. M. Felton, Superintendent of the Fitchburg Railroad, in relation to some matters connected with that road, in which there is a great error in regard to the number of trains running between Boston and this place, and does not do full justice to the management of the Old Colony Railroad.

He says,—and the mistake is unintentional, of course,—that Quincy has four trains daily each way; now the fact is that we have eight trains daily each way, and, except in one particular, are exceedingly well accommodated. There is no inward train from this place between 11.30 A. M. and 4.40 P. M., a period of five hours and six minutes. There are two trains between eleven and twelve o'clock in the forenoon, one of which is postponed to one or two o'clock in the afternoon, would make the accommodation as perfect as possible, due regard being had to the fact that towns south of us must be considered in the arrangement of the times of running the trains. With this alteration, which we should like to have made, if practicable, the people of Quincy would be as well accommodated as those of any town in the vicinity of Boston.

The management of the Old Colony Railroad under its new direction is vastly improved, and by the cutting down of its extravagant expenditures, and the lopping off its useless charges it will in a short time hold a position, as one of the best conducted and most profitable roads which runs out of the city of Boston.

A little reform is needed in the arrival of inward trains at this and of course at other depots on the line. Those from Fall River are generally behind time. Where the fault is we do not know, but if the conductors on the Fall River or the New Bedford Road, in which latter road the cause of the delay is said to be, were as prompt, active, energetic and efficient as those on the Old Colony Road, we have no doubt, that the trains would arrive at the several stations at the precise moment designated on the time cards. We are aware that it is difficult to run the cars to suit the views and wishes of all, but we feel pleased that we can say that for a year or more past, every thing has been done to run the trains at such convenient times as will best suit our city-going inhabitants. We are led to these remarks from the fact that it was generally understood, whether truly or otherwise we cannot say, that in times past no disposition was manifested to accommodate our citizens, although a handsome proportion of revenue was derived from passengers to and from the Quincy station. But the aspect of things is changed now, and as a good understanding exists between the directors of the road and our people, we trust, that as the public use the road for the convenience it offers, and the proprietors run the road for the profit it affords, such arrangements will continue to be made as will best tend to the advantage of both.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

Freeman Hunt and the Mercantile Library Association of New York, Boston, Baltimore, Charleston, (S. C.) and Louisville, (Ky.) says the New York Globe, long since expressed, publicly, their appreciation of the labors of Mr. Hunt, the pioneer in commercial statistics and literature, by electing him an honorary member of their associations, and their approval of his magazine as the organ of the mercantile interests of the country, either by commendatory resolutions or honorable notice in their annual reports. In imitation of the example of its sister associations, we notice, by the journals of the day, that the Mercantile Library Association of Cincinnati have just conferred the same honor on that gentleman; besides passing, at a general meeting of its members, the following highly flattering but well-merited testimonial as to the character of the magazine, as well as to the sound judgment and unwearied industry of its able editor. This must be all the more gratifying to Mr. Hunt, as we have reason to know that it was a voluntary act on the part of the association, and unexpected and unsolicited on the part of the recipient:

ROOMS OF THE YOUNG MEN'S MERCANTILE LIBRARY ASSOCIATION, CINCINNATI, January, 1849.

At a general meeting of the Association, it was Resolved:—As the sense of the 'Young Men's Mercantile Library Association of Cincinnati,' that 'Hunt's Mercantile Magazine and Commercial Review' has from its commencement, filled an important and widely extended field of usefulness; that the sound judgment, unwearied industry of its editor, Freeman Hunt, Esq., have contributed largely toward elevating the standard of mercantile education throughout the country; and that this Association takes great pleasure in commending the 'Mercantile Magazine,' to general circulation, and the special support of the business community.

The following letter, from the Secretary of the Association, accompanied the resolution.

Dear Sir—I beg to wait upon you as above, with an official enunciate of the Institution I have the honor to represent. I may be permitted to express a very high appreciation of long continued and successful efforts, in a greatly neglected sphere of duty. A pioneer in the cause, I trust, my dear sir, that it has proven, to yourself "its own exceeding great reward," and that prosperity somewhat commensurate with deserving, may continue to attend upon your every effort in the laborious and honorable position which it has been your good fortune to dignify and adorn.

I am, dear sir, with great respect,
 Your very obedient servant,
 JAS. LUTON, Cor. Secretary.

Freeman Hunt, Esq.,
 Editor of Merchants' Magazine, N. Y.

GENERAL COURT. During the present week, no important measures have been passed, but are now being discussed. It is supposed that the Legislature will adjourn by the 26th of April.

JURYMEN. Messrs. Nathaniel M. Bean and Jonathan Jameson have been drawn as Jurors to attend the Circuit Court, at Boston, on the third day of April ensuing.

BRAINTREE TOWN OFFICERS. The following gentlemen have been elected for the ensuing year.
Town Clerk and Treasurer—Judson Stoddard.
Selectmen—Bryant Newcomb, Frederick M. Thompson, Charles Dickerman.
Overseers of the Poor—Jonathan French, Alexander Bowditch, Oliver Perkins.

FOR CALIFORNIA, DIRECT! PASSAGE ONLY $135. The elegant copper fastened ship Frances Ann, Capt. J. Proctor, will take her departure in about ten days. Messrs. Hurdin & Co. 8 Court street, Boston, are her agents, and have provided every necessary article for the comfort and convenience of her passengers. We understand a few more berths are unengaged.

ATTEMPTED ROBBERY. On Tuesday night last, the Plymouth Bank building was entered by rogues, but it does not appear that any attempt was made upon the safe, and the robbers decamped without realizing, so far as is known, the first red cent for their trouble.

FORGERY CASE. R. N. Berry, an auctioneer of Boston, has been arrested on a charge of forgery, and ordered to appear for trial at the April term of the Court.

SHIP FRANKLIN. John W. Crafts of Boston, has been indicted for conspiracy to destroy this vessel which was lost on Scituate Beach a few weeks since. The captain and other persons were drowned.

THE FRESHET. The rain of Wednesday night caused such a freshet, that a breach was made in the dam of one of the Bridgewater Mills, whereby the foundation of a part of the Fall River Railroad was washed away, thus obstructing the cars. This was the reason of the delay of the train on Thursday morning last. The railroad will be forthwith repaired. The cars now run as usual.

Let there be a full meeting of the inhabitants of the Centre School District to-night, at the Lyceum Room, as there is a law suit pending against them.

Commodore John Downes has been appointed to the command of the Navy Yard and station at Charlestown, (Mass.) vice Commodore Parker, transferred to the Home Squadron.

One hundred and ten vessels arrived at Boston during one day, of which ninety were square rigged vessels. Three of them were East Indiamen. Fourteen ships, five barks, and one brig were from New Orleans.

By a report published in the New Orleans papers, it appears that during the cholera there but three deaths occurred among the Order of the Sons of Temperance.

NOTICES.

A meeting of the "Union Board" will be held in the house of Mr. E. N. Field, next MONDAY EVENING, at seven o'clock.
 A full and prompt attendance is important.
 JAMES M. WADE, Sec. of the Board.

Wiscasset, Maine, Jan. 30.
 F. BROWN—Dear Sir, I take this opportunity to return to you my most sincere thanks for the benefit I have received from the use of your SARSAPARILLA and TOMATO BITTERS. I can with much pleasure say that I have been very much benefited by their use. I have been troubled for a long time with a severe scrofula humor, for which I have applied to all our physicians, without receiving the least relief; at last I was induced to try your Bitters, by the strong recommendations of my friends, and to my utter astonishment they have entirely cured me, and I find by inquiry, that I am not the only person that have been cured by its use in this part of the country. It is becoming one of the most popular Medicines ever used here, and I hope soon to see them become in general use by our physicians. I can with the greatest confidence recommend them to all, as a most mild, safe, and effectual remedy for impurities of the blood. Please send me one dozen by Railroad or Stage, and oblige your most obedient servant,

BEWARE OF IMPOSITION. The greater the value of any discovery, the higher it is held in the estimation of the public, and so much in proportion is that public liable to be imposed upon by the spurious imitations of ignorant, designing, and dishonest men, who, like the drone in the hive, have neither the ability nor inclination to think or provide for themselves, but thrive and luxuriate upon the earnings of the deserving.

The extraordinary success attending the use of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry in disease of the lungs, and the many singular cures it has effected, have naturally attracted the attention of many physicians, as well as the whole fraternity of quacks,—and caused unprincipled counterfeits and imitations to palm off spurious mixtures, of similar name and appearance of the genuine Balsam. Some are called 'Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar,' 'Cherry Syrup,' 'Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry,' 'Wild Cherry Confection,' and sundry other compounds; to which they attach a long string of 'puffs.' But of such nostrums we know nothing. It is WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY alone that performs the cures. Let them not deceive you.

DIED. In this town, 19th inst., Mr. Thomas P. Newcomb, aged 67.

In the death of Mr. Newcomb the family have lost a kind husband and a beloved father. He possessed an unworldly and disinterested heart, and a heart which endeared him to his family and friends.

He's gone, he's gone, our friend is gone,
 His spirit now has fled,
 His body in the grave will lie,
 While o'er him tears are shed.

Dust to its narrow house beneath,
 Soul to its place on high;
 They that have seen thy look in death,
 No more may fear to die.

And many a friend around will stand,
 To mourn a friend so dear;
 He'll see them not, he'll hear no sigh
 Nor heed the falling tear.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

Freeman Hunt and the Mercantile Library Association of New York, Boston, Baltimore, Charleston, (S. C.) and Louisville, (Ky.) says the New York Globe, long since expressed, publicly, their appreciation of the labors of Mr. Hunt, the pioneer in commercial statistics and literature, by electing him an honorary member of their associations, and their approval of his magazine as the organ of the mercantile interests of the country, either by commendatory resolutions or honorable notice in their annual reports. In imitation of the example of its sister associations, we notice, by the journals of the day, that the Mercantile Library Association of Cincinnati have just conferred the same honor on that gentleman; besides passing, at a general meeting of its members, the following highly flattering but well-merited testimonial as to the character of the magazine, as well as to the sound judgment and unwearied industry of its able editor. This must be all the more gratifying to Mr. Hunt, as we have reason to know that it was a voluntary act on the part of the association, and unexpected and unsolicited on the part of the recipient:

ROOMS OF THE YOUNG MEN'S MERCANTILE LIBRARY ASSOCIATION, CINCINNATI, January, 1849.

At a general meeting of the Association, it was Resolved:—As the sense of the 'Young Men's Mercantile Library Association of Cincinnati,' that 'Hunt's Mercantile Magazine and Commercial Review' has from its commencement, filled an important and widely extended field of usefulness; that the sound judgment, unwearied industry of its editor, Freeman Hunt, Esq., have contributed largely toward elevating the standard of mercantile education throughout the country; and that this Association takes great pleasure in commending the 'Mercantile Magazine,' to general circulation, and the special support of the business community.

The following letter, from the Secretary of the Association, accompanied the resolution.

Dear Sir—I beg to wait upon you as above, with an official enunciate of the Institution I have the honor to represent. I may be permitted to express a very high appreciation of long continued and successful efforts, in a greatly neglected sphere of duty. A pioneer in the cause, I trust, my dear sir, that it has proven, to yourself "its own exceeding great reward," and that prosperity somewhat commensurate with deserving, may continue to attend upon your every effort in the laborious and honorable position which it has been your good fortune to dignify and adorn.

I am, dear sir, with great respect,
 Your very obedient servant,
 JAS. LUTON, Cor. Secretary.

Freeman Hunt, Esq.,
 Editor of Merchants' Magazine, N. Y.

GENERAL COURT. During the present week, no important measures have been passed, but are now being discussed. It is supposed that the Legislature will adjourn by the 26th of April.

JURYMEN. Messrs. Nathaniel M. Bean and Jonathan Jameson have been drawn as Jurors to attend the Circuit Court, at Boston, on the third day of April ensuing.

BRAINTREE TOWN OFFICERS. The following gentlemen have been elected for the ensuing year.
Town Clerk and Treasurer—Judson Stoddard.
Selectmen—Bryant Newcomb, Frederick M. Thompson, Charles Dickerman.
Overseers of the Poor—Jonathan French, Alexander Bowditch, Oliver Perkins.

FOR CALIFORNIA, DIRECT! PASSAGE ONLY $135. The elegant copper fastened ship Frances Ann, Capt. J. Proctor, will take her departure in about ten days. Messrs. Hurdin & Co. 8 Court street, Boston, are her agents, and have provided every necessary article for the comfort and convenience of her passengers. We understand a few more berths are unengaged.

ATTEMPTED ROBBERY. On Tuesday night last, the Plymouth Bank building was entered by rogues, but it does not appear that any attempt was made upon the safe, and the robbers decamped without realizing, so far as is known, the first red cent for their trouble.

FORGERY CASE. R. N. Berry, an auctioneer of Boston, has been arrested on a charge of forgery, and ordered to appear for trial at the April term of the Court.

SHIP FRANKLIN. John W. Crafts of Boston, has been indicted for conspiracy to destroy this vessel which was lost on Scituate Beach a few weeks since. The captain and other persons were drowned.

THE FRESHET. The rain of Wednesday night caused such a freshet, that a breach was made in the dam of one of the Bridgewater Mills, whereby the foundation of a part of the Fall River Railroad was washed away, thus obstructing the cars. This was the reason of the delay of the train on Thursday morning last. The railroad will be forthwith repaired. The cars now run as usual.

Let there be a full meeting of the inhabitants of the Centre School District to-night, at the Lyceum Room, as there is a law suit pending against them.

Commodore John Downes has been appointed to the command of the Navy Yard and station at Charlestown, (Mass.) vice Commodore Parker, transferred to the Home Squadron.

One hundred and ten vessels arrived at Boston during one day, of which ninety were square rigged vessels. Three of them were East Indiamen. Fourteen ships, five barks, and one brig were from New Orleans.

By a report published in the New Orleans papers, it appears that during the cholera there but three deaths occurred among the Order of the Sons of Temperance.

To the Travelling Public.

CALIFORNIA OUTFITTERS.

VISIT HEAD QUARTERS For Your Outfits.

As many of our citizens and New Englanders in neighboring towns, are about starting for the NEW EL DORADO, OR California Gold Diggings, and having had no experience as to what they will require for convenience and comfort, or in purchasing at LOW PRICES.

or, in short, in getting a Good, Suitable Outfit for a LITTLE MONEY, They should go to Head Quarters, OAK HALL, BOSTON!

Having made the Outfitting Business our study, (three-fourths of the entire force, numbering some fifty clerks, being all engaged in this new branch of our trade) and having fitted out a number of extensive companies, we are prepared to furnish patrons with a PRINTED LIST of all suitable articles required, and also information concerning the various routes to the Gold Regions. It is amusing to see OAK HALL! daily thronged with various groups—old men, young men, boys,—rich and poor,—very few admitting where they are bound, but the outfit selected from the following useful MINING ARTICLES.

generally tells the story: Feather River Overcoats Spanish or California Cloaks, adapted to the double purpose of Cloak by day and Blanket by night; Suter's Long Mining Waistcoat; Linen Sacks; Thin Pants; Light Vests; Oil or India Rubber Suits; Life Preservers; Ishmus Bags, for pack mules; Canteens; Travelling Bags; Boots; Gold Bags; Tents, one of which can be seen pitched in Oak Hall Rounda; Hammocks; Mattresses; Blankets; Mosquito Bars; fancy striped Travelling Shirts; Red Flannel Shirts and Drawers; Knit Under Shirts and Drawers; Cravats or Stocks; Pocket Hdkfs; fine Shirts; El Dorado Caps; California Hats; Bowie Knives; Pocket Knives; Dinks; Pistols; Travelling Trunks; Carpet Bags; Umbrellas; Money Belts; Hair and Tooth Brushes; fancy Soaps; Pocket Combs and Mirrors.

Also—A large lot of READY MADE CLOTHING, Cheap, for Shippers. MINING CLOTHES FOR LABORING CLASS, JACKETS, OVERALLS, SHORT PANTS, SACKS, COATS, &c.

We hope that all who are going will succeed to their anticipation, but they won't unless they lay in a good supply of the above named articles. If accounts from California are correct, it will require the LARGE LUMPS to purchase any of the above useful articles there. A good deal for the pattern of this establishment) of necessary articles for six months, one, two, or three years' outfit, together with prospectus explanatory of various routes, can be had, by post paid application addressed to OAK HALL.

When a large company or club desire it, one of my Travelling Agents will be despatched to their orders. Together with the above, we have an Extensive Stock OF EVERY GRADE OF CLOTHING adapted to those who have not caught the "Gold Fever" and prefer to stay at home.

Recapitulation of Above Articles

WITH PRICES ATTACHED.

Spanish or California Cloaks, $3.50 to 15.00

Feather River Mining Coats, 6.50 to 12.50

Capt Sutter's Long Mining Waistcoats, 2.00 to 2.50

Linen Sacks or Thin Coats, 75 to 1.25

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

HOW I WOULD BE REMEMBERED.

I would not in the marble stone
That o'er my grave may rise,
But in the hearts of those alone
Whom here I fondly prize.

I would not in the little flower
That round my bed may grow,
Sweet token of affection's power
To cheer us here below.

I would not in the tolling bell
That strikes the listening ear,
But in the hearts of those alone
Who'll shed for me a tear.

O give me then true, faithful friends,
In whom I can confide;
Who e'er my sleeping dust will bend
And all my frailties hide.

And thus, when life with them shall close,
And earthly labors end,
O may their crumbling dust repose
In peace beside their friend.

Dorchester, March 8, 1845.

MUTUAL ASSISTANCE.

A man very lame
Was a little to blame
To stray far from his humble abode;
Hot, thirsty, benighted,
And heartily tired,
He laid himself down in the road.

While thus he reclined,
A man who was blind
Came by and entreated his aid;
"Deprived of my sight,
Unassisted to night,
I shall not reach home, I'm afraid."

"Intelligence give
Of the place where you live,"
Said the cripple, "perhaps I may know it;
In my road it may be,
And if you'll carry me,
It will give me much pleasure to show it."

Great strength you have got,
Which, alas! I have not,
In my legs so fatigued every nerve is;
For the use of your back,
For the eyes which you lack,
My pair shall be much at your service."

Said the other poor man,
"What an excellent plan!
Pray, get on my shoulders, good brother;
I see all mankind,
If they are not inclined,
May constantly help one another."

ALL IS ACTION—ALL IS MOTION.
All is action, all is motion,
In this mighty world of ours!
Like the current of the ocean,
Man is urged by unseen powers!

Steadily, but strongly moving,
Life is onward evermore;
Still the present is improving
On the age that went before.

Duty points, with outstretched fingers,
Every soul to actions high;
Woe beside the soul that lingers—
Onward! onward! is the cry.

Though man's form may seem victorious,
War may waste and famine blight,
Still from out the conflict glorious,
Mind comes forth with added light.

O'er the darkest night of sorrow,
From the deadliest field of strife,
Dawns a clearer, brighter morrow
Springs a truer, nobler life.

Onward, onward, onward ever!
Human progress none may stay;
All who make the vain endeavor,
Shall like chaff be swept away.

ANECDOTES.

A certain physician, was lately complaining in a coffee house, that he had three fine daughters, to whom he should give ten thousand dollars each, and yet that he could get nobody to marry them. "With your leave Doctor," said an Irishman, who was present, stepping up and making a very respectful bow, "I'll take two of them!"

"Ma," said a young lady to her mother the other day, "what is emigrating?" "Emigrating, dear, is a young lady going to California." "What is colonizing, ma?" "Colonizing, dear, is marrying there and having a family." "Ma, I should like to go to California!"

During the pugilistic excitement in Philadelphia, and when Hyer, after the encounter, was dining at Miller's, a friend of his antagonist's wishing to cast a slur upon the victor, ordered the waiter to bring him some Sullivan potatoes. A moment after the servant returned, and presenting a dish, exclaimed aloud, "Here dey is, massa, smashed, of course!" An instantaneous rout was the result.

Campbell the poet, when on a journey in Scotland, one day met a boy in a postman's dress, playing marbles by the roadside. "You little rascal," said Campbell, "are you the postboy and thus playing away your time?" "Na, sir," answered the boy, "I'm not the post—I'm only an express."

"Friend, it is very wrong to swear as you do—why do you do it?" "Because," replied the prisoner, "I've understood that a man may swear out of jail in thirty days, and I want to see if it can't be done in fifteen. I am going to sit up all night and do my worst."

An old man dying, was asked if he would have a clergyman. He requested to see Rev. Dr. —, who was called. The rich man said, "I have sent to request you to keep those cats in your yard quiet to night."

The New Season's Teas.

No. 198 Washington Street, Boston.

WE have just received from China, per ships T. W. Sears, Chicora, and Samuel Russell, our fresh supplies of BLACK TEAS, which include Ningyong, super, extra fine, Ningyong, super, extra fine, Oolong, super, extra fine, Oolong, super, extra fine, Orange Pekoe, super, extra fine, Souchong and Congo.

These Teas will sell at 1 cent per pound profit to the trade, for cash, in lots and quantities to suit the most extensive demands. The exports from China will show a considerable falling off as compared with the exports of former years; and the new Teas coming, as they do upon a bare market, tend to keep up the prices for every description of Fancy Teas—yet we are of opinion that the prices ruling now will not be maintained, for the following reason: the stock of Souchong and Congo in this country, to a certain extent, will check the prices of Ningyong to a certain extent, while the impending arrival of ships from Canton will act as a caution to holders who are getting more than remunerating rates.

Important to All—The present retail price at 198 Washington Street, the principal Warehouse, and Branch Store, 75 Hanover Street, for strong substantial Black Teas, is 25 cents the pound, of the true old fashioned sort. It is seven cents less than it was one year ago. From the information above given, weighing, and the superior style, and perfectly perfect of our Ningyong and Oolong Teas without increasing the prices, and should any favorable turn take place in the market, all may rest assured that we shall be the first to give, and thereby show to the country the full benefit of it, and thereby show to the country the best of the highest class Teas are sold at the lowest rates by the China Tea Company, 198 Washington Street, and 75 Hanover Street.

President and Treasurer—JAMES CLARK.

Secretary—SAMUEL H. JENKS.

Consulting Physicians—D. Humphrey Sizer, M. D., 14 Winter St.; Augustus A. Gould, M. D., 15 West St.

Superintendent of Agencies—Simon P. Taylor.

THIS Institution insures both males and females against disease or accident, according to the rates specified in their tables. The former, by depositing a given sum yearly, may insure a return of four-fifths of that deposit, for each and every week within that year, during which he may be so disabled by illness as to be prevented from pursuing his usual occupation,—such allowance not to exceed four hundred dollars in any one year. Females, insured against all maladies common to both sexes, are entitled to return allowances equal to three-fourths of their year's premium for every week's sickness. Thus, an individual of $5 a year by the former, or of $5.33 by the latter, will, if deprived of health, secure to the party insured, a repayment of $4 per week.

An advance payment of not less than one dollar will be required of each applicant at the time of making the proposal; which sum, in case of rejection, will be refunded, or allowed in case of acceptance. The applicant is thereby insured, if the proposal be approved, for the term of thirty days, and no longer, unless the policy be taken, and the balance of premium paid within that time.

Persons insured by this Company become members thereof, so far as to entitle them to a proportion of all dividends of its annual profits, in the ratio of their respective premiums, and according to the duration of their policies.

The renewal of any policy may be secured, on notice given to the Secretary within three months of its expiration, and on furnishing proof of sound health at the date of such notice.

For rates of insurance and other information, apply to the Agents in this town.

Encourage your Own.

To the People of Quincy—

THE following is a well known motto, and strictly true!

"That Country or Town that gives the most liberal encouragement to its own manufactures of every kind is well known to thrive, and increase in wealth and Population."

There are a few interesting facts, of which we wish to remind you, and which we are inclined to think have slipped from the memory of some, and which it will be for your advantage as well as ours to remember.

1st. That at the QUINCY BOOKSTORE you will find all the

in use in this and the neighboring towns.

2d. That at the same place you will find every kind of

Blank Account Book,

RECORD or MEMORANDUM BOOK.

3d. That there you will find a great assortment of

Miscellaneous, Juvenile and Toy Books.

4th. That there you will find all kinds of

STATIONERY.

5th. That there you will find an innumerable variety of

FANCY GOODS.

6th. That all the above will be sold at the very

Lowest Market Prices.

7th. That we are entirely disinterested when we say that you can get much better service with your money, if you buy at home, in preference to "out of town."

8th. That there you will find a GOOD LIBRARY where you can procure reading on reasonable terms.

9th. That the Proprietors are agents for all the popular MAGAZINES, receiving the subscriptions themselves and furnishing the numbers on their own travelling agent, to one in their own town.

10th. That they RE-BIND old Books, Pamphlets, Periodicals, Music, etc., as cheap as they can afford to and as quick as anybody.

These things we wish to call to your memory, because while we are moving on in a quiet kind of a way, you seem partly to have forgotten the old place, thinking perhaps that we did not keep up with the times in the variety of our goods and also in prices.

Our rule, like that of many others, is, "quick sales and small profits," therefore call in and we will supply you most satisfactorily.

MISCELLANY.

THE LAWYER'S BRIDE.

"Jane Sullivan is really going to be married," said Hannah Piersol, entering my room one bright morning.

"Ah! when is the important event going to take place and who is to be the bridegroom? it is all news to me."

"Why as to the time we are not certified, but John Fulsom is the husband elect."

"Indeed, why I thought Emma Green was his affianced wife; I hope our young lawyer is not a coquette's gentleman."

"Emma dismissed him," she thought his habits were not good, and that a man who would not try aside his cups and pipes to please a young lady, would not be very likely to do it to gratify a wife; she requested him to discontinue his visits."

"Wisely done, to; but is Lawyer Fulsom temperate? He is generally esteemed a smart man, and more than ordinarily enterprising."

"Yes, he is so, but I suppose he sometimes does dip into the forbidden cup too deeply for his own good, and he smokes his cigar incessantly."

"That is disagreeable enough, certainly, but not so deleterious as the other habit; strange that in the present age of reform a young man of any intelligence should fall into such excesses; it speaks but poorly of his enterprise."

"I think Jane ought to understand that he is addicted to these things, for it will be too bad for her to marry him; she is so sensitive that it will kill her outright to find her husband in the drunkard's path."

"I hope she will make the discovery before she is married; however, you might casually drop a watch word to place her upon her guard; you are intimate friends."

"I do not like to interfere in such an affair, yet certainly Jane ought to know; if she could only be convinced for herself—let me see, I reckon I know how to fix it; and then she can act as she pleases."

"How now, Hannah? you know Jane is so plain hearted that she would be as liable to ask him the direct question, as any way."

"Not quite—but Jane has, we know, a tincture of romance in her composition; now if you can prevail upon her to enter into my scheme, she will find out his besetting sin by her own observation without any actual assistance."

"What mad project have you in view now?"

"Be patient, Kate, and you shall find out; I am afraid you could not keep the secret, and by getting all would be lost," so saying the frolicsome girl ran out of the parlor, and in a few minutes I saw her enter Mrs. Sullivan's residence, who, with her only daughter, had, a few months previous, come into our village, intending to make it a permanent residence.

Mrs. Sullivan was a widow, and of her numerous family one alone was spared to be a solace and comfort to her declining years. Reared in affluence, her every wish a law, it might have been expected that she would have been self-willed; but, upon the contrary it was often remarked by her acquaintances, that none of the gay group of which she was the centre was more mild or amiable than Miss Jane; and all valued the acquisition to our merry circle because of her abilities, but she had that love of romance which would often carry her into a frolic, from which she would otherwise instinctively shrink. Hannah Piersol was an exceedingly lively girl, of great energy, and full of confidence in her own powers; she knew that she possessed the ability to do whatever she chose and was therefore, by this spirit, often led into scenes of life from which young ladies are usually excluded.

Upon the evening of the same day which she had projected her scheme she again entered our parlor, and, after a few commonplace remarks, casually inquired of a gentleman present, when the court sat at Clifton?

"Next week, Thursday," was the reply.

"Is it expected Lawyer Fulsom will be there?"

"Yes, he is certainly intending to be there. He is engaged as counsel in a number of cases, and if he should happen to be himself he will do well undoubtedly. I fear, however, that he will not resist the temptations by which he will be surrounded. He is, I am fearful, fast descending in the broad road to ruin."

Hannah took her leave; I could form no conception of the plan she was forming, but was satisfied it had some connection with Clifton and the County Court.

Next Tuesday morning the stage coach drove up to Mrs. Sullivan's door, and two respectably dressed aged women entered the inside, while their baggage was deposited upon the coach; supposing them to be some company of the family, I thought no more of the circumstance till I understood, by some passing friends, that neither Hannah Piersol or Jane Sullivan could be found; they had gone on an excursion somewhere—no one knew whither.

The thought flashed upon my mind in a moment that they had gone to Clifton. I could hardly restrain my impatience to learn the result. Five days passed, when the wheels of the stage again rattled up the street, and again stopped before the mansion of the widow.

The same old ladies alighted, one of them hobbled upon her cane towards the house, while the other adjusted her spectacles to pay her fare and give directions concerning her trunks and boxes. Truly these venerable matrons could not be the girls—in a few moments the merry laugh of Hannah came ringing forth from the open windows, and impatient to learn the result of the expedition, I donned my bonnet and shawl and rushed over to hear the report. When I entered the parlor two old ladies rose to greet me, attired in rather coarse but tidy apparel, with their neat muslin caps tied under their chins by a broad black ribbon, which passed over the crown, while their iron rimmed spectacles were confined upon the outside by a bit of white paper: their old fashioned calico gowns were somewhat faded but perfectly neat.

"The Misses Jones," said Mrs. Sullivan, and I returned their "how d'ye dos," with all due courtesy, and taking the proffered seat, began to inquire concerning their journey, when from the tips of one of the spinsters proceeded the merry laugh of Hannah Piersol, while Jane Sullivan's voice proclaimed at once who the Misses Jones were.

"Ah Kate, you may well be deceived," said Jane, "for no one has known us since we left home, and you know that a great many of our villagers went over to Court at the same time we started, both by stage and private conveyances."

"And you have really been to Clifton? why girls?"

"Really and truly," said Hannah, "but come, we must change our dress or the secret will get out. Kate, you must give us the right hand of fellowship, and not for the life of you say a word about the Misses Jones, and when we come down we'll tell you the whole story, but no questions now—come Jane."

When the girls were gone, Mrs. Sullivan and I had a merry laugh.

"Those are sad girls, Kate, but they are so full of frolic that they must have some fun; I was terribly afraid they would be found out; but did they not make capital old ladies. How well Jane limped off and complained of the rheumatics. Hannah can do anything she tries; but I do want to hear their story."

"Now for the adventures of the old maids."

"Well, mother, but Hannah must be, the narrator for she did all the talking; I could not say a word; all I did was to take snuff and have the rheumatism."

"Well, Mrs. Sullivan, to begin then, we understood, you know, that Mr. Fulsom was not to go till Thursday morning; we supposed therefore, if we started on Wednesday we should have plenty of time to get there and locate ourselves nicely before he should arrive but judge of our consternation when we found ourselves exactly opposite to him in the coach. I certainly expected we should be detected, but the dust hurt poor Jane's eyes so that she was obliged to pull her thick veil over her face, and I thought likely she went to sleep, for she did not speak but once till we arrived at Clifton, but left me to do all the talking, and I never knew Fulsom to be more sociable. He inquired very particularly concerning the whys and wherefores of our visit to Mrs. Sullivan's and then began to refer to Miss Jane. He thought her a very fine young lady; I said she was a very clever girl—he esteemed her for being amiable and intelligent; her I liked because she was good natured—he wondered if she was going to be married; I guessed not—next did she receive many calls from young gentlemen? I said as how I did not see any fellows there, but heard them tell of a Mr. Fulsom, a young lawyer, that called quite often, and I reckoned that Jane liked him well enough, and I guessed likely he loved her too, but the game was up with him now. Why so, said he—why, says I, one morning there came in a rattle-headed girl that they called Hannah, and she told Jane a long story about John Fulsom being temperate, and how he smoked, and that that was the reason the Green girl turned him off, and that sometimes he got so bad that he could not attend to his business, and folks were afraid he would disgrace himself if he went over to the County Court.

"What did Jane say to it," he inquired, and his face was as deep a crimson as the brightest velvet rose. "Why, she looked dreadful sober, said I, and she was very sorry, for Mr. Fulsom was a fine young man, but he must give up all thoughts of marrying her, for she would never marry a man that used intoxicating drinks, and as to tobacco that was next to it, and she almost cried when she said she should never marry Lawyer Fulsom, and then Hannah told her perhaps he would leave off in time, and she said if he did not respect himself enough to become a sober man, she would not flatter herself that a wife would ever induce him to do it, and a great deal more she said about him, but I guess it was something of a cross to give him up; but she will the very next time he calls to see her. Well after I told him all this he looked mighty sober, and did not seem to want to talk any more, and when we drove up to the hotel where we changed horses he did not go into the bar-room, but staid upon the veranda, and when he met an acquaintance that invited him to go and take a glass of wine, he refused promptly."

"What is the matter, John," said he, "I never knew you to refuse to take a glass before?"

"I am almost a temperance man," said Fulsom.

"Ah, what has turned your mind so suddenly? I should think it was high time to commence a reform when one young lady has turned you off because you are dissipated, and another is only wanting a chance to serve you in the same style?" You see now, Mrs. Sullivan, that our concerted plan for employing him as counsel would not bear at all; and as there would be no use to remain at Clifton we went on to the springs, and stopped over one stage and then returned home quite safe."

"Yes, dear mother, and a delightful time we have had of it too, I enjoyed it to perfection, it was so romantic."

"Well done, girls, what wild expedition will you start next; I trembled for you."

"But, mother, if you could only have heard Hannah's voice tremble, and seen her take snuff, whilst acting out Miss Delby Jones, you would have laughed outright; I am certain I had to try hard to keep grave and sedate."

"Poor Fulsom," said Hannah, "I fear I have fixed his lasting vengeance upon me, for meddling in his matrimonial speculations; but I am used to the storm, and guess it will soon blow over, but surely—there he is—coming up the walk; now, girls—Jane, act as ever and don't in the name of mercy, say a word about going away. If he knew the old ladies have come back, why, they are tired, and have lain down to rest, and he will of course excuse them."

Mrs. Sullivan, how is your health? said the young gentleman as he entered the elegant parlor, "good afternoon Miss Piersol, Miss Jane; how are you Kate?"

"When did you return from Clifton?" said Jane.

"This morning; we did not have as many cases upon the docket as usual, and I left as soon as my business would permit of my absence."

"You are more prompt in your return than usual," remarked Hannah, "perhaps there was some magical attraction which drew you."

"May be so, or perhaps I have learned to place a higher estimate upon my time."

"I believe young lawyers assume it their rightful privilege to have a glee when the duties of court are fairly past."

"Truly, Miss Piersol, that is the custom; yes, and it has heretofore been my custom, but I trust I have chosen a wiser course now. When I view the past few years of my practice, I wonder at the infatuation which could have led me so long to indulge in those pernicious habits, which had well nigh proved my utter destruction."

"What day did you go to Clifton?" inquired Mrs. Sullivan.

"Tuesday last; and I had the company of your relatives, the Misses Jones, throughout my ride; I shall owe them my lasting gratitude in arresting my attention, in thus causing me to look back upon the course I have pursued in times past. Miss Jane may I solicit your company for a few moments?"

Months rolled on, when one morning, a card was handed to me, which upon perusal I found to be an invitation to a wedding at Mrs. Sullivan's.

At the appointed hour of attendance I was ushered into the parlor, which had been recently furnished in a style of most magnificent elegance. A large company was present; soon the bride and bridegroom made their entrance in the persons of the widow's beautiful daughter and our village lawyer, the ceremony was performed and the congratulations of the warm-hearted guests were heaped upon the lovely bride and her noble looking husband.

"How I wish your cousins, the Misses Jones were here to witness the ceremony, and my happiness, as the result of their conversation in the stage coach," said Fulsom, as he drew his sweet wife to a seat beside him upon the sofa.

"They are here, but were fearful you might construe their remarks harshly, and upon that account declined coming down; if you wish, Hannah and I will summon them."

"Certainly, do so, dearest, I really wish, to see them and tender them my heartfelt thanks for their inestimable benefit, which was of no less value because I was unknown to them; I shall rejoice to acknowledge the favor."

Hannah and Jane retired to assist the infirm old ladies in their descent from the chamber to the dining room; and in a few moments, we heard the clatter of the rheumatic's cane upon the stairs, and the treble, palsied voice of the other sister announced their approach.

Fulsom advanced to the door to greet them and almost confounded them by his thanks and protestations of eternal gratitude for their services in snatching him as a brand from the burning. The poor old ladies were sadly embarrassed, and hardly knew what to say, but were really glad if they had done any good. Just then Mrs. Sullivan entered the room, exclaiming, "where are Jane and Hannah?"

"Here—here," ejaculated the Misses Jones, springing to their feet and casting from them cane, snuff box and spectacles, to the perfect amazement of the bridegroom, who could hardly comprehend the sudden transformation of his fair young wife from the person of an infirm old lady.

"My guardian angel," said he, folding his loved June to his heart "what do I not owe to you?"

"Not anything, dearest, it was all Hannah; she planned it, and I did nothing but what she told me."

"My sister spirit," said he, kissing the forehead of Miss Piersol, "be to me still a directing, guiding friend."

Mr. and Mrs. Fulsom are still alive, and never has Jane found occasion to regret her frolicsome ride to Clifton in the stage coach.

Hannah still remains their warmest, truest friend, and many and happy are the hours which she passes under their roof. Jane still retains enough romance in her nature to print all life's varied scenes with rosy hues, and although she has been called upon to drink deeply of the dark waters of affliction, by following her mother and several little ones of her own to their last sleep in the quiet church yard, yet she looks forward to future life with calmness and hope; and her husband, kind, respected and prosperous, has never given her cause to regret the solemn vow which bound her as the Lawyer's Bride.

ACTIVITY. "Don't be discouraged if you are unfortunate, and are lying flat on your back. Rise—stand erect, and persevere in something else. Fall again, if you can't do better, but never yield to despondency. As fast as you fall, spring to your feet again and there will always be hope. Lie still—lament that you are in the ditch, and you but cause rejoicing among your enemies, and no one will render assistance. Dig out—work hard—persevere, with a determination to earn a comfortable living, and you shall have it. Scores will fly to your assistance, who would help to cover you with reproaches, when writhing and lamenting over your misfortunes. The whole secret of success in life is—activity. To action—to action—and you will never see the day that you will need assistance, which will not be rendered in some shape or other. Activity is the life of man; it makes him for this world, to say nothing of the world to come."

MARRIAGES IN RHODE ISLAND. Many people can recollect the time when Providence was the Greta Green of Massachusetts, marriages being then extemporized without previous publication. Afterwards a law was made requiring three publications, which put a stop to trips across the border. The present legislature have amended the law in such a manner as promises to bring the impatient lovers back again to Rhode Island. Only one publication is now necessary—this must be performed in some public religious meeting. As there are religious meetings every evening in Providence the matter is restored to its old footing. A couple can run across the line, publish the banns, be married, and back again in ten minutes. Girls do you hear that?—Boston Courier.

"EMPLOY YOUR PEN." This council though less frequently given than others, is nevertheless far from being superfluous. There is a marvellous power in writing down what we know. It fixes the thoughts; reveals our ignorance; aids our memory; and insures command of language. "Men acquire more knowledge," says Bishop Jewel, "by a frequent exercising of their pens, than by the reading of many books."

How often do we see persons, advanced to great wealth, and even in the legislature or in Congress, who, from neglect of composition, in their younger days, are absolutely unable to pen a decent letter. The practice of writing a few sentences every day would prevent such a source of mortification.

DORCHESTER SCHOOLS.—NO. 1.

The last annual public exhibition or visitation, of the Schools of Dorchester, which took place on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Feb. 26, 27, and 28, 1849, was particularly interesting and satisfactory. On Monday, the several Schools embraced in District No. 6, were visited by the whole board of School Committee. These schools were—Primary, Misses Stetson and Tucker; Intermediate, Miss Mary L. French; Grammar, Mr. Isaac Swan and Miss Mary J. Greenwood. A large number of the parents and friends of the scholars, and others interested attended. The exercises of the various classes of these Schools, on this occasion, clearly indicated thorough instruction, healthy discipline, good taste in the arrangement, and judicious classification. And another pleasing indication was the crowd of parents and friends who thus evinced their active interest for the present and future well being of their loved ones. These Schools are an honor to the town. I know it will not be considered invidious, if the Grammar School is more particularly mentioned. Mr. Swan, the Principal, took charge of the destinies of this School some eight years ago, under very discouraging circumstances. The School was very low and apparently friendless, for it was a common remark "it is the Mills School—it is a poor School and can never be otherwise." But glorious change from worst to best! This School has been constantly advancing and improving under the skillful management and devoted labors of Mr. Swan and his highly efficient and accomplished assistant—Miss Greenwood—until, it is believed, by those competent to judge, that but few equal, and much fewer excel it in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. In one branch of study, there cannot, it is thought, be any doubt that this School, if the average ages of the children are taken into the comparison, is occupying as high standing as any Common School, not only in the Commonwealth, but in New England. Arithmetic is the branch to which allusion is made. The several classes have acquired a readiness, quickness and correctness in solving questions proposed to them, and in answering questions in relation to the rules and principles of Arithmetic, and also of the various tables, which is truly astonishing. In this School are taught all the usual Common School branches, such as reading, spelling, writing, geography, grammar, history, arithmetic, etc.; also, Algebra, Physiology, Drawing, Latin, French, Composition, Music, etc. In each and all of these, this School holds a high rank. It is admitted by all, it is believed, who are acquainted with the School, that Mr. Swan's success has been complete. But notwithstanding Mr. Swan's acknowledged abilities and skill, he never could, unaided, have produced the change visible in this School. No, never! But he has had, as every teacher should have, the confidence and the entire cooperation of the parents and guardians of his scholars. He has been encouraged, aided and cheered in the performance of his responsible and important duties by those for whom he labors; and fortunately for him and his School the Local Committee, Dr. John P. Spooner, has, by his constant and untiring labors,—by his zealous efforts in behalf of the School, conducted very greatly to its present high standing.

The scholars, appreciating in some degree, the aid bestowed by the Doctor, at the close of the exhibition, presented him as a token of their esteem, with a large, splendidly bound and lettered volume of Webster's Dictionary, accompanied with a neat address, neatly delivered by a member of the School, Miss Hannah Preston, as follows:

"DR. SPOONER.—We, members of this School, desirous of expressing our acknowledgement of your interest and active zeal in our behalf, beg you to accept this volume, as a token of our gratitude for your services in aid of our advancement in useful knowledge."

We thank you for your daily visits, for your encouraging looks and words; for your unvarying kindness, and for your exertions for our best good and highest improvement. Together with our teachers we feel that we are under great obligations to you for the good you have done us. It is our sincere desire that we may prove ourselves worthy of your continued interest, and by our future conduct show that you have not labored for us in vain.

Permit us to add our best and most respectful wishes for your future happiness."

The Doctor was apparently taken by surprise, but, however, he responded in a very feeling, eloquent and appropriate address. Fearing that the language, and much less the emotions of the Doctor will not be correctly given no attempt will be made to report it. This School is a living practical example of what any School in the town and State may be if three things are observed. First, be sure to select a teacher of the right sort,—one who is amply qualified for the momentous trust,—whose mind, soul and body are devoted to the single object of teaching,—of training those under his or her care for usefulness and happiness. Second, let there be care, on the part of towns and districts, to appoint men for Committees who are as much interested, as fully devoted and as zealous as a teacher can be; and third, let every parent, guardian and scholar sympathize, aid, labor and cooperate with the teacher and Committee in the great and glorious work in which they are mutually engaged.

Let these things be practically observed in

A PUGNACIOUS AFFAIR.

Mrs. Ellen Lynch, wife of Michael Lynch of Quincy, was arrested and brought before Nathaniel F. Safford, E. q., at Neponset village, on the complaint of Mary Sullivan, wife of John Sullivan. The complaint set forth that the said Ellen Lynch did, on the morning of March 19th, 1849, "then and there, with force and arms, beat, bruise and otherwise wound the said John Sullivan," etc. It appeared, on examination, that the said Lynch and wife and the said Sullivan and wife occupied neighboring "Shanties," owned by the Old Colony Railroad Corporation; and that an "oven" was built about semi-distant from each for the accommodation of each family; and that they took turns in using the aforesaid oven. On the morning aforesaid, the said Lynch was, by the instigation of his "better half" in order to get possession of said oven, before the said Sullivan. But lo and behold, the oven was occupied with the wood of the said Sullivan. It was at once decided by the said Lynch, that he would not be disappointed and thereby lose his "hot loaf" for dinner, and he immediately commenced the operation of freeing the oven of his neighbor's fuel in order to heat up on his own account. But the said John getting wind of what was going, out of bed and at once commenced a sort of push, punch, and haul operation, and the case was somewhat doubtful until the said Ellen was aroused from her deep slumbers, when, having on naught but her night habiliments, with "petticoat" in one hand and a good hard wood "club" in the other, she rushed to the aid of her dearly loved Michael, and without waiting to reason or expostulate, commenced the operation of laying on with well aimed blows; and every blow made the claret fly until the said John was completely drenched in his own blood. The case being clear, that a very aggravated and dangerous assault had been made as aforesaid, his Honor made him and her, the said Michael and Ellen Lynch, weep most bitterly to the tune of ten dollars fine and the costs of court,—in all, amounting to twenty one dollars and fifty cents.

REPORTS.

The amount of duties paid at the Boston Custom House upon rum, brandy and gin, for 1848, was $161,912. The rate of duty upon liquors is one hundred per cent.

Charles P. Hoffman, a writer, well known to the literary world, as we learn from the New York Sun, has become insane, and is now an inmate of an Asylum.

The distinguished astronomer and philosophical writer Dr. Thomas Dick, of Scotland, is expecting to pay a visit to the United States during the ensuing summer, if the state of his health will permit of the journey.

The three most difficult things are, to keep a secret, to forget an injury, and to make good use of one's leisure.

The new Mormon Temple at Salt Lake, California is to be six hundred feet high, so as to be visible at a distance of eighty miles. The Mormon cities, four in number, are enclosed by a wall, and their extent is seventeen miles in length by twelve in breadth. There has been a mountain of pure rock salt found near the settlement, and a rich gold mine has been discovered, one hundred and fifty miles south-west of Salt Lake.

Massachusetts contains remnants of ten tribes of Indians: The Clappaquiddie, Christianatun, Gay Head, Fall River or Troy, Mauseppee, Herring Pond, Gratton or Hassamamisco, Dudley, Punkapo, and Yarmouth. (The Natick tribe is practically extinct.) The whole number of Indians, and people of color, connected with these tribes, is eight hundred and forty seven. Of these however, only six or eight are pure-blooded Indians. All the rest are of mixed blood, principally of Indian and African. They own 19,227 acres of land, but are deprived of the elective franchise.

A man pulled off his coat and gave it to a beggar. In five minutes afterwards, he stepped into a little grog-shop, and found his man trading away the coat for a shirt of red eye and half-a-dozen segars.

The amount of money in the various depositories of the United States on the 26th of February last was $6,568,567.61. Of this amount, $393,113.25 was in the Sub-treasury at Boston, $1,033,790 at New York, and $246,546.35 at Philadelphia.

OBITUARY.

CHARLES CLAPP, A. M.

With feelings of deep sorrow we are called to record the death of Mr. Charles Clapp of this town, who died at sea, off Gibraltar, Feb. 29, aged 33. When the grave has closed over those whom we have loved and respected, and the first emotions of impassioned grief are calmed into tender recollections, the heart finds a melancholy pleasure in recording a tribute, however feeble, to their worth and goodness.

Mr. Clapp was extensively known in this town, and known only to be respected and loved. His strict integrity, his well balanced mind, his suavity of manners, his feeling heart and kind disposition, won for him the esteem of many friends in whose hearts his memory will be cherished as a sacred trust.

At the age of seventeen he entered Amherst College, where he received a thorough education, and graduated in a class of fifty six with the highest honors of the College. He was soon after engaged as Tutor in the same institution, but his health, already impaired by intense application to study, would not permit him to remain. He subsequently received the appointment of Professor in a literary institution at Albany, (N. Y.) in which he remained about two years, when the state of his health obliged him to relinquish that appointment also. Afterwards he travelled in the Western States, and was for some time editor of the "Prairie Beacon," published at Hillsborough, Illinois. He returned from the West in 1837, and has since resided in this town, where his worth as a citizen has been acknowledged and respected.

By education and by natural talent he was prepared for great usefulness, but was called by an inscrutable Providence to see his plans of life interrupted, and his sphere of usefulness circumscribed by the variable state of his health. Sickness had thrown his dusky mantle round him and shaded with gloom the prospects of his early life, yet he bore it with patience and fortitude. To arrest the progress of his disease he embarked on a voyage to the Mediterranean from which he was destined never to return. The feeble state of his health when he left us, in some degree prepared the minds of his friends for the sad intelligence which has now reached us; still, when the news was received, that he should see his face no more, it seemed hard to sunder the ties which had bound him to us. Memory, like a weeping mourner, goes to seek his grave in the lonely depths of the ocean, but hope with prophetic finger points to the shore of a blissful immortality, and tells us he is there.

"We know that the bowers are green and fair,
In the light of that summer shore;
And we know that the friends we have lost are there:
They are there, and they weep no more."

Quincy Hall Clothing Depot,

Near the Episcopal Church,

ON THE BRAINTREE AND WEYMOUTH TURNPIKE.

JOHN DINEGAN,

PROPRIETOR of the above Establishment, would most respectfully announce to the people of Quincy and the neighboring towns, that he has recently received

A FULL SUPPLY OF SPRING GOODS,

Of French, German and American

BROADCLOTHS,

CASSIMERES AND DOESKINS,

Of every New and Desirable Style,

Which he is prepared to sell by the piece or yard, or make up at the SHORTEST POSSIBLE NOTICE, and at such prices as will ensure a return of custom.

VESTINGS.

A large, RICH AND ELEGANT lot of Vestings, of the very latest DESIGNS AND PATTERNS, which will be made to order at UNUSUAL MODERATE PRICES.

A GOOD ASSORTMENT OF FANCY TWEEDS,

Suitable for Men's or Boys' COATS OR SACKS, which will be made up on the most favorable terms.

SATTINETS OF EVERY COLOR,

And at various prices, to suit the wants of the purchaser.

Great inducements to call at the Quincy Hall Clothing Depot.

Dinegan employs none but the very best Workmen to make up his Garments, and the number of hands he employs affords tangible evidence of the popularity of his Establishment. No person in want of Clothing should neglect visiting his NEW AND EXTENSIVE PLACE OF BUSINESS.

READY MADE CLOTHING.

Those in want of the above named article can be suited to any price they would wish to go for Men's

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.
PARTING WORDS.

The following lines, written just previous to his departure, are from the pen of a gentleman who sailed in the bark — for California. Most fervently shall we welcome him back to New England.—Ed. Pat.

Farewell, farewell, New England,
My bark is on the sea,
That bears me from thy rock-bound shores,
My happy home and thee;
My latest words of parting,
In saddest tones I speak,
And if tears be signs of weakness,
Oh, then my heart is weak.

To-morrow, at the day dawn,
With streamers floating free,
Our gallant bark with sails unfurled,
Is ready for the sea.
The world indeed, the wide world,
May see no tear drop start;
It little reck's a careless air
May hide an aching heart.

Oh, wherefore should I strive then,
My sadness to conceal;
The heart that aye is manliest,
Is quickest too to feel.
Far from the home I love best,
O'er the watery waste I roam,
A home though humble, lowly,
Yet still it is my home.

When the golden cross is gleaming
Bright in the Southern sky,
And our bark so free and gallant,
Through the dashing waves shall fly,
When thy blazing clouds, Magellan,
Float lightly o'er the sea;
My heart, my heart, New England,
Shall wander back to thee.

I dare the ocean peril,
In climes afar to roam—
Free leave the soft endearments
That are clustered round my home;
Though years may come and pass too,
While I traverse deserts wild,
Oh, God! unto thy keeping,
I entrust my wife and child.

Though I meet with stranger faces,
Hear stranger voices blend,
When they praise thy name, New England,
That stranger is my friend—
A common ground we meet on,
And a common thought is ours,
As gentle and refreshing,
As the dew drop to the flowers.

New England, oh! New England,
And I leave thee with a sigh,
Where the kindling fires of freedom,
First blazed along the sky—
While amid the mountain passes,
I shall delve for shining gold,
My heart for aye untravelling,
Shall return to scenes of old.

To the scene of youthful sorrow
And the scene of youthful joy
Which seemeth to the wanderer,
Like gold without alloy.
Through the dark and dreary distance,
I shall gaze along the main,
And thank my God, New England,
When I tread thy soil again.

Quincy, Feb. 9th, 1849.

GENTLE WORDS—LOVING SMILES.
The sun may warm the grass to life,
The dew the drooping flower,
And eyes grow bright and watch the light
Of Autumn's opening hour—
But the words that breathe of tenderness,
And smiles we know are true,
Are warmer than the summer time,
And brighter than the dew.

It is not much the world can give,
With all its subtle art,
And gold and gems are not the things
To satisfy the heart;
But oh, if those who cluster round
The altar and the hearth,
Have gentle words and loving smiles,
How beautiful is earth.

ANECDOTES.

A country clergyman being opposed to the use of the violin in the church service, was, however, overruled by his congregation, who determined upon having one. On the following Sunday, the parson commenced the service by exclaiming in long drawn accents, "You may find it and sing the fortieth Psalm."

In a town 'down east,' a certain M. D., who was averse to being disturbed after he had yielded to the 'drowsy god,' one very cold night last winter, was aroused from his slumbers by a loud knocking at his door. After some hesitation he yelled—"Who's there?"
"Friend," was the answer.
"What do you want?" was the next inquiry.
"Want to stay here all night."
"Stay there then, and be hanged!" was the benevolent reply.

"Well, John, I'm going East; what shall I tell your folks?"
"O, nothing—only if they say any anything about whiskers, just tell 'em I've got some."

"Now, Patrick," said the Recorder to a modest son of Erin, the other day, "what do you say to the charge, are you guilty or not guilty?"
"Faith, but that's difficult for yer honor to ax me—self. Wait till I hear the evidence."

A volatile young man, whose conquests in the female world were numberless, at last married. "Now my dear," said his spouse, "I hope you'll mend." "Madam, depend upon it, this is my last folly."

WORMS! WORMS!!

ARE safely, speedily and most effectually expelled from the system by the use of
WHITWELLS PINK ROOT SYRUP.
Spigelia, or Indian Pink.
has been in use for hundreds of years among the Indian tribes of North America, as a certain remedy for Worms.
Almost every family in N. E., is acquainted with its use. The great and only objection heretofore to its use, has been that it was necessary to pour half a pint down a child's throat in order to destroy and expell the worms; but that objection exists no longer. In the PINK ROOT SYRUP, you have the strongest possible preparation of the Pink root, united with Castor-oil and Syrup, which children will take without any trouble. Indeed, they like it much, and will never refuse to take it. The dose of this agreeable medicine for an infant is only
Half a Teaspoon Full.

Full and ample directions accompany its use. The public are respectfully requested to give it a trial, and they will never use any other remedy.

THE REMARKABLE
FEJE MERMAID
WHICH was exhibited in most of the principal cities of America in the years of 1840, '41 and '42, to the wonder and astonishment of thousands of Naturalists and other scientific persons, whose doubts of the existence of such an astonishing creature were entirely removed, has been purchased at immense cost and added to the mammoth collection of the BOSTON MUSEUM.

Studied on Tremont Street, near Court Street, Boston which comprises specimens of all that can instruct or amuse of the Wonders of Nature and Art, collected from all quarters of the Globe, to the number of nearly HALF A MILLION ARTICLES
all of which, in addition to the splendid Theatrical Performances,
OF TRAGEDIES, COMEDIES, DRAMAS, OPERAS, SPECTACLES, BURLETTAS, FARCES, &c.
Given every evening and Wednesday and Saturday afternoon by performers of acknowledged talent, and with Orchestral, Scenic and Stage arrangements that CANNOT BE SURPASSED, are to be seen for the unprecedented small charge of only 25 cts.

The New Season's Teas.
No. 198 Washington Street, Boston.

WE have just received from China, per ships T. W. Sears, Chiron, and Samuel Russell, our fresh supplies of BLACK TEAS, which include Ningyong, super,
Ningyong, extra fine,
Oolong, superior,
Oolong, extra fine,
Orange-Pekoe, extra,
Souchong and Congo.

These Teas we shall sell at 1 cent per pound profit to the trade, for cash, in lots and quantities to suit the most extensive demands. The exports from China will show a considerable falling off as compared with the exports of former years; and the new Teas coming, as they do upon a bare market, and to keep up the prices for every description of Fancy Teas—yet we are of opinion that the prices ruling now will not be maintained, for the following reason: the stock of Souchong and Congo in this country, is large, and will check the prices of Ningyong to a certain extent, while the impending arrival of ships from Canton will act as a caution to holders who are getting more than remunerating rates.
Important to All—The present retail price at 198 Washington Street, the principal Warehouse, and Branch Store, 78 Hanover Street, for strong substantial Black Teas, is 25 cents the pound, of the true old fashioned sort. It is seven cents less than it was one year ago. From the information above given, we infer that we shall be enabled to keep up the qualities of our Ningyong and Oolong Teas without increasing the prices, and should any favorable turn take place in the market, all may rest assured that we shall be the first, as we have ever been, to afford them the full benefit of it, and thereby show to the country that the very best class Teas are sold at the lowest rates by the China Tea Company, 198 Washington Street, and 78 Hanover Street.

Encourage your Own.

To the People of Quincy—

THE following is a well known motto, and strictly true:

"That County or Town that gives the most liberal encouragement to its own manufactures of every kind is well known to thrive, and increase in wealth and population."

There are a few interesting facts, of which we wish to remind you, and which we are inclined to think have slipped from the memory of some, and which it will be for your advantage as well as ours to remember.

1st. That at the QUINCY BOOKSTORE you will find all the

SCHOOL BOOKS

in use in this and the neighboring towns

2d. That at the same place you will find every kind of

Blank Account Book,

RECORD or MEMORANDUM BOOK.

3d. That there you will find a great assortment of

Miscellaneous, Juvenile and Toy Books.

4th. That there you will find all kinds of

STATIONERY.

5th. That there you will find an innumerable variety of

FANCY GOODS.

6th. That all the above will be sold at the very

Lowest Market Prices.

7th. That we are entirely disinterested when we say that you will be much better satisfied with yourselves and your bargains if you trade at home, in preference to "out of town."

8th. That there you will find a GOOD LIBRARY where you can procure reading on reasonable terms.

9th. That the Proprietors are agents for all the popular MAGAZINES, receiving the subscriptions themselves and furnishing the numbers on their own responsibility, free of any expense. Many have forgotten this of late, preferring to subscribe of some travelling agent, to one in their own town.

10th. That they RE-BIND old Books, Pamphlets, Periodicals, Music, etc., as cheap as they can afford to do so quickly as anybody.

These things we wish to call to your memory, because while we have been moving on in a quiet kind of a way, you seem partly to have forgotten the old place, thinking perhaps that we did not keep up with the times in the variety of our goods and also in prices. Our rule, like that of many others, is, "quick sales and small profits," therefore call in and we will supply you most satisfactorily.
